Behind Closed Doors

Four uniformed Coast Guardsmen late yesterday were called in to the locked and guarded chambers of the Department of Justice, where eight German spies are on trial for their lives before a secret military commission.

The Guardsmen were summoned—it was surmised—to tell how four of the Nazis crept off a submarine at Amagansett, Long Island, the night of June 13. Like the four others on trial with them, the prisoners once worked in America, went back to the Reich to learn sabotage in a Nazi academy and returned to the United States as enemy spies, to blast, burn and kill.

Soon after the eight were caught—to face the gallows or the firing squad—it was indicated that a Coast Guardsman had seen the landing on Long Island, had talked to the invaders, had been offered $270 to keep quiet, but immediately reported to his superiors.

Knew Haupt in Chicago

Mrs. Melind knew the youngest spy, Herbert Haupt, 22, when he was a schoolboy in Chicago. A year ago he slipped into Mexico and made his way to Germany, where he was trained to come back to his adopted country—his parents are naturalized citizens—for espionage and destruction.

It was reported that Haupt looked her up soon after he and three companions left their submarine near Jacksonville, Fla., and proposed marriage, but that Mrs. Melind refused to have anything to do with him.

Mrs. Melind wore a white turban with a white suit and flowered blouse. She was seen only briefly as she was hustled in and out of the Department of Justice by her military escort.

Haupt's parents, Mr. and Mrs. Hans Haupt, Chicago, and Herman Struckmann, Mrs. Melind's father, were understood to be among the 50 witnesses called to testify.

Rigid Secrecy in Force

Beside Haupt, the spies are Ernest Peter Burger, 36; Heinrich Harm Heinck, 35; Robert Quirin, 34; Edward John Kerling, 33; Werner Thiel, 35; Herman Neunauer, 32, and George John Dasch, 39. There were indications that Dasch would not be put to death; separate counsel was named for him.

The president of the Military Commission, Maj. Gen. Frank R. McCoy, kept his policy of rigid secrecy in force all day yesterday. Henry Paynter of the Office of War Information had been assigned to release news of the hearing to the press. However, he was not able to learn anything unless he was sent for by General McCoy. Not having been sent for yesterday forenoon, Paynter returned to the OWI without having gotten or disclosed anything at all. He was not sent for during the day by the Military

Registration Begins Today

Congressmen and Opponents To Get Electioneering Gas

New gasoline rationing regulations announced last night by Price Administrator Leon Henderson place Congressmen, State legislators, "bona fide" candidates for public office and persons who drive voters to and from the polls in a "highly restricted category of preferred users" who may apply for extra supplies of gasoline above amounts available to the general public.

The new plan which will go into effect on July 22 eliminates the much-criticized "X" or unlimited ration card, but instead permits 14 classes of persons to request "C" books for more than 470 occupational driving miles a month, and permits six other groups to obtain "special" allotments of additional gasoline. Taxis, Government automobiles, fleets of automobiles, hearses and ambulances will also receive special treatment.

Registration of eight million motorists in the rationed Eastern seaboard area—17 States and the District—starts at 7 a. m. today for a three-day period. Motorists will go to designated schools to obtain basic "A" coupon books containing 48 coupons worth four gallons each.

This book allows for 1000 miles of "every-day driving" during the coming year and 150 miles a month of occupational driving. A total of 160,000 persons are expected to register at 28 schools in the District.

Those required by occupation to drive more than 150 miles a month up to a miximum of 470 miles may obtain "B" coupon books from their local rationing board by filling out a special application form. They must show that they have formed car-sharing plans wherever possible. However, unless a motorist belongs in one of the "preferred" or "special" categories, he will be unable to obtain more than the combined amount provided by the "A" and "B" books.

Congressmen may apply for "C" books to travel around Washington and in their home districts, "in connection with their functions as legislators," although they may not secure extra gas to travel to and from their homes each day.

Other gas privileges allowed Congressmen include allowances to travel between their home districts and Washington, and "elsewhere in pur-

There's TNT in Your Sink—Slap Japs With Fat Scraps

Mrs. Housewife, there's dynamite in your sink. And because the Government needs every ounce of explosives that is available, its salvage program has gone straight to the kitchen to request that household fats be saved and sold.

Under this heading come pan drippings from roast ham, beef, lamb and poultry; broiler drippings from steaks, chops, veal and bacon; and deep fats, either lard or vegetable shortening from fried potatoes, fish, doughnuts and so forth. All contain glycerine, and glycerine makes explosives.

Neighborhood meat dealers have been authorized by the Government to buy such fats at three cents per pound, and in turn can sell it at four cents to take care of handling and the loss while the fats are transferred from one container to another.

The fats salvage program has been set up by the Bureau of Industrial Conservation, War Production Board, to provide substitutes for the imports of fats and oils from the Far East that have been cut off by the war.

Hence housewives are requested to strain household fats into a wide-mouthed can—a coffee or vegetable shortening can is suggested. The can must be spotlessly clean and must have a cover. It should be kept in a refrigerator or other cool place until it is full.

The salvage committee advises that nothing less than a full container should be taken to the meat dealer.

Horace Walker is executive secretary for the District salvage committee. Members of the advisory committee are Isaac Jacobson, chairman; Charles A. Greenberg, C. H. Ruppert, John R. Meyer, H. Guggenheim, E. L. Gupton, Kirk Miller, V. M. Hauck and C. H. Hoffman.

Value Enhanced, Army Says

Lodge, Up for Reelection, Told By Stimson to Return to Senate

Senator Henry Cabot Lodge, jr. (Republican), of Massachusetts, under fire with American tanks last month in Libya, was directed yesterday to return to his duties in the Senate where "you will be rendering more service to the American people."

Lodge's orders came in a letter from Secretary of War Stimson, who commended him for "fine service" as an Army major and said his North African experience would enhance his value as a Senator.

The letter cleared the way for Lodge to launch his campaign for reelection to the Senate against Representative Joseph E. Casey (Democrat), of Massachusetts, who apparently with Administration backing, recently announced for Lodge's seat.

The Massachusetts Republican had applied for continued service with the Army.

The President only recently had issued a directive that "all members of the House and Senate who are now serving in an active status will be placed on inactive duty July 1, 1942, or immediately on returning to the United States, except those who wish to remain on active duty for the duration of the war."

"I fully appreciate the spirit which has prompted you to request continued service with the Army," Secretary Stimson wrote Lodge, "but after careful consideration of the factors mentioned above (value as a war-experienced legislator), I feel impelled to direct that you be returned to an inactive duty status."

The Stimson letter was viewed by political observers here as a valuable campaign document for Lodge, whose pre-Pearl Harbor voting record against Administration foreign policies are under attack by Representative Casey.

Casey, a liberal and consistent supporter of the President's policies before American entry in the war, was

Robert E. Lee on Loose

Excursion Boat Plows Into U. S. Ship, Then Hits 2 Other Vessels

The excursion steamer Robert E. Lee last night smashed in the side of a small Army transport The Francis Scott Key and then backed into the Coast Guard docks and severely damaged a 45-foot patrol craft and less seriously crippled a second small service craft.

The series of collisions took place around the docks on Maine Avenue between Sixth and Seventh Streets, and, as reconstructed by the Coast Guardsmen and officers aboard the Robert E. Lee, came off in this fashion:

The steamer, leaving on its nightly run down the river, backed out of its pier at 9:40 p. m. as far as midstream, swung around hard and plowed almost into the middle of the Francis Scott Key, which was tied up below the Lee's docks.

The next step, of course, was to pull away from the Key which the Lee did, but with such vigor that the craft, loaded with Negro excursionists, crashed into the neighboring Coast Guard docks, and seriously damaging the bow and superstructure of one patrol craft. A second Coast Guard ship was less seriously damaged.

Its rudder out of commission, the Robert E. Lee drifted out into the river where several river craft, including the District fire boat, took her in tow and finally maneuvered her back to her starting point about 11:40 p. m.

Two Negro women fainted, officers of the Robert E. Lee said, but no one was hurt. The orchestra continued playing and sounds of merriment reached shore even as the stricken craft drifted out into the river. At least two passengers, however, had their fill of dancing. When the ship docked, they were wearing lifebelts.

Capt. A. M. Long, the Lee's skipper, was unable to account for the accidents. The Francis Scott Key was cloaked in darkness, but Capt. Long said he believed it had been seriously damaged.

Nelson Says He Will 'Rule' War Output

WPB Chairman, Not Army, Will Have Final Say in Gearing Economy to Conflict

By Robert De Vore
Post Staff Writer

War Production Board Chairman Donald M. Nelson yesterday declared that he—and not the armed services—will be the final arbiter when it comes to deciding what portion of America's civilian economy is to survive in the business of producing for war.

He made his pronouncement in explaining to a press conference his reorganization—he called it "realignment"—of the War Production Board, the long-awaited move to tie up military strategy with economic strategy.

Nelson was asked if his WPB realignment would give him all the control he needs, a question that obviously referred to his behind-the-scenes struggle with Army and Navy chiefs for WPB domination.

His reply was that the reorganization, alone, does not convey the control, but that his powers of wartime economy czar flow from authority delegated by President Roosevelt.

He Told the Senate

Earlier in the day, it was learned, Nelson was even more emphatic on the question of WPB power when he told a Senate Appropriations Subcommittee, in a closed session, that he would remain the economic commander in chief unless the President forced him to surrender his authority.

As expected the WPB reshuffling unveiled by Nelson frees him entirely of the burden of administrative detail and enables him to concentrate on problems of determining WPB policies in the light not only of United States strategy, but in accordance with the strategic needs of the United Nations.

As set forth in a statement distributed at the press conference, WPB reorganization has for its main purpose creation of an organization equipped to handle the board's new job—the tough task of curtailing civilian production and tooling up plants for war largely has been completed, Nelson said—of controlling and expediting the flow of materials to war factories. From now on this will be the board's "central effort."

Knowlson Materials Chief

In addition to increasing the board's participation in "overall war production strategy," other reorganization accomplishments, it was explained, are to strengthen WPB's progress-reporting organization, to concentrate operations under one administrator and lighten Nelson's burden.

As Nelson explained it to reporters, the reorganization places

Enemy Is Reported Desperately Trying To Escape Pocket South of El Alamein

By Leon Kay
United Press Staff Writer

Cairo (Thursday), July 9.—British desert troops smashing at Field Marshal Erwin Rommel's forces were reported today to have cut off and surrounded a large German armored, artillery and transport force in a pocket several miles square southwest of the southern extremity of the Axis line.

A delayed dispatch from a Royal Air Force base in the desert said the enemy force was making frantic efforts to break out and rejoin the main Axis armies, which have withdrawn farther north.

British mobile columns, however, were declared to be pounding constantly at the trapped force in an effort to force its surrender. The R. A. F. was understood to have played a large part in the reported isolation of the tanks and supply columns from the main Axis armies.

R. A. F. Hard at Work

The dispatch said the R. A. F. yesterday threw into battle the greatest force yet of fighters and fighter-bombers.

In one sortie alone, an entire wing, numbering dozens of fighter-bombers, set huge fires and destroyed or damaged more than 12 aircraft at the main Axis airdrome west of El Alamein.

Other Allied planes, piloted by South Africans, surprised a force of 20 Messerschmitt 109's, shot down at least two of them and sent the rest scurrying for home. The Messerschmitts had been attacking a strong Allied mobile armored column which lashed out to Fuka, nearly 60 miles west of El Alamein, "severely beat up the Hun" and returned safely to its base.

The Germans were reported to have rushed aerial reinforcements to the Egyptian desert, but latest reports showed the Allies still have overwhelming command of the air.

5-to-1 Rate for R. A. F.

Actually, thousands of Allied flights have been in action on a round-the-clock schedule. Knocking out Axis planes at the rate of five-to-one in the six-week battle in Libya and Egypt.

Since the battle began in May far to the west in Libya, Axis forces have lost some 500 planes compared to 110 Allied planes, the aerial box-score showed, and Allied squadrons of Americans, British and Australian fliers are now "considerably stronger" than they were six weeks ago.

Barents Sea Engagement

Sub Severely Damages Tirpitz With 2 Hits, Sinks Transport

By the Associated Press

Moscow (Thursday), July 9.—The powerful new German battleship Admiral Von Tirpitz, now on the loose again from her Norwegian fjord refuge and ranging the United States-British supply route to northern Russia, has been torpedoed twice and seriously damaged by a Russian submarine, a Russian communique announced early today.

The 35,000-ton battleship, pride of the Nazi fleet and sister ship of the Bismarck which the British navy harried to her doom last year, was hit by two torpedoes in the Barents Sea, the official report declared.

The Russians, in the same action in northern waters, sank a German transport and damaged another, the brief communique declared.

Where the Admiral Von Tirpitz could go for repairs was not clear, but it was believed here she had returned to a German port. The date of the attack was not given.

The Tirpitz was attacked in the general area where the Germans claimed on Tuesday and Wednesday that they had sunk 32 vessels and a heavy United States cruiser out of a 38-ship convoy carrying supplies and war material to Russia.

The Tripitz was last spotted at sea last March. British naval planes reported her presence when the German naval command apparently was planning to raid a convoy bound for Russia.

Under attacks from torpedo planes, she was chased to a Norwegian refuge and later located at Trondheim.

The German version of the recent attack on the Russia-bound convoy did not mention surface action but said all shipping losses had been accomplished by bombers and U-boats.

The Tirpitz was reported still at Trondheim as late as May 22 and units of the American Navy joined British patrol forces in the North Sea in June to keep her bottled up at her Fjord base.

The Admiral Von Tirpitz was named for the German imperial admiral who initiated unrestricted

Staryi Oskol is Lost After Heavy Fighting; Counter-Blows Slow Foe Before Voronezh

By Henry C. Cassidy
Associated Press Staff Writer

Moscow (Thursday), July 9. The Russians acknowledged today that the battered city of Staryi Oskol has fallen to the Germans after heavy fighting, but Soviet reports indicated that spirited counterattacks have wiped out the first German crossings of the vital Don River in the Voronezh area, 65 miles east of Staryi Oskol.

Russian tanks, cavalrymen from the Urals and Red infantry appeared to have the situation in hand as the Germans moved nearer Voronezh, on the east bank of the Don and vital as an important link of the Moscow-Rostov rail line.

Russian dispatches said that light enemy units which reached the east bank of the Don River in the Voronezh area had been destroyed and the bridges over which they crossed were torn down.

The tide apparently turned Monday night when the Red Air Force bombed and shattered German pontoon bridges and prevented the enemy from sending reinforcements to the east bank.

"During July 8 our troops fought fierce battles west of Voronezh," the Soviet midnight communique said.

"After stubborn battles our troops evacuated the town of Staryi Oskol. On other fronts there were no essential changes."

Staryi Oskol was an objective of a German drive which developed in full force last weekend as the Germans sought to fight their way to the Don in their Kursk offensive.

Germans Are Vague

The city, the southernmost point of a triangle formed with Kursk and Voronezh, is some 80 miles northeast of Kharkov, scene of heavy fighting this spring.

The Russian counterattacks apparently have pushed aside heavy German forces from the main line of their offensive smash toward the Caucasus.

The violent struggle still raged at the Don, reports indicated, and the bulk of the German forces were reported held on the west bank. Repeated further efforts to cross the stream were said to have been thrown back.

With these landings reported liquidated in several places, there was no confirmation of the German claim that Voronezh, main line rail city lying at the tip of a narrow "V" formed by the Don and Voronezh rivers, had fallen to the attackers.

Cavalry Effective

(The German high command did not repeat its Tuesday claim to the capture of Voronezh. Instead, the German communique on Wednesday said vaguely that the German and allied troops had made a considerable southward expansion of their "penetration" from "the area of Kharkov and Kursk;" that Russian counterattacks northwest of Voronezh failed at the cost of many Russian troops and much booty captured, and that "north and northwest of Orel" continuing Russian attacks were repelled. Orel is 150 miles northwest of Voronezh.)

Despite the success of the counterattacks, Red Star, Russian army newspaper, said frankly that enemy pressure was being stemmed "with

Force Japan's Fleet Into Action, Invade Europe, Says Bourne

By the Associated Press

Charlottesville, Va., July 8.—An over-all strategy of defeating Japan by forcing its main fleet into action and conquering Germany through an eventual invasion of continental Europe was outlined as a promising possibility by Brig. G. K. Bourne of the British Joint Staff Mission in Washington.

The highly-placed staff officer outlined the considerations confronting the United Nations war planners in an address prepared for the University of Virginia's Institute of Public Affairs but carefully refrained, for military reasons, from defining any specific courses of future action which may have been adopted thus far.

Must Have Firm Base

The Japanese fleet, he observed, can always avoid the ultimate battle until Allied bombers are based within operating distances of it.

He said a "permanent invasion" of the European continent had never been attempted and noted that even at the height of his power, after the fall of France, Hitler refrained from the "uncalculated risks" involved in an invasion of the British Isles.

"No military offensive is sound," he said, "unless it is launched from a firm and secure base. People are apt to forget this and to maintain that an offensive must succeed just because it is an offensive and forget the need for covering up our soft spots."

But, Bourne continued, the United Nations "refuse to be ruled by historic precedent and are determined

Sub Hits Fifth Jap Destroyer In Aleutians

Warship Believed Sunk; Low Visibility Continues As U. S. Presses Attack

By John G. Norris
Post Staff Writer

The Navy announced late yesterday that an American submarine had torpedoed another Japanese destroyer in the Aleutian Islands and probably sent it to the bottom.

Renewing their attack on Nipponese naval forces covering the occupation of the westernmost Aleutians, the United States undersea forces struck again near Kiska Island July 5.

Low Visibility Continues

The successful attack brought the toll of enemy destroyers sunk or damaged in the area to five—all within a period of 48 hours. Earlier American bombing planes accounted for 10 other Jap ships.

During the month following the initial Japanese trust at Alaska—the June 3 bombing of Dutch Harbor—United States Army and Navy planes carried the defense of the Aleutians. They repeatedly struck at the enemy invasion forces landing on undefended and remote Attu, Kiska and Agattu Islands—whenever the weather permitted.

More Effective Than Planes

Then on the Fourth of July reinforcements arrived in the fog-bound area, in the form of a squadron of American submarines. They celebrated Independence Day by sending three Jap destroyers to the bottom and badly damaging a fourth.

The following day, last night' communique disclosed, one of the United States "pig boats" chalked up a

3 More Ships Sunk in Atlantic; Latvian Skipper Taken Captive

By the Associated Press

The Navy yesterday announced the sinking of three more merchant vessels, bringing to 347 the unofficial Associated Press tabulation of united and neutral nations' ship losses in the western Atlantic since Pearl Harbor.

Thirty-four survivors of a small Latvian merchant vessel sunk 10 days ago said, on reaching an East Coast port, that their master and an ordinary seaman were taken on board the sub that shelled and sank their vessel.

The Navy announced also the sinking of a medium-sized Dutch cargo vessel in the Caribbean two months ago, and a small Canadian merchant vessel several weeks ago off the northern coast of South America. Thirteen of her crew were killed in the torpedo explosion which broke the ship in two, but eight others reached a Gulf port.

Thirty-seven persons were rescued from the Dutch vessel.

Ten of the crew members, none of whom was an American, were landed at a Gulf port and told how the ship was torpedoed without warning at 10:35 p. m., sinking within ten minutes.

The submarine commander, who talked to the master of the ship, appeared to be German, but several of the crew of the underseas craft were Italian.

15 Army Fliers Die In 3 Plane Crashes

Fifteen Army men were killed in three separate plane crashes, Army officials announced yesterday. A plane crashed near Smithfield, N. C., killing its seven occupants.

Three officers and four enlisted men died when their bomber crashed and burned on the Bonneville Salt Flats in Utah. The copilot of another bomber was killed and seven crew members were injured when a ship crashed in the desert.

Japs, Chinese Fight For Vital Rail Line

Foe Seeks to Link Shanghai, Singapore By Railroad Lines

By the Associated Press

Chungking, July 8.—The fight for China has gone into a new phase with battles swirling around two rail line towns southwest of Nanchang where the Japanese have struck toward Hunan Province in a bid for control of the second link of an overland railway system to join Shanghai and Singapore, the high command disclosed tonight.

A communique said invasion columns which drove to Fengchang and Changshu, 30 and 45 miles southwest of the Kiangsi provincial capital, failed to outflank Chinese positions and were engaged in a battle with heavy casualties for both sides.

A central news dispatch said Japanese spearheads penetrated both towns but had been surrounded.

A clear route, at least across the southeastern third of Hunan Province, would be needed to advance the Japs' plan to ease the load on their coastal shipping by winning a complete north-south railway system.

Already in Japanese hands are rail connections from Korea and Manchukuo through Shanghai to Hangchow. Attacking from Hangchow through Chekiang Province and from Nanchang through eastern Kiangsi Province the Japanese in the last month have won all but a bitterly contested 25-mile segment of the first rail line needed to complete such a system.

The new drive is aimed along a 230-mile second loop extending from Nanchang to a juncture with the Canton rail line south of Changsha in Hunan Province.

The Japanese also have tried pushing north from Canton toward that juncture but have gained little ground. From a branch of the Canton line the invaders would have to build a last link of 300 miles to join with communications through French Indo-China, Thailand and Malaya, to Singapore.

fifth victim. Although "low visibility continues in this area," the Navy said, making observation of results difficult, the communique reported that the fifth destroyer was believed sunk.

Thus submarines are proving an effective weapon against the Japs in the region—more so than planes. The latter cannot operate much of the time in the western Aleutians because of fog and storms.

Army B-26 bombers sent a Nipponese cruiser to the bottom and with Navy patrol planes sank or damaged nine other enemy ships, but were unable to stop the occupation of the westernmost Aleutians.

While submarines cannot uproot the Japs from the seized islands, they can with the aid of planes make the venture an extremely costly one. By striking at the islands and their life-line to Japan they can prevent the Japanese from developing them as air and naval bases for offensive operations against Alaska and United States-Siberian supply routes.

74 Ships Since Pearl Harbor

The action announced yesterday brought to at least 74 the number of Japanese ships sunk or damaged by American submarines. Official communiques have listed 47 enemy ships sunk, 14 probably sunk and 13 as damaged.

The text of the communique follows:

Navy Department Communique No. 96

"North Pacific area—1. On the afternoon of July 5 a United States submarine, operating in the Aleutian Islands, torpedoed and is believed to have sunk a Japanese destroyer in the vicinity of Kiska.

"2. This is the fifth enemy destroyer to have been sunk or damaged by our submarines in this area during the two-day period (July 4 and 5).

"3. Low visibility continues in this area."

Treasury Denies It Recommended Debt Moratorium

Secretary of the Treasury Henry Morgenthau last night denied that the Treasury had ever recommended a debt moratorium as a means of meeting increased tax burdens.

He said the "misconception" arose from a memorandum presented to the House Ways and Means Committee by Treasury Tax Adviser Randolph Paul in which Paul did suggest a debt moratorium but pointed out that the recommendation was not the Treasury's.

"As some misunderstanding seems to have arisen, I should like to make it clear that the Treasury did not recommend such a moratorium," Morgenthau said.

great difficulty."

The Russian counterattacks, however, were reported to have diverted strong German forces from the main direction of their offensive. Whether this was northwest of Voronezh and in the Orel sector—as reported by the Germans—was not disclosed, but a large-scale battle was under way in a new arena.

Forty-five enemy tanks were estimated destroyed on the first day of this phase of the fighting.

Tanks, infantry and cavalry were employed in the counterattacks against German tanks and motorized infantry. Bashkir horsemen from the Urals were reported fighting effectively, attacking both enemy tanks and troops.

The battle of Voronezh was concentrated mainly at two points, on the north side and in the center of the sector.

The Germans tried to force a river crossing in the center, the apex of their salient through the previous Red Army positions. Russian dispatches said they reached the waterline only at a narrow point.

They attacked simultaneously on the north side of the sector, west of the waterline, trying to widen the wedge.

Flying through rain and low-lying clouds, the Red Air Force then hammered the German crossing points and concentrations on the west bank of the river.

In the northern sector, German air formations numbering 30 planes each raided the Red Army positions.

Ingersoll's Draft Board Keeps Editor in 1-A

New York, July 8 (AP).—The classification of Ralph Ingersoll, publisher-editor of the newspaper PM, was continued in 1-A today by his local draft board.

Ingersoll, whose induction in the Army as a private June 24 was delayed to permit reconsideration of his status after Marshall Field, PM's owner, called him indispensable, appeared before the board last night at a rehearing of his case.

Field or Ingersoll may appeal from the local board's decision within 10 days.

In an open letter in PM yesterday, Ingersoll accused the draft board of attempting to draft him because of prejudice against the paper.

He said in an editorial preface that he was ready to go into the Army or continue as editor, but added:

"What I am kicking about is the decision being made by a draft board which has betrayed prejudice in my case—apparently because it doesn't like PM.

Meanwhile the Reds acknowledged the fall of the battered city of Staryi Oskol (2), 65 miles west. The Germans reported strong Red forces encircled behind the Voronezh front

Civilian Turns Reporter, Finds African Front a Bit Elusive

(Associated Press Middle East war correspondents thought they might be getting too professional to please their public. So they sent a layman, Theodore A. Morde of New Bedford, Mass., to the front. Morde is a 30-year-old traveler, who has shipped on freighters to all parts of the world. He toured Spain during the Civil War. Below is his story of his first trip to the Egyptian front.)

By Theodore A. Morde

By the Associated Press

Cairo, July 8.—I drove westward from Alexandria to the desert front. I had been informed that Nazis were strafing the road and that my sedan might make a conspicuous target. After more than 50 miles of motoring I learned from troops I met that there had been no enemy air activity for five days.

When trucks passed by with prisoners, the Tommies' favorite joke with the Italians was to point toward the sky and pretend that Axis planes were overhead. The prisoners would cower on the bottom of the trucks and come up again after hearing the laughter of their guards.

Shells Land Nearby

As the speedometer clicked, I watched nervously, for there seemed to be nothing to tell you where the front began. Soon the sound of artillery fire caused me to halt and ask Tommies standing unconcernedly by how far it was to the battle.

They pointed to a ridge a mile ahead: "That's El Alamein."

Starting off again I had scarcely reached the ridge when three shells plunked down within a quarter mile of the car.

Up to then, things had been strangely quiet, unlike what rumor said it would be. I met a British officer and asked him what was going on. He pointed to a few barely distinguishable flames on the skyline and explained that these were "Jerry Feelers."

"I don't think you can go much farther in your car, you know," the officer said.

It was late afternoon and I was wondering where to spend the night when I spotted a scattered group of field ambulances. A South African major in charge invited me to pass the night with his boys. He told me his company had retired to this position only a few hours previously.

Italians Tantalize Prisoners

We passed a fantastic evening in his mess. We discussed everything but war—Roosevelt, Lindbergh, John L. Lewis, music, Hollywood—and all the while R. A. F. bombers droned overhead en route on repeated attacks against the German lines.

As the evening passed, one by one stories of bravery and hardships came out. At least two of the men had slipped away for captors after being "in the bag." One was a 30-year-old captain who told how the Italians used water, allocated to prisoners, to wash in front of their captives who had had nothing to drink for 24 hours or more.

"It was bad business," the major said, telling now a number of his officers were killed in an engagement in which he was wounded and an ambulance wrecked during what he called "that noisy night."

Captain Escapes From Nazis

The next morning I drove forward to a dressing station where I found a wounded British tank gunner. His tank and a German tank had both been disabled in fighting. He leaped from the turret and ran toward the German tank, hurling a hand grenade. It bounced off and did not explode. He seized the grenade and held it against the side of the tank until it exploded. He was blown clear, but lost his right arm and suffered cuts and burns. The doctors said he would recover.

Associated Press WIREPHOTO

THEODORE A. MORDE,

The doctors had no sooner finished operating on the gunner than a tired dust-stained captain arrived on foot. He had been captured by a lone German armored car. The Germans left one man to guard the captive. The captain chatted with the guard and asked him for a cigarette. As the guard reached for one, the captain grabbed his gun. He made off with the gun, leaving the guard on the spot.

As we talked with this captain one of the officers told of an experience which befell an R. A. F. pilot who crash-landed several miles behind enemy lines. The pilot lay low until after dark and then set off, guided by the stars, toward the British lines. Everything would have been all right had he not stumbled into an Italian sentry guarding a gasoline dump.

"I just shot the silly . . . through the head," the pilot said. "The rest of the Italians filed sleepily out of their tents with their hands in the air."

The pilot, unable to satisfy the Italians' desire to be made prisoners, slipped away in the confusion. The next day he was picked up by a British tank.

Pacific Council Watches War In Middle East

By Edward T. Folliard

Post Staff Writer

At its meeting with President Roosevelt yesterday, the Pacific War Council looked beyond the Far East to the Middle East, where the armored legions of Rommel and Auchinleck appeared ready for one of the most fateful battles of history.

Dr. Eelco Van Kleffens, the Dutch Foreign Minister, told reporters that it was only natural that he and other members of the Pacific group should be preoccupied with Egypt.

"This is one war," he said, "and we cannot disassociate one area from another."

Harold Butler, new British Director of Information, was asked if the outlook was discouraging. He said it was not. Asked if it was encouraging, he replied:

"At present a lot depends on what happens in Egypt. It looks like we are holding, and if that turns out right the whole situation is improved. But it is too early yet to be sure of that."

Walter Nash, the Minister from New Zealand, said that the fact that the British were holding Rommel at El Alamein, 65 miles from Alexandria, was "good."

"It is infinitely better than we hoped for a fortnight ago," Minister Nash said. "I don't know whether this will be permanent, but we hope so."

Dr. Van Kleffens was reminded of the statement he made two weeks ago to the effect that there were definite reasons to be encouraged by the war outlook. He was asked if he still felt that way.

"Oh, yes," he replied, and he explained that two weeks ago he was talking in terms of the long-range perspective.

Dr. T. V. Soong, Chinese Foreign Minister, was asked if China was going to get the aerial reinforcements for which he had been pleading. He said the answer was a military secret, but he added the remark that he was encouraged by the reaction to his plea.

"I'm always encouraged," he said, smiling.

Leighton McCarthy, Minister from Canada, said that he had asked President Roosevelt about the situation in the Aleutians. He said the President corroborated the Navy announcement about the sinking of Japanese destroyers, but told him the weather since then had been extremely bad.

Convoy Nazis Attacked Soviet-Bound, British Say

London, July 8 (AP).—United States merchant ships were in the Russia-bound convoy which the Germans claimed to have attacked, an authoritative British source said today, but he added that he was unable to say whether United States warships formed part of the escort.

The British source recalled that the last German allegation of damage to a Northern convoy was "exaggerated," but said he was unable to indicate the extent of Allied losses in this convoy while the ships were still at sea.

An American May Head All Allied Forces

By Irving Perlmeter

Associated Press Staff Writer

Some high inter-Allied personages here speculated yesterday on the possibility that an American—perhaps Gen. George C. Marshall, chief of staff of the United States Army—might some day become supreme commander of all United Nations land, air and sea forces throughout the world.

So far there is no official move toward creating a supreme commander, but it can be said for the idea now that some important people who refuse to permit use of their names either expect or hope for one.

Assuming that the job went to an American—which both British and American sources here do assume—it might not necessarily go to Marshall. Other possibilities, of course, include Admiral William D. Leahy and Gen. Douglas MacArthur.

Leahy, while 67, generally is considered one of President Roosevelt's closest military advisers.

Since retiring as chief of naval operations a few years ago he has served as Ambassador to the Vichy French government. Recently he left the White House with the statement that the President had "some kind of employment" for him.

General MacArthur might be a contender not only for his military skill but because of the near-world-wide hero worship that has grown out of his defense on Bataan Peninsula.

In fact one of the reasons for having a supreme command is the big supply of leadership talent. As one of the ranking inter-Allied officials interviewed for this article put it:

"You might say the United Nations had a football team—Stalin and Chiang Kai-shek at ends, MacArthur at center, Wavell at guard, Roosevelt at quarterback, Churchill at fullback, and similar stars all through the lineup. It might make sense to have a captain to promote teamwork.

At present United Nations strategy calls for area commands in different parts of the world—MacArthur in the southwest Pacific, Wavell in India, Auchinleck in the Middle East Chiang Kai-shek in China. In Russia there are only Russian forces, hence no inter-Allied command. Now that Americans are in Great Britain, an appointment may be made there.

The fault, if any, with this setup is illustrated by the current German threat to Egypt, in the opinion of another official who likewise declined use of his name.

Theoretically, the Nazi forces could have been annihilated long ago if British tanks sent to Russia and American troops sent to Australia had been dispatched instead to Libya.

Perhaps the routing of men and materials was the wisest possible in the circumstances, said this source. But actually the destinations were chosen on the basis of day-to-day needs. He argued that in a global war, someone ought to be in charge of a master strategy plan for the whole world to see that such help went to places where it would fit the world picture.

Another reason advanced for a supreme commander was the asserted need of an agency of last resort to decide such questions as standardization of materiel types and similar issues which, because of democratic procedure, are debated sometimes for long periods without action.

This official said, "In a democracy, you've got to let everyone say his nickel's worth, but somebody has to make the decisions."

One of the most frequent arguments offered for a supreme commander is the apparent success of Foch as the Allied Supreme Commander in World War I. Others discount this precedent because Foch had only one front to worry about.

Whether the Roosevelt-Churchill combination serves the same purpose, or whether they should yield their military power to another person are other questions raised in opposition to the supreme command idea.

F.B.I. Seizes 70 More Aliens in Drive to Wipe Out Bund

15 Women In Group Held At Ellis Island

By the Associated Press

New York, July 8.—The number of arrests in the Government's ing effort to eradicate the German-American Bund rose from 45 to 70 tonight, including 15 women, and the total in Federal custody increased to 99.

P. E. Foxworth, head of the New York office of the Federal Bureau of Investigation, said raids were continuing at a rapid pace in the metropolitan area.

All those arrested today, he declared, were enemy aliens taken under Presidential warrants issued through the Attorney General's office in Washington.

Foxworth said one of those captured today was in possession of a complete United States Army uniform.

He declined to release the names of any persons arrested, but said considered all of them "dangerous enemy aliens."

All those taken today were sent to Ellis Island.

The national campaign to eradicate the bund was launched with the arrest of 29 persons Tuesday by Federal agents armed with warrants obtained by United States Attorney Mathias Correa.

The bund, also known as "a militant organization of free Americans," has been nominally defunct since the outbreak of war between the United States and Germany, but the indictments against those arrested on the first day of the Government drive alleged a conspiracy continuing from January 1, 1940, to the present.

Charges against the 29 indicted range from espionage—against Gerhard Wilhelm Kunze, former national leader of the bund recently captured in Mexico and now held at Hartford, Conn., under $50,000 bond—to evasion of the Selective Service Act and the Alien Registration Act.

Grill Pleads Guilty

John August Grill, one of the 29, pleaded guilty in New York City late today at his arraignment before Federal Judge George Sweeney, who had previously ordered seven others held in bonds totaling $85,000. The seven pleaded innocent.

Most of those who entered pleas today said they were innocent, including Kunze. Wilbur V. Keegan, counsel for the bund until last January with offices at Teaneck, N. J., was held at Hartford with Kunze. He was arrested in New Haven last night.

Judge Sweeney postponed sentencing Grill until after the trial of the other seven who appeared before him, set for July 28. The seven included Gustav Elmer, bund national treasurer.

In Cleveland, a plea of innocent was entered by Joseph Belohlavek, bund leader, to an indictment alleging conspiracy to violate the Alien Registration and Selective Servcie Acts.

Tries to Commit Suicide

In Minneapolis, Federal officials reported that Carl Frederick Berg, 40, a school janitor, tried to commit suicide in the city jail after his arrest last night on a New York indictment.

Special Agent Kenneth M. Piper of the FBI said two men who pleaded innocent to conspiracy charges at Buffalo, N. Y., were Karl Richard Wendlandt, national leader of the bund youth movement, and Karl A. Bachmann, leader of the Albany, N. Y., unit from 1937 until the United States entered the war.

Conviction on the indictment relating to the bund's general policy of concealing its true nature and the identity of its members may involve sentences of two years and fines of $10,000 each.

The charge relating to campaigns to make youths resist the Selective Service Act carries a maximum of five years in prison and a fine of $10,000.

Meanwhile the military trial of eight former Bundsmen, German-born men who landed in this country from Nazi submarines, was under way in Washington amid the utmost secrecy. The eight, accused of violating the articles of war by stealing into the United States with intent to spread fire and destruction by sabotage, face possible death sentences.

15 Die, 7 Hurt As 3 Army Planes Crash

By the Associated Press

Smithfield, N. C., July 8 (AP).—A United States Army plane crashed in a cornfield about 5 miles north of here this afternoon and its seven occupants were killed.

The low-flying plane, witnesses said, apparently tried to gain altitude and then went into a nose dive, crashed and exploded.

Five bodies were burned beyond recognition and two others were badly mangled.

The wreckage of the multicolored plane was scattered over several acres.

Seven Die in Utah Crash

Wendover, Utah, July 8 (AP).—Three officers and four enlisted men were killed last night in the crash and burning of their Army bomber on Bonneville salt flats, about 10 miles east of here.

The dead are:

First Lieut. Arthur L. Birloff, Spokane, Wash.; Second Lieut. Van Vanderbie, Los Angeles, Calif.; Second Lieut. Floyd R. Reno, St. Joseph, Mo.; Pvt. J. R. Swann, Albany, Ga.; Pvt. Kenneth M. Gillies, Jackson, Mich.; Pvt. Eugene P. Holsey, Tulsa, Okla., and Pvt. Homer R. Emswiler, Columbus, Ohio.

One Killed, Seven Injured

Tucson, Ariz., July 8 (AP).—Second Lieut. Robert Barton, jr., Charleston, W. Va., was killed today and seven fellow crew members in a B-24 Army bomber were injured when the ship crashed in the desert 8 miles southeast of Davis-Monthan Air Base.

Public relations officials said eyewitnesses reported the plane, piloted by First Lieut. Robert J. Calleran, was flying low as it swung about to return to the field.

One wing tip hit the desert and the ship nosed over.

The airplane was demolished and the air base officers said the escape of the other men was miraculous. Lieuttenant Barton was the copilot.

Victims' Names Announced

Greenville, S. C., July 8 (AP).—The Greenville Army air base announced today the names of five officers and enlisted men killed in the crash of a four-motored bomber near Trenton, Ga., yesterday.

They were:

Second Lieut. Earl Hobson, 28, the pilot, San Carlos, Ariz.; Second Lieut. Earl B. Wood, 27, the copilot, Beaumont, Tex.; Staff Sergt. Warren E. McMurtray, 25, McComb, Miss.; Sergt. Rolland F. Carrigan, 22, St. Johnsbury, Vt., and Corpl. Thomas R. Thurman, jr., 19, Palestine, Tex.

understood to have declared for Lodge's seat only after assurances of Administration support.

Casey's campaign will be based on a plea for a Senate that will not only vote every measure to expedite prosecution of the war but will likewise support the Administration's peace policies when the war ends.

Capital will be made in his campaign of the fact that Lodge's grandfather, the late Senator Henry Cabot Lodge, was a leader of the Senate group which fought Woodrow Wilson's postwar policies and blocked American entry into the League of Nations.

Lodge's record was isolationist before Pearl Harbor, but he has supported every war measure since and early took up his commission as a Reserve Corps captain and was promoted to major. He was in command of an American mission which went to the Middle East to get first-hand experience in desert fighting. Last night he left for Fort Knox to report to officers there on performance of American M-3 tanks in actual combat.

Stimson, a Republican and former Secretary of State, who was appointed to the President's Cabinet because of ardent adherence to the President's foreign policies, wrote Lodge:

"Your eagerness to continue your military service as a major in the Army is easily understood." He added, however, that "I cannot but feel . . . that you will render more service to the American people by performing the important duties of United States Senator, rather than devote your energies solely to the purely military phases of the war as a junior officer."

Letters rejecting congressional applications for commissions already have figured in preliminary campaigning. Representative Fish (Republican) of New York, whose reelection campaign is vigorously opposed by the Administration because of his prewar isolationist activities, two months ago circulated extracts from a letter from Lieut. Gen. Leslie J. McNair, commanding general, Army ground forces.

Army to Take 400 Doctors From Capital

By Gerald G. Gross

Post Staff Writer

Within the next week an estimated 400 Washington physicians are going to receive written invitations to join the Army Medical Corps as commissioned officers.

More accurately, that is the approximate number which has been classed as "unessential"—available for military duty—by the District procurement and assignment board. Some undoubtedly would be disqualified for physical reasons but the great majority are regarded as good prospects.

Announcement of the local recruiting drive came yesterday from Dr. Francis X. McGovern, the District's procurement chairman, and Lieut. Col. Willard C. Goley, chairman of the Army recruitment board for the District.

The letter they will send out to this select "400" in the next few days will invite the physician to drop in on the recruitment board for an interview. Offices of the board were set up this week in the District Medical Society Building, 1718 M Street Northwest.

Col. Goley and Maj. William H. Phillips, the Adjutant General's representative on the board, are not concealing their disappointment that they have not had a "cash customer" yet. Several doctors have come in to ask questions but none has been sworn into service.

"Washington has given many but a lot more can be spared," said Dr. McGovern. "Needed especially for the Army are physicians under the age of 37, young and fit enough to go right into field duty."

He emphasized, however, that doctors up to the age of 55 are eligible for commissions and will be welcomed for interviews. The two-man recruitment board is authorized to commission first lieutenants and captains. Candidates qualifying for higher grades must be passed upon by the Army Surgeon General.

The letters of invitation will go out to Washington physicians in the under-45 age group. These approximately 400 men have been given clearance by local medical schools and hospitals which the procurement and assignment service asked to supply lists of faculty and staff members who could be spared from civilian practice.

"Garfield Hospital, for example, came through like this: On its staff were four senior surgeons, four associates and four junior associates. All but the four seniors were held available for military duty by the hospital," said Dr. McGovern.

He revealed publicly for the first time that, of the 1370 Washington physicians who voluntarily registered on May 12, 453 were general practitioners and 562 were specialists. Of the remainder, 211 were engaged in salaried practice, either for the Government or privately, while the others were temporarily or permanently retired or women practitioners.

War Sidelights

Huge Bombs Being Used Against Japs

United Nations Headquarters in Australia, July 8 (INS).—American and Australian airmen now are using the biggest bombs made in their attacks on Japanese bases north of Australia, it was revealed today.

One pilot, back from a recent raid on the Japanese-held base at Lae, on New Guinea, reported that when his first bomb struck, everything near the target vanished in the eruption of smoke and flame. After the debris cleared from the air, huge craters were visible from a great height, he declared.

"The blasts rocked the bombers like bucking broncos," the pilot said.

Something Fishy for Nazis

Cairo, July 8 (AP).—Fishy water, so unpalatable that no stomach can stand it, was all that the British left behind for the Germans to drink on the western desert.

This was the result of fish oil methodically poured into the wells at all oases.

Although German engineers no doubt have cleaned the wells by now and made the water drinkable, it will keep its lingering taste of fish for months.

Because water sources on the desert, although scarce, are virtually indestructible, this method has supplanted former efforts to blow up the wells. Where a well is blasted the enemy can get palatable water within 24 hours by digging a new one nearby.

Navy Rates at the Bars

Sacramento, Calif., July 8 (AP).—Under the rules, soldiers in Sacramento can be served hard liquor only between 6 p. m. and 10 p. m., while sailors can stand up to the bar and get anything they want as long as the place is open.

"That is causing all kinds of friction," George Reilly, a member of the State board of equalization, reported to his colleagues today. "The soldiers have to drink beer after 10 p. m. and they don't like it when sailors taunt them with, "Why don't you join the Navy?"

There are feminine complications, too.

"If the soldier has a girl friend," Reilly added, "she quits the Army at 10 o'clock and goes over to the Navy."

Paying Back Blood Loan

Los Angeles, July 8 (AP).—Mel Van Keuren, 20, a sailor who was wounded by shrapnel and burned severely at Pearl Harbor, walked into a Red Cross plasma bank and donated a pint of blood.

He explained that his life was saved by eight transfusions from a blood bank. "I'll give it back pint for pint."

OPA to Raise Ceiling on Jam, Frozen Fruits

Ceiling prices for frozen fruits and vegetables of the 1942 crop and for jams, jellies and preserves made from the new fruit will be raised shortly, Price Administrator Leon Henderson announced last night, and the ceiling on peanuts and peanut butter may be discarded entirely in September.

These departures from the universal price ceiling followed by slightly more than a week Henderson's announcement that retail prices of canned and dried fruits of the 1942 pack would be boosted 15 per cent or more.

The new price adjustments will approach that percentage, officials said, but may not soar quite so high. They will apply at the packers', wholesalers' and retailers' levels.

Henderson said peanuts and peanut butter might be removed completely from the universal price ceiling when marketing of the 1942 crop opens in September, or that as an alternative, "appropriate adjustments will be made."

The same reasons were given for the new increases as those assigned by Henderson for the boost on canned and dried fruits—the preferred price treatment for farm products written by Congress into the Emergency Price Control Act and Henderson's inability to get a subsidy program to let the Government absorb increased costs.

The new pricing formula for frozen food packers permits each packer to add to his last year's price the actual increase in costs of raw fruit and vegetables since last year, plus 12 per cent of the 1941 price to cover advances in labor and operating costs.

"Athough the strawberry pack is about completed, most of the other fruits and vegetables are still in the fields," the Price Administrator said. "Any action imperilling or abolishing normal merchandising practices might well hamper or entirely blight prospects for the bumper pack, which is an essential part of the war program.

"Delay might cause the crops to rot in the fields. Hence, lacking Government aid in absorbing such increased costs, OPA has no alternative but to shift the increased burden onto the consumer's shoulders."

2-Alarm Fire Damages Dwelling

A two-alarm fire yesterday burned out three downstairs rooms of a rooming house at 1237 Twenty-second Street Northwest.

No one was injured. Jere Johnston, 70, Negro roomer, was carried from the second floor by Lieut. A. N. Wright of Truck Company No. 2.

The fire was discovered by William Jones, Negro, another roomer, who notified Mrs. Minnie Berkley, lessee of the property, owned by Dr. J. C. Dowling of 1119 U Street Northwest, and then turned in the alarm.

Community War Fund Group Ready for Action

With interest mounting in the newly organized Community War Fund to raise $3,500,000 during October for 1943, the executive committee announced last night that meetings will be held weekly during July and August to pass on applications.

Organized to avoid duplication of small appeals, and to raise the funds necessary in a concerted drive, the group announced that questionnaires will go forward immediately to those interested.

Already, applications have been received from the Community Chest of Washington, the United Service Organizations, and the Prisoners of War of the International Y. M. C. A.

According to William J. Flather, jr., chairman of the admissions committee, foreign relief organizations already interested include the Queen Wilhelmina Fund, British Relief, the Maple Leaf Fund, Polish Relief and Russian Relief.

The questionnaire was drawn up for use of organized groups by the fund's committee on admissions and budgets on Monday, and, according to General Chairman Edwin C. Graham, its purpose is to obtain from organizations interested in joining the fund, the basic information required in giving full and fair consideration to those applying for membership.

In addition to identifying information, the paper incorporates questions on such matters as the length of time organized, names of active officers and their governing bodies.

It will include also, a statement on objectives and purposes of the organization, and methods of carrying out those objectives.

Financial reports include data on receipts and disbursements for the past year, amount raised locally for the period, cost of raising this amount and the appropriation to be requested from the War Fund for 1943.

With the questionnaire approved, the Admissions Committee is now ready for action, it was said.

Serving with Chairman Flather are: Frank A. Birgfeld, Michael F. Calnan, Mrs. Wilson Compton, Rev. J. Hillman Hollister, A. F. E. Horn, Samuel H. Kauffmann, Arthur Linn, Mrs. Luther Sheldon, jr., John M. Sink, jr., John F. Victory, and Claude H. Woodward.

Said Flather: "We are making the method of application as clear and simple as possible, since our purpose is to include, not exclude, as many as possible of the valid local and national campaigns for funds.

"The requirements listed," he continued, "are based upon good campaigning principles, the coordination of thinking of the finance committee, the admissions committee and the executive committee of the newly organized Community War Fund; the experience in other cities, and the original resolution adopted by the Washington citizens mass meeting when the War Fund was established."

Questionnaire forms may be obtained from War Fund headquarters, 1101 M Street Northwest, and should be mailed to Flather at that address not later than July 20, it was announced.

Virginian Named WAAC Counselor

MRS. ELLA NEWELL PUTMAN

of Alexandria, Va., has been appointed resident counselor for the Women's Army Auxiliary Corps training school at Fort Des Moines, Iowa, the War Department announced yesterday. Mrs. Putman was director of the Household Workers Training School under the Works Progress Administration in the District from 1935 to 1937. Since 1941 she has worked in both California and New York as a field organizer for the American Women's Volunteer Services. She is now at Fort Des Moines, and will begin her duties when the school opens July 20

Conserve Tea! Skip a Spoon For the Pot

Washington Bureau of Chicago Sun

Tea experts of the Office of Price Administration yesterday came to the aid of the Nation's tea drinkers with helpful hints on better methods of brewing and drinking the beverage.

Pointing out that only about half of last year's tea supply will be available this year because of blocked imports, the OPA said there is no need for the average tea drinker to curtail his drinking habits in this proportion.

Careful use of the tea in brewing and in preparing various tea drinks will make your tea go a lot further, the experts advise. They recommend several steps to make your tea last:

1. In brewing, use only one level teaspoon to one cup of rapidly boiling water. Brew from two to five minutes, depending upon how strong you like it.

2. In making iced tea, use one teaspoon of tea for each cup of freshly drawn fully boiling water. Scald the teapot, put in the measured tea leaves and the boiling water, and allow the tea to steep for a full five minutes. Strain, allow to cool, then chill in refrigerator. If this is done, it will be unnecessary to make the tea double strength, as it will not become diluted by the ice.

3. To conserve sugar for sweetening iced tea, use a syrup made by dissolving the desired amount of sugar in boiling water, then chilling it. Sugar added directly to the iced tea does not completely dissolve.

4. Buy tea in bulk rather than in tea bags, as it is easier to measure it in this manner.

5. Eliminate the "extra spoonful for the pot" as a wartime conservation measure.

The resignation of Dr. H. J. Crosson as member of the Board of Public Welfare was accepted "with regret" by the Commissioners last night. Dr. Crosson, a resident of the District for 50 years, was appointed to the board in 1929, succeeding E. J. Newcomb. A graduate of Georgetown Medical School, Dr. Crosson lives at 1746 M Street Northwest.

Force Jap Fleet Into Action, Invade Europe, Briton Advises United Nations

to find new methods for the final offensive." It might develop, he said, that the Allied methods of attack would have to conform to the principle, of Hitler himself.

"In other words," he added, "we may be right in not plunging ahead into an uncalculated risk but rather beat Hitler at his own game in the preliminary phase; by softening process, by continued blockade, by increasingly intense British and American bombing, by the threat of invasion and by raids on the model of Cherbourg, and more recently St. Nazaire.

"This process, together with the rising temper of the occupied countries, will enable us to achieve what has never been done, or even attempted, before."

Turning to the Pacific, he said Japan had the advantage of fighting on interior lines, and had skillfully arranged successive advances in a way which ever gave Nipponese sea forces the advantage of protection from land-based aircraft. This procedure the Allies may have to follow in their own offensive against the Japanese, he added.

As the situation stands, he continued, Japan itself is virtually secure from attack from all quarters except Siberia. It may be, he remarked, that the Japs will feel it necessary to eliminate that source of danger before attempting a further advance to the southward or into India.

But Japan is vulnerable, nevertheless, he said, and in the last analysis depends upon her fleet for protection, as does England. The question then was one of forcing the main Japanese fleet into action, and not one of surface actions between battle squadrons.

"The increasing effectiveness of air bombing attack and particularly of its long-range power is the most promising factor for a reasonably quick decision in the Pacific war," he said. "Until American bomber forces can be placed within operating distances of the Japanese main fleet you will probably only get within striking distance of their main fleet when the Japanese command either decides to risk it or makes a major blunder—as avoiding action in this vast area is a simple matter."

Soldiers' Pay 'Nicked' for Families

By D. Harold Oliver
Associated Press Staff Writer

The Army already has started deducting from soldiers' pay checks the contributions they are required to make to dependent wives and children under the family allowance bill which became law on June 23, although payments to the dependents will not start until November.

First deductions were ordered from June pay checks due July 1. But since some Army posts already had their June pay rolls made up when instructions were received, deductions in those cases will not start until August 1. To prevent hardship the June deductions at those camps may be spread over three or four months.

Government cash benefits are being added to these pay allotments, but both will be allowed to accumulate into lump sums ($250 in the case of a dependent wife) before first payments are made on November 1. The law specified payments to be effective as of June 1, but delay in setting up the vast administrative machinery will postpone the initial payments for four months.

Thereafter the Government checks will go out monthly.

4 Coast Guardsmen Called as Trial of 8 Saboteurs Opens

Rigid Secrecy Rules As Army Board Holds First Session

Commission.

This policy spelled failure for the efforts of Elmer Davis, director of the OWI, to inform the American public of the sensational hearing and to forestall anticipated Nazi propaganda charges that the eight spies are being put away in a star chamber proceeding.

Paynter's departure left the OWI, as far as 40 newspaper men could find out, unrepresented at the spy hearing. Jurisdiction of the event was shared with the Army only by J. Edgar Hoover, director of the Federal Bureau of Investigation, who countersigned the yellow cardboard passes by which messengers and others won admission to the Commission's chambers.

Even Attorney General Biddle, on his way to help prosecute the Germans, was halted by a guard until he had shown one of these passes. So was Hoover.

Girl Reporter Questioned

A girl reporter, roving the Department of Justice basement without a pass, was detained for a brisk grilling by an officer of the guard.

There were suggestions that the Army imposed this elaborate secrecy because the evidence would be too hot to publish. The testimony, it was conjectured, would deal at length with provisions for national defense.

The entire absence of official information made the spy trial a dark and portentous event, thickly plastered with guesses and surmises.

The eight Germans have been locked up at the District Jail, guarded by a detail of soldiers ordered there by Brig. Gen. Albert L. Cox, provost marshal of the Military District of Washington.

Two vans left the jail yesterday morning, convoyed by officers in several automobiles and by two armored scout cars, each mounting two heavy machine guns and two Tommy guns and each manned by seven soldiers.

It was conjectured that these vans contained the prisoners, but they might have contained witnesses. It was conjectured also that the prisoners were before the Military Commission later on. But they might not have been, as this is not a criminal trial, but a hearing, under the laws of war, upon the fate of armed enemies who have no rights at all unless the United States chooses to grant them. The civil courts are closed to them, by proclamation of President Roosevelt.

GEORGE J. DASCH — EDWARD J. KERLING — HERBERT H. HAUPT — RICHARD QUIRIN

WERNER THIEL — HERMAN O. NEUBAUER — ERNEST P. BURGER — HENRY H. HEINCK

The President authorized the Military Commission to make whatever rules it deemed necessary to a full and fair trial. The commission is not bound by the common law rules of evidence, but was authorized by the President to hear whatever its members thought would "have probative value to a reasonable man." And the spies may be convicted by two-thirds of the commissioners present.

If the men are found guilty under the eighty-second article of war, which denounces "lurking or acting as spies in and about the fortifications, posts and encampments of the armies of the United States," the death penalty will be mandatory.

All 8 on Trial at Once

Besides General McCoy, the commissioners are Maj. Gen. Walter S. Grant, Maj. Gen. Blanton Winship, Maj. Gen. Lorenzo D. Gasser, Brig. Gen. Guy V. Henry, Brig. Gen. John T. Lewis and Brig. Gen. John T. Kennedy.

Col. Cassius M. Dowell and Col. Kenneth C. Royall were assigned to defend the eight spies. This week, Col. Carl Ristine became counsel for Dasch.

It was learned that as the hearing opened, the prosecutors, Attorney General Biddle and the adjutant general of the Army, Maj. Gen. Myron Cramer, proposed to try the spies one by one. But the officers assigned to defense objected, fearing the first hearing would leave the seven generals of the Commission prejudiced against subsequent defendants. So all eight were placed on trial at once.

Just after the luncheon recess, a man carrying an enameled pan such as those used in the FBI laboratory entered the trial corridor. He was followed later by four men in Coast Guard uniforms.

The first-day sessions totaled five hours, beginning at 10 a. m. and ending at 4:30 p. m., with an hour and a half recess for lunch. It was understood that this would be the daily schedule.

The prisoners were taken back to the jail at the end of the day, but some of the witnesses and presumably a considerable number of guards appeared to be spending the night in the Justice Building.

A group of Army officials participating in the trial were luncheon guests of Attorney General Biddle in his large office. Some other participants remained in the trial room area and had their lunch sent up from the department cafeteria.

The Attorney General said last night that he expected the proceedings to last all week. He refused to say more, explaining:

"General McCoy has ordered everyone who has a part in the hearing, including myself, to make no statements. And I don't want to be court-martialed."

Senate Group Approves Medal for FBI Chief

The Senate Judiciary Committee yesterday gave its approval to a bill sponsored by Senator Mead (Democrat) of New York, awarding "an appropriate medal of honor" to J. Edgar Hoover, Federal Bureau of Investigation chief, in connection with the G-men's recent round-up of enemy saboteurs.

The Senate is expected to act on the proposal today.

The citation would be in recognition of the "untiring devotion to duty of J. Edgar Hoover and the officers and public servants acting under his direction, who collaborated in the apprehension of numerous enemy agents, saboteurs and fifth columnists during the month of June, 1942, thereby affording great protection to his country and its citizens and effecting a telling blow in the prosecution of the war."

Airline Is Permitted to Keep $1,375,000 in Excess Earnings

By the Associated Press

The Civil Aeronautics Board ruled yesterday that Pan American-Grace Airways, Inc., had excessive net earnings of $1,375,000 between August 22, 1939, and December 31, 1941, but decided against "recapture" of the amount.

While holding "recapture" to be "economically unsound and contrary to the public interest," the board imposed restrictions intended to insure the use of the allegedly excessive profits in the public interest.

The board ruled the money "should not be devoted to the personal interest" of Pan American-Grace's stockholders through the payment of dividends, but that a special reserve should be established to which should be credited an amount equal to the excessive earnings not already incorporated in the company's capital stock account.

Primary considerations influencing the board against the recapture policy, which was applied in a recent mail rate decision involving American Airlines, were:

The detrimental effect of such a policy upon the company during war conditions, and the need of the company for ample reserves to act as a "cushion" against future exigencies.

"Our international carriers will face a need for capital," the board said, "which is likely to be as sudden as it is urgent. If they are to be able to satisfy those capital requirements they must present a reasonably sound financial condition to the investing public."

Since October 1, 1935, the company has received $1.70 per mile outbound and $1.30 per mile inbound for mail loads not exceeding 800 pounds, with added compensation for larger loads.

Rep. Robertson Polls House On Sales Tax

By Robert C. Albright

Post Staff Writer

A proposed 3 per cent retail sales tax, exempting nothing except Government purchases, yesterday was submitted to House members in a poll of House opinion by Representative A. Willis Robertson (Democrat) of Virginia.

Robertson, who with Representative Disney (Democrat) of Oklahoma led a fight in the Ways and Means Committee for a sales tax, planned to submit the results of his poll in a final committee show-down on a general retail levy.

The Virginian indicated he would not act unless a majority of the House membership responded favorably, and with many members out of town the outcome was doubtful. The committee previously had rejected Robertson's move for a sales tax to make up a $2,500,000,000 revenue shortage.

As Robertson dispatched letters to 435 members of the House, the tax bill lost another $102,800,000 in potential revenue from increased rates on second and third class mail matter. The committee referred the whole question of proposed rate increases to meet postal deficits to the House Postoffice committee.

Its action reduced the gross revenue yield of the bill from $5,924,000,000 to $5,821,200,000, approximately three billion dollars below the Treasury's tax revenue goals. The net shortage is far greater, as $876,700,000 of the bill's profits receipts will be refunded to corporations as a post-war rehabilitation credit.

Opposition of Price Administrator Leon Henderson and others to a proposed 5 per cent tax on freight and express transportation meanwhile threatened to knock another 292 million dollars of revenue out of the bill. Henderson contends the freight tax will interfere with price maintenance efforts. Joseph R. Eastman, director of the office of defense transportation, likewise opposes the tax.

May Lower Exemptions

A further jolt to revenue may develop if the committee yields to sentiment for fixing the personal exemption of single individuals at $800, instead of the $500 originally voted. The committee apparently will stand by its decision to cut exemptions of married couples to $1200.

Yesterday's committee action sidetracking proposed increases in second and third class mail rates followed a letter from Postmaster General in which he termed it conjectural that rate increases in those categories would raise expected revenue. Walker said "the probable effect would be to drive second-class matter out of the mails."

Chairman Doughton wrote Walker that the committee had eliminated the increase but did not want the Postmaster General to "permit the matter to lie dormant. He said Congress has been criticized because of "the serious deficit which the Postoffice Department has constantly shown."

Administration Opposes

Robertson's efforts to raise another $2,500,000,000 from a general retail tax, while designed to overcome shortages in the dwindling measure, came in the face of active Administration opposition to any general consumer's levey.

The committee's vote on the Robertson motion may be the parting House shot at a sales tax, as House leaders favor a closed rule which would not purmit any non-committee revenue amendments to be offered on the House floor. If the House move fails, sales tax advocates plan to take up the fight in the Senate Finance Committee, reportedly leaning heavily toward the levy.

Nelson, Not Armed Services, Will Gear U. S. to War Economy

HOUGHTON KNOWLSON BATT

the "administrative load" on the shoulders of a vice chairman, William L. Batt, former director of the materials division, who will relinquish his chairmanship of the important materials requirements committee.

That chairmanship will go to a second WPB vice chairman created by the reorganization. He is James S. Knowlson, director of the Division of Industry Operations, upon whom will devolve responsibility for channeling materials through factories that make necessary munitions and essential civilian goods. His activities will be in accordance with policy decisions approved by Nelson.

Both Knowlson and Batt, on certain occasions, will be Nelson's stand-ins. Batt will function in his absence as WPB chairman. Knowlson will be his alternate on the combined Production and Resources Board through which British and American economies are to be given strategic direction.

Actual direction of operations at WPB has been brought together under one administrator who bears the title of director general for operations. Named to the post was Amory Houghton, former deputy chief of the Bureau of Industry Branches. The bureau was in charge of Philip D. Reed, lately under fire from the Senate Truman Committee for alleged failure to obtain speedy curtailment of nonessential production. Reed, it was announced last week, will be sent to London as assistant to Nelson's representative there, W. Averell Harriman.

2 Deputies to Be Chosen

In addition to the two vice chairmen, two deputy chairmanships were created by realignment. One of the deputies will head the Smaller War Plants Corporation set up recently by Congress to help small enterprises to participate in military production or in phases of civilian manufacture.

The other deputy will be assigned to watch the progress of war production, functioning as a kind of "inspector general" in checking on the whole production program to anticipate bottlenecks, to detect the causes of failure and to help see that remedies are applied.

Neither of the deputies has been chosen, but will be soon, Nelson promsed. He added that the corporation's personnel shortly will be selected, emphasizing that from now on industrial conversion will take place chiefly in small business.

Houghton in Key Post

Director General Houghton admittedly has one of the most important jobs in the new set-up. His task will be to put into operation the policies governing flow of materials which are worked out by Knowlson.

Ferdinand Eberstadt, chairman of the Army and Navy Munitions Board, was slated to become director general. A large part of the functions and personnel of the board were to have been brought into WPB. At the last minute, it was learned, Nelson decided against the move, a decision that was interpreted as meaning that Nelson believed the switch could not be made without compromising his determination to retain domination of war production through priorities and materials control.

The decision brought into focus Nelson's battle for control with the armed forces in general and Lieut. Gen. Brehon B. Somervell, chief of the Army's service of supply, in particular.

Nelson said that some parts of the munitions board may yet be merged with WPB and that the relationship between the two agencies still is under study.

He stated that it will remain the job of the armed services to determine how materials shall be given preference for making ships, planes, tanks and guns on the basis of shifting strategy. When material demands go beyond supplies available for the military and to keep essential phases of the civilian economy moving, Nelson said, the services will be directed to reexamine and lower estimates of requirements.

Labor, said Nelson, is to have an important role in the new WPB. The Labor Production Division will continue under Wendell Lund, who will report directly to Nelson. Lund's labor advisory committee becomes WPB's labor policy committee and will study labor production problems and advise Nelson.

D. C. Merchants Welcome 700 Women Distributing Pamphlets on Price Ceiling

Seven thousand District merchants yesterday gave cordial welcomes to nearly 700 women volunteers who distributed booklets from the Office of Price Administration to acquaint them with general price ceiling regulations.

So successful was the distribution that Whitney Leary, District director of OPA, predicted that it will be the signal for similar distribution of information throughout the country, in addition to five States now following the plan.

The list of workers, named "victory volunteers" by Commissioner J. Russell Young, will be retained as a citywide organization, and heads of the civilian defense volunteers office at 2324 F Street Northwest are anxious to have the roll of women extended, even if they can devote only two hours a day. Volunteers also may register at the white booth at Pennsylvania Avenue and E Street in Post Square.

The District's program made up a part of the distribution in five States, in which booklets on price ceiling regulations went to 450,000 retailers. Fifty thousand women delivered the information in New York, New Jersey, Pennsylvania, Maryland, Delaware and the District.

The literature had to do principally with price posting of 200 cost-of-living commodities and the manner in which the prices are to be displayed.

The OPA divided Washington into 15 regions, covering the 98 defense areas originally created by the Office of Civilian Defense. First to report were representatives of the municipal center and east central areas, in which more than 100 stores were covered in a few hours. Mrs. Etta Lisenby headed the group.

In most cases, volunteers used public transportation facilities.

New Wartime Credo

Just a Face With Nothing Inside —Lo, the Poor Deb Is No More

By Amy Porter

Associated Press Staff Writer

New York, July 8.—Maybe, it's farewell to debutantes.

One of their very own—the rich, the social, the glamorous Lucy Aldrich, daughter of Banker Winthrop Aldrich—said today:

"The debutante just isn't any more. None of the girls I know can bear to be called by that name."

Scornfully, Miss Aldrich, who spoke at a youth forum, described the debutante-that-was:

"She was a girl who had an enormous coming out party . . . she stayed up late, she slept till five, she was photographed with a friend at a restaurant, she went to another party at night . . . she got so tired her parents had to send her away to rest.

"She was just a face, a lot of expensive clothes—and nothing inside. She never had a good time, never did anything interesting."

Along with the "obsolete debutante," Miss Aldrich nominated for oblivion the debutante's alter ego, the glamour girl, who, she said, "was a bad imitation of a movie star without any talent."

More cheerfully, Miss Aldrich told of the new wartime credo now guiding her and her friends. All are training for constructive work, she said. She herself is studying stenography, two friends are training to be nurses' aides, another girl is studying chemistry.

"Not many of us are rushing into jobs in war plants, because we believe we'll need education after this war," she said.

"None of us crave possessions. We don't want to be tied down by belongings. . . . We no longer think New York is the only place. We belong to the whole of America. . . . Perhaps after the war we'll marry and live in other cities and commute back and forth in our own little planes."

Remember to pay your bills before Friday !

Being a Post reader, you keep your store accounts current, of course.

But maybe you've been busy with war activities and have overlooked a bill or two.

And this year there is a special reason why you should pay up your store accounts.

Under new Government regulations, charge account purchases must be paid for by the tenth of the second month after the month in which the purchases are made.

If they are not, the account becomes "frozen"—and you cannot use it until your bill is paid.

The stores are eager to keep serving you. They don't want to "freeze" your account. So they urge you to pay your bills now and keep your charge account open and active.

Remember: anything you bought and charged in May must be paid for by this Friday, July 10th.

TODAY 12:30 NOON TO 9 P.M. at Kann's

Congressmen And Foes Get Election Gas

suit of legislative business." State legislators are simlarly privileged within their home States.

Employes and officials of Federal, State, local and foreign governments also are entitled to ask for "C" books for "performing official businesses or carrying out an official function." However, all so privileged, including Congressmen, must show that they have done their best to form a car-sharing plan with their neighbors.

"Special" Rations for Voters

"Special" rations presumably of an amount needed to do the "special" job and no more will be granted to carry persons to and from polls for purposes of voting at general and primary elections, as well as to duly appointed election officials and poll watchers, the regulations stated.

Any "bona-fide" candidate for public office will also be entitled to extra gasoline "for purposes essential to the prosecution of his candidacy." In this way, OPA attempted to free itself from the charge that it provided incumbent Congressmen an unfair advantage over their election opponents by giving Congressmen gas to travel around in their home districts, virtually as they please.

Local Board Decides

The mount of gasoline a Congressman receives will depend to some extent on the attitude of his local rationing board, although the legislator is left considerable leeway in deciding how much of his driving is "official."

In the case of the rationing system now in effect, unlimited "X" cards were awarded virtually for the asking. A check of District OPA records by The Post disclosed that about 50 per cent of the members of each house had requested "X" cards.

Henderson also announced tentative plans to create a 50-mile wide border area immediately west of the present rationed area "to keep the rationed area from fraying at the edge." In this zone, gasoline users from the rationed area will not be able to buy gasoline, either for their cars or any other purpose.

Alternate Plan Weighed

This plan is still subject to change, however, Henderson said, in favor of an alternate solution developed in the last few days. Details of this alternative solution were not announced.

The five other purposes for which motorists may obtain "special" rations (in addition to campaigning and electioneering) follow:

1. To obtain medical treatment or necessary food and supplies.
2. To return an automobile or boat to an owner's residence.
3. To operate a car or boat for demonstratio npurposes (restricted to 5 gallons a vehicle a month).
4. To transport personnel and equipment on scientific expeditions.
5. To operate a vehicle on tests or experiments essential to the war effort.

Special Registration Points

Special registration centers will be set up for Senators and Representatives in the Capitol. Senators will register in the office of Col. Edwin A. Halsey, secretary of the Senate. Representatives will register in the office of Kenneth Romney, sergeant-at-arms for the House. Members of congressional staffs will not be permitted to register in the Capitol, but must go to one of the 28 designated schools in the District.

The thirteen groups entitled to one or more "C" books (in addition to legislators and public officials) include the following:

1. To carry mail.
2. Travel from school to school by public school teachers and officials.
3. Wholesale delivery of newspapers, magazines and periodicals.
4. For carrying nonportable photographic equipment. (Newspaper photographers and reporters with portable equipment are not entitled to "C" cards although they may secure "B" cards to the extent of their needs, according to an opinion rendered yesterday by a member of OPA's legal staff.)
5. Doctors, dentists, public health nurses, etc., making necessary professional calls.
6. Ministers.
7. Farmers.
8. To transport farm and marine workers and to aid in the recruiting of other kinds of essential workers.
9. Members of the armed forces.
10. To travel in connection with work essential to the operation of an essential industry, public utility or military establishment.
11. To perform services of a specialized nature for essential activities.
12. To market agricultural, mining and medical equipment essential to the war effort.
13. To permit a motorcycle delivery or messenger service to operate. (Motorcycles are provided "D" books adjusted to the requirements of motorcycles on a proportionate basis.)

Exclusions Listed

Government vehicles, ambulances, hearses, taxicabs, fleet operators and vehicles held by dealers for sale, are excluded from "A" ration privileges, but their operators will be able to apply directly to local rationing boards for "service" rations.

Cars to which rations have been issued will be required to display at all times a sticker identifying the class of ration issued. Owners of cars who fail to apply for basic "A" rations today, tomorrow, or Saturday, may apply to their local rationing boards after July 24.

Schools will be open for District motorists today and tomorrow between 7 a. m. and 9 p. m., and between 7 a. m. and 1 p. m. Saturday.

Hundley Case Near Jury; Last Witness Heard

The case of Hiram Ben Hundley, Washington tire merchant accused of violating OPA rationing regulations, was expected to go to the jury in District Court today.

Justice T. Alan Goldsborough yesterday heard final prayers by Defense Attorney Henry I. Quinn and Assistant United States Attorney John L. Laskey, and may be able to charge the jurors this afternoon, if closing statements for both sides are completed in time.

Hundley, who operates a tire business at 3446 Fourteenth Street Northwest, is charged with selling new tires as used to the Star Publishing Co., the Premier Purchasing Co. and the Diamond Service Co.

Final testimony in the trial was heard yesterday from a Government rebuttal witness, Capt. James M. Cawood, U. S. A., formerly a motor vehicle inspector for the District government.

Cawood expressed doubt, under questioning by Laskey, that he had approved Hundley's tires for sale. He was shown several tires taken from stock piled in the courtroom, and asked whether he was responsible for the "okay" marks on them.

"I don't think so," he said.

Cross-examined by Quinn, Cawood admitted that he had inspected and approved tires for two other companies. He testified also that he had returned to the Cherner Motor Co., one of the firms, and erased his initials from about 25 tires that, he said, he had approved in February as saleable.

Asked whether he had made his second visit to Cherner's because "there was some mistake about the markings," the witness replied in the affirmative.

Ohio Society Holds Program Today

Gas Shortage Relief Forecast As Senate Unit Backs Pipelines

A 93-million-dollar program for stepping up the flow of petroleum products to the East through two new pipe lines and the proposed Florida Barge Canal was approved by the Senate Commerce Committee yesterday.

Eleven committee members voted for the measure, six of them by proxy, and three voted against. The bill, already approved by the House, is expected to come up for Senate action next Wednesday.

Before the committee when the vote was taken was a report from Maj. J. R. Parten, transportation director for Petroleum Coordinator Ickes, declaring that the current pipe-line reconstruction program might help make possible meeting the East Coast's petroleum needs by the end of the year.

Surplus Predicted

Major Parten told the committee that with the new program, deliveries to the East would be boosted to 1,429,000 barrels of oil a day.

This total, he said, is based on the current 954,000 barrels a day shipped overland, plus 275,000 barrels a day to come through the pipe-line program, and 200,000 barrels a day by tanker.

Flow of oil at this prospective rate would produce a surplus of 62,000 barrels a day over the East's estimated rationed daily demand requirements this year, Parten said, but he added that the war program could be expected to cut into such a surplus. Parten listed nine major pipe-line projects, all but one scheduled for completion by December this year.

The canal pipe-line bill divides the 93 million dollar authorization in this way:

For the 92-mile barge canal across Florida, 44 million dollars.

For enlarging and extending the southern intercoastal waterway from Florida to Texas, 26 million dollars.

For building a petroleum pipe line from the Tinsley Oil Field near Yazoo, Miss., to Charleston, S. C., or Savannah, Ga., 13 million dollars.

For construction of pipe-line facilities across Florida, from Port St. Joe or any other point on the Gulf Coast, to the vicinity of Jacksonville, 10 million dollars.

Amendment Written In

The committee wrote into the bill an amendment, sponsored by Senator Lucas (Democrat) of Illinois to permit closer spacing of oil wells up to 3300 feet deep in sand or limestone formations. The plan would permit one well for every 10 acres in sand formation and one well in each 20 acres of limestone formation.

Under present regulations of the oil coordinator, wells of this type are limited to one for each 40 acres, it was explained. The amendment would bar the coordinator from ordering wider spacing.

Voting for the measure in committee were Senator Pepper, sponsor of the bill in the Senate, and Senators Radcliffe, Mead, Bilbo, Hill, and by proxy, Wallgren, Clark of Missouri, Caraway, O'Daniel, Overton and Lee. Voting against approval were Senators Bailey, Vandenberg and Burton.

Appleby Describes British Conditions

Undersecretary of Agriculture Paul H. Appleby, recently returned from England, related some of his experiences in that war-torn country at an institute in Cook Hall, Howard University, last night.

He told the gathering, sponsored by the university and the Non-Partisan Council of the Alpha Kappa Alpha sorority, that while Britons are paying 100 per cent excess profit taxes, they do not consider it a handicap to their war production.

Dwelling on the heavy tax load borne by the British, the decentralization of wealth of the upper classes since World War I, and the "poor getting poorer," the Undersecretary said the English have no complaints.

Argentine Anticlimax

When the Argentine freighter, the Rio Tercero, was torpedoed off the East Coast of the United States by an Axis submarine, the people of Argentina strongly demanded that their government do something about it. Accordingly, a strong note of protest was sent to Berlin. The sequel throws a revealing and disturbing light on the attitude of President Castillo and his colleagues. Berlin's weasel words of explanation as to how the Rio Tercero came to be torpedoed have been promptly accepted at their face value, and the incident has been declared closed. Furthermore, Argentina has specifically accepted Berlin's dictation in the matter of its shipping—by ordering its ships henceforth to avoid eastern United States ports. Instead they are told to dock in ports on the Gulf of Mexico.

So Argentina, which began to march bravely up the hill, has now marched down again. Despite the statement of one Argentine official that "this action does not signify acceptance of the blockade announced by Germany," this is precisely the effect of the action taken by the South American republic. It is not a very pleasant spectacle which Argentina, under Castillo, presents. The authorities at Buenos Aires have chosen to bow the knee to the enemies of mankind, let alone of this hemisphere, instead of joining with the 18 American republics that have broken with them.

U-Boat

Holding back the Navy Department in comprehensively combating the U-boat has hitherto been its fealty to traditions and orthodox practices. Now the department is showing a commendable enterprise in relaxing its standards and exploring new ideas. All owners of "seagoing craft" have been asked to volunteer, and up to 2000 are already said to have been commissioned for service. Old specifications have been waived, and the sole test now will be "usefulness." Gone, also, are the physical standards for the crew; if they can sail a boat, presumably, that will be enough. Moreover, a new type of patrol boat containing a "revolutionary" design is reported to be under test in the department. It can be turned out at the rate of 3000 a month. Simultaneously out of the research laboratory of the General Motors Corp., according to a Navy release, has come a new lightweight, high-speed Diesel engine which is held to be admirably adapted for sub chasing. In other words, the Navy Department is rolling up its sleeves. That is all that is required to make the audacious U-boat commanders find it as dangerous to operate in our waters as they do in Britain's.

The British have licked the submarine in their coastal waters precisely by doing what we are now embarking upon. Light craft of all descriptions were mobilized. There was no question about either the physical standards of the owner or the specifications of his ship—just as there were none when the job arose of getting the British out of Dunkirk. All that is required of the craft owner is familiarity with the strip of coastline he undertakes to patrol. To be sure, the antisubmarine campaign is a job for Britain's aviation as well as Britain's surface craft. That will be the case with us. And we have no doubt that in due course we shall reap the same results as the British have. What has irked the American people is that it should have taken so long to embark upon measures which have proved so effective in Britain.

Say It With Medals

How the scrap metal campaign will be affected by a touching little ceremony in New York the other day will never be known. But we should imagine that the campaign did not get exactly a boost. It appears that the organizers of the recent "New York at War" parade were so impressed with their own handiwork that they decided to hold a love feast, and to say it with medals. Logically some such follow-up ceremony should have originated in the world outside the sponsorate, so to speak. But the fact that there was no such sequel did not deter the sponsors. They simply made up for what must have seemed to them a shocking lack of becoming gratitude on the part of the populace. Everybody who had a part in arranging the parade was on hand—Mayor LaGuardia, who thought up this demonstration of what New York was contributing to the war; Grover A. Whalen, chairman of the committee, and the 160 members of the committee itself.

Mr. Whalen, of course, had to greet the Mayor. He has been greeting celebrities officially and unofficially these many years. Accordingly it was perhaps natural that, even at a love feast, Mr. Whalen could not help but follow his time-honored custom of accompanying one of his felicitous speeches with a token of esteem. This turned out to be a medal. Such a charming gesture could not fail to evoke a sympathetic response from the usually less than urbane Mayor. He, too, made a speech, and he, too, decorated Mr. Whalen. Now, as we say, this is hardly the way to encourage New Yorkers to dig out their spare metal when there seems enough to spare for such an affecting ceremony as this. No doubt the demonstration was a whale of a success. It probably called for a love feast, but New Yorkers would be excused if they thought that an exchange of flowers would have been suitable enough—and, since the country is at war, little ones at that.

Control Of Labor

More or less control over labor would seem to be the inevitable result of the tremendous war demand for it. Brig. Gen. Frank J. McSherry estimates that at least 10,500,000 more workers will have to be taken on this year by war industries to reach the President's production goal. With the anticipated shift of about 3,400,000 men from industry into the military services, that means that close to 14 million additional war industry jobs will have to be filled this year. Next year, as the pace of production is stepped up, and still more men are called into service, additional millions of workers will be needed by the war industries.

Such a vast call for labor has already produced shortages of skilled and semi-skilled labor. Yet reserves of unskilled labor are at a low ebb. Consequently, the expanding labor demands of war industries will have to be met in very large part by taking men and women off less essential nondefense work and transferring them to war work. Calls will also have to be made on those who have never worked before—women in the home and young people arriving at working age.

This is a task that will challenge the best efforts of the War Man Power Commission. The problem is whether the task can be accomplished by compulsion or the voluntary method. While the commission is gradually tightening its controls over the labor market, its mobilization plan is still based on voluntary recruiting. However, steps have been taken recently to put extra pressure on employers who fail to cooperate in the commission's plans for placing workers where they are most needed. On the other hand, employes who refuse to follow suggestions to transfer to a more essential job may find themselves unexpectedly certified for military service.

If this kind of semivoluntary cooperation fails to achieve desired results, outright Government control over hiring, firing, and transfer of workers from less to more essential jobs will indubitably follow at no distant date. General McSherry complains in particular of the extremely high labor turnover in war industries. This is attributed to labor pirating by employers—that is, offers of higher wages or other inducements to lure men away from their present jobs to other jobs that may be of no greater, or possibly of less, importance to our war effort. Wendell Lund, head of WPB's labor production section, has likewise issued a warning that labor turnover in the armament industries must stop.

Obviously any compulsory plan for keeping workers on a specified job or shifting them to specified jobs calls for a formulation of Government wage policy. Paul V. McNutt, who is chairman of the War Man Power Commission, has just informed the United States Employment Service that it may deny labor priorities to industries "in which wages and conditions of work are not at least as advantageous to a worker referred to a job opening therein as those prevailing for similar establishments in the industrial area." This move is patently designed to further Nation-wide standardization and stabilization of wages. Indeed, job "freezing" or compulsory placement of workers in jobs would be quite impracticable without such standardization.

The task of mobilizing labor for maximum efficiency has undoubtedly been retarded by reluctance to substitute official compulsion for persuasion. However, the public has to be prepared for such drastic interference with customary rights of individuals to choose their own work and quit their jobs at will. Compulsory control over the labor market will meet with a better reception in the end by avoiding a too abrupt transition to wartime labor regimentation.

Rubber Policy

Surely the President's remarks on rubber at his Tuesday's press conference flouted the basic principle of equality of sacrifice with which we embarked upon this people's war. If he lived near an oil well, Mr. Roosevelt said, and had new tires on his car, he did not know why he should not use it. The reason he should not use his car—at least unnecessarily—must be plain enough. The Nation is at war, rubber is a vital element in our warmaking, and rubber is short. Therefore, there is just as much reason for all sections of the Nation to conserve rubber as to supply the military services with man power.

The confusion about rubber seems to go on endlessly. At one and the same time the President hints darkly at commandeering and exculpates people in the oil States who still drive as usual. Both the hint and the exculpation will encourage rubber imprudence. People will run their cars more for the same reason that they run to the shops whenever a rationing order is threatened—just to get as much service as possible before none is left. Indeed, the American people seemed already to have concluded that sufficient unto the day is the evil thereof in regard to rubber prospects. Certainly the doubling up which spread throughout the country when the seriousness of the rubber situation first came to light has languished. And it seems the consensus that this falling off was directly attributable to the succession of contradictory statements which have flowed out of Washington.

So we have thrown away the opportunity of mobilizing the voluntary cooperation of the people in a matter which is singularly vital to the war effort. Now there must be compulsion. And it corresponds with the national interest that the compulsion to save rubber shall be Nation-wide. Rubber, to be sure, could be saved through a gasoline policy, but the means as well as the end is important, and the straightforward thing is to adopt a rubber policy. At least that would dispose of the objection to a gasoline policy of the kind that the President set forth.

At Voronezh

The Russians continue to deny the German claim that Voronezh has been captured and insist that the fighting is well to the west of that vital railroad center. It cannot be gainsaid, however, and the Russians are not glossing over the unpleasant fact, that the Red army in the Don River sector is very hard pressed. The Nazi drive from Kursk during the past 10 days has been the most considerable and the most successful since the end of the winter lull. The loss of the railroad line which runs through Voronezh from Moscow to Rostov would be a severe blow to the Russians, since that line is the only important north-south rail route from the capital to the Caucasus.

It is evident that Hitler is sparing neither men nor materiel in his present offensive. The obvious purpose is to separate Russia's fighting forces in the central sector from those in the Caucasus. Even if the Russian claims of German losses are exaggerated, it is evident that Hitler is paying a heavy price for his gains. But these gains cannot be underestimated. Once established in force on the Don and astride the Moscow-Rostov railway, the Nazis would be in a position to launch a three-pronged drive on the great oil region between the Black Sea and the Caucasus. One column could move south from Voronezh, another east from Taganrog toward Rostov and a third across the Kerch Strait from the Crimea. It is also possible that from bases which they now hold on the northern shore of the Black Sea, the Axis may try an amphibious operation against the Caucasus.

Thus the Nazi gains of the past few weeks have been very real. Moreover, even after a year of war in Russia, the driving force in Hitler's machine is still extremely powerful. Both factors combine to put the Red army in danger. Yet the fact remains that in the two months that have elapsed since the offensive on Kerch was started (that action marked the end of the winter lull), Nazi gains have been inconsiderable in comparison with the gains made in the first two months of fighting on the Eastern Front. And they have been achieved at a very much heavier price. In a war of rapid attrition such as is now raging in Russia, the Nazis do not have all the advantages. Which helps to explain Hitler's haste in achieving those objectives on the Eastern Front which have long eluded him and the seeming recklessness with which he has thrown his forces into the fight.

RAIN

We are swimming in an ocean of water the sky;
and the tops of the elms float slowly like sea-weeds up through the large cool waves.
And fins of metal and feathers strike up and out of the expanse as if they would throw themselves from this ocean, break clear of its waves and reach untouched, perfect space.

Letters To The Editor

All communications must carry the writer's name and address, though pen names are permitted at the editor's discretion. In fairness to other correspondents, letters should be held to 300 words. Letters are subject to condensation.

Second Front Now

The British have been badly outmaneuvered in Libya and Egypt. Sevastopol has fallen. The Nazis have opened still another sector on the Russian front. The Chinese doggedly fight on.

And here we sit, in magnificent and ponderous solitude, allowing the Nazis to choose the time and place they want to play. It seems to me that it's about time we chose the time, and we chose the place—in short—that we took the offensive.

It seems to me that the only logical, intelligent thing for us to do is to join with the British and any other continental forces there are available for the immediate opening of a second land front in Europe.

The Nazis are the spearhead of our enemies. They have thrown their all into the Russian front. It's up to us to adopt their own tactic of divide and conquer—divide their forces, ease the pressure on the Russians and attack from both sides.

And now! A READER.

Women's Navy Auxiliary

In this morning's Post you published a letter from Indignant Reader (Alexandria, Va., June 27), outlining a few of the unfair provisions in the pending bill to establish a woman's auxiliary organization for the United States Navy.

"Indignant" is right. By arbitrarily demanding a college degree, the Navy is passing up valuable and well-trained girls who would make officers in which the Navy could take pride.

Why not let the Navy conduct Nation-wide examinations open to college and noncollege women, thereby selecting those with the highest results as candidates for officers' training? It would be the survival of the fittest, with the Navy benefiting most. VERA R. GLASER.

District Salvage

Save your waste! Turn it into war goods! All over the country the people are being taught that scraps of this and that may be vital in winning the war. People in the 48 States are beginning to realize that scraps and Japs have some correlation. But what's the matter with the people in the District of Columbia?

In the rubber collection drive, the District's score was almost zero-zero. Perhaps that might be excused by contending that there is very little scrap rubber in the District. But what about all the other scrap programs? Waste paper, for instance, is a very important commodity. Yet tons and tons of waste paper and usable boxes are burned here every week. It seems impossible to get it into the proper channels for re-use.

In every other city in the Nation junk dealers advertise for waste paper. Virtually everywhere else the Scouts or the Salvation Army or some other organization collects paper and makes a profit on it while helping in the war effort. Yet the District has none of this.

What's the matter with the Capital City? Is it setting the kind of an example it wants the rest of the country to follow? Isn't it about time for Washington to wake up and realize that theres' a war on? Then how about making it possible for people to turn in their waste paper?

Some More About Tanks

As a former commander of a section of Renault tanks in a recent but forgotten war, may I thank you for your vigorous and accurate condemnation of that incredible contraption, the M-3 or so-called General Grant medium tank.

In reply to your editorial, the chief of Army ordnance, Maj. Gen. Levin H. Campbell, jr., truthfully observes that the French 75-millimeter cannon with modern powders has superior velocity and range, that the stabilized platform upon which it is operated is a tremendous improvement upon German tanks, and that the general design and construction of the mechanical equipment of the M-3 tank is remarkably advanced.

It is only the more amazing that with all these advantages the M-3 medium tank remains unsuited for any kind of tactical operation except one in which the enemy kindly keeps in front or to the right of the American tanks.

The 75 cannon is cramped into the right-hand side of the M-3 tank; it can shoot ahead and to the right. In any combat of tanks, except a direct attack straight ahead, the men in the M-3 are murderously handicapped from the start. It is standard practice to try to trick enemy tank units into attacking a machine gun nest or some other strong point, so that one or more pieces of artillery to the right or left can pick them off like ducks. Consequently, the attacking tanks must be prepared to shift their fire suddenly while they run to previously appointed cover. If possible, concealed reserve tanks, artillery or machine guns must remain ready to lay down an effective barrage on such an ambush, at one or more points. Even a Boy Scout could quickly and clearly explain to the chief of Army ordnance that his M-3 tanks could not run to cover or even continue their attack, and at the same time, fire at artillery ambushed on their left or their rear, except with the machine guns and the 37-millimeter cannon, which precisely lack the stabilized platforms which, the general points out, are essential to accurate fire when moving.

On mountain roads, as in Yugoslavia; in ambushes against enemy tanks, and in many other cases which will confront the hard pressed tank units of our armies, the 75-millimeter cannon will have to remain a useless monument to the imbecility of arrogant military bureaucrats, who did not deign to study the extensive experience in tank warfare which has been the subject of abundant German, French, Spanish and other military literature readily available at the magnificent library of the War College.

Many months ago I asked a staff officer why on earth the M-3 tank had its most important gun awkwardly set in the lower right-hand corner. He eyed me scornfully as he replied, "Our tanks are designed for attack, not for retreat."

Your editorial, if effective, may save many lives and possibly battles. You may be certain that not only myself, a former combatant, but all those who have to fight in the M-3 tanks against better designed enemy units, are indebted to you.

New Yorker Agrees

I was highly amused to read Hymen Kipnis' letter. More so because I am a New Yorker and have been here for 17 months. I agree 100 per cent with everything he says. No town can be as crowded as New York, and the buses and streetcars here could never get jammed as full as they do in New York. Yet everyone here expects to walk on a trolley or bus and find at least 11 empty seats by the windows waiting for his selection.

It's unfortunate that New Yorkers have to criticize Washington, thus showing their traditional bad taste and boobery. Everything in Washington suits me fine. I wish I never had to leave it, except that the way they are decentralizing agencies to New York, it looks as if that city will have to be decentralized too.

And as for the girls, I agree with him too—only more so. The "poor little working girl" who comes to Washington had to heat her bath water on the stove and never saw a pair of silk stockings. A telephone and maid service were something unheard of. But when "poor little working girl" arrives in Washington, she expects hot and cold running water, telephone by her bedside, a maid to answer her summons, a complete laundry for her to wash her ginghams in, a big room within "walking distance"—all on her $1440. The things girls expect for their money here cannot be obtained in any town without paying for them. If they were content to live in Washington on their pay just the way they lived at home, all this complaining would cease. And I agree with H. K. that it's about time it did! BUSY ME.

Draft Discrimination

Your paper having always fought for fairness and equality in all matters, we trust you will fight for equality in bringing to the attention of the Draft Board the fact that while they are deferring young men who got married since the enactment of the selective service law because of their being married, whether or not they married to avoid the draft, no such favors have been given young men in the armed forces who marry since joining the Army. Those young men should at least get the same protection in marriage as those who have not given their country an hour's service. Why the discrimination? If the young man who has not given our grand country any service gets the benefit and protection of our Government, he should be required to fight for it the same as the man who has rendered our country at least some service; else the latter should be released from Army service. There is a discrimination there which people are unable to understand. It should be cleared up as soon as possible, else we fear there will be national dissatisfaction.

Even-Stephen

I had often tried to fathom the reasoning behind the Nazi policy of executing 20, 50, or even 200 French civilians for the sniping down of one German soldier, until suddenly I reached bottom in my ponderings and came to this conclusion: Assuming that none but Divinity is without a mite of evil in his moral make-up, it must therefore require the aggregate evil of 20, 50, or even 200 Frenchmen to equal the concentrated deviltry in one Nazi gestapo.

The Post Impressionist

The Cow

Elsie is dead—peace to her bovine soul—but the fantasy for which she is responsible has not been interred with her bones. Ever since she was installed in her silken boudoir as queen of the fair, through the undeniable genius of a super press agent—we have had an infinite variety of Elsie's counterparts.

They range from the whimsically gentle mother cow who tends her magazine-ad garden with one hoof while correcting her daughter's pose with another, to the career-woman type pictured on paper milk cartons. Incidentally, the cows on these cartons also speak in verse, as they extol the qualities of their wares.

Such glamorizations are bound to bring chuckles to all who have even the slightest tinge of the rural in their backgrounds, and frequently the chuckles are wry. To have laughted at all at the cow in my own childhood was unthought of. She occupied a position of importance in the family economy that well justifies referring to her as the cow, and, like many an official with dictatorial learnings, the more power she possessed, the more she seemed to realize it, and the more autocratic she became in its exercise. (The term she is used generically, but it covers a succession of individuals—for who, since Elsie, can deny that a cow is an individual?)

We lived in a small town whose outskirts were ample enough to cover the sanitary regulations as to the keeping of domestic animals, but which did not separate us well enough from our neighbors to offset the cow's aggressive nature. There never passed a week without somebody coming to pound on the door and inform us that the cow was in Mr. So-and-So's patch eating up his corn, or his peas, or his beans.

These predatory invasions were made possible by my father's failure to keep the fences in repair, but when it came to driving the cow back through the hole that should not have been there, he was never on hand. The job fell on the innocent members of the family who got what bitter consolation they could, as Bossy was forced homeward, by muttering to themselves that new fences could be put up for the amount of a year's damages to neighbors' crops. But that was a logic which father never accepted.

Home again, the cow would simply stand and lower her head belligerently as if daring us to make something of it. Or, probably for pure meanness, she would turn and seek out that corner of her own pasture where the forbidden fruit of the wild onion or the dog fennel grew, and the milk would be bitter for days.

Even the sweetest cow, temperamentally speaking, still presents mechanical difficulties that give the lie to the pretty fiction of the accommodating cows on the paper cartons. One cannot impale on her horns a note asking that service be discontinued for the middle two weeks of June, and go gaily off on a vacation. June and January, morning and night, a cow is there to be milked. For this reason, my mother and father could never take a trip away from home at the same time. Likewise, a Fourth of July picnic or a Sunday afternoon drive must be terminated by milking time. Even in the halcyon days when we had a hired man, this was so, for the hired man always savored his holidays as persistently as the cow her cud.

Nor did the matter end with getting the milk. Once extracted, it must still be strained, stored, churned and the buttermilk disposed of, and even the straining presented a problem. A line for dishcloths hung on the back porch, and the special cloth my mother kept for straining the milk was always getting mixed with these. To distinguish between them was one of the first things any newcomer to the household must learn.

The milk itself seemed always to inherit the cow's perverse nature. When put in the churn to "turn," it would either turn too rapidly, so that a churning must be done at the most inconvenient times, or it would not turn at all when the need was greatest and the icebox bare of butter.

In the former case, there seemed invariably two churnings to be done in succession, and in the latter, the chief expedient involved rolling the churn in from the kitchen to stand by the bedroom fireplace all night so that it would be ready for churning before breakfast.

In the family blessed (?) with a cow, there must be added to the certainty of death and taxes, the churning. My mother mastered the task so well that she could work the dasher with one hand, hold a book with the other, and rock the baby's cradle with her foot.

During childhood, this sound of the dasher, coming remotely from the kitchen in the early morning, had a drowsy and peaceful effect. Later, in home-from-college vacations, I began to loathe the whole process which led to the production of buttermilk. Among the regular purchasers of this bovine by-product was an old man who worked at the sawmill and stopped every morning on his way to work at 8 o'clock to leave his tin bucket on the front porch. And always, always, always, in setting down the bucket, he would bang it loudly on the floor to let us know it was there. Patiently, repeatedly, exasperatedly, my mother would explain how unnecessary it was to wake us up. The buttermilk would be ready and waiting when he came for it that night. But to the end, he was as bull-headed as the cow herself.

Nowadays, a dairy serves our town. Its barns are picturesque; the cows do look contented. Thus, even into a semirural area, the Elsie influence creeps. What effect this evasion of realism will have on future generations I leave to the psychologists. As for me, with the kind permission of Gelett Burgess:

I never saw a cultured cow—
It would be fun to see one—
But I can tell you here and now
I doubt there'll ever be one!

Today and Tomorrow

By Walter Lippmann

Sursum Corda

THIS IS the third summer during which we have to steel ourselves against the kind of false objectivity which paralyzes the will. France was ruined by it in 1940 when the French generals, making what they thought was an expert and professional estimate of German strength, concluded the armistice and took the French fleet and the French Empire out of the war. Britain would have been lost too if Mr. Churchill had accepted the paper calculations, if Mr. Roosevelt had listened to the experts who had proved so thoroughly that Britain was lost. The same over-objective experts were equally certain in 1941 that the panzers would go through Russia like a knife through butter and that the Soviet regime would collapse. We are now hearing from them again, this time about what is going to happen if all resistance collapses everywhere and the Axis powers attain all their strategic objectives.

LIPPMANN

The trouble with this kind of thinking is that in the laudable desire not to indulge in wishful thinking, these prophecies leave out of account, when they do not actually destroy, the capacity of men to think wilfully. The false professionalism of the French generals caused the totally unnecessary surrender of the dominant Allied position in the Mediterranean. The false professionalism of some of our experts, if they had been listened to in 1940, would have caused us to deny to Britain that small tangible assistance and that hope of greater assistance which were certainly one of the decisive military factors in the Battle of Britain. The same false professionalism would in 1941 have caused us to abandon Russia. Let us not be misled by it now as the tide of battle mounts to its climax for this year.

NECESSARY as it is to calculate the position and the prospects and all the possible eventualities, there is no way in a war of these dimensions, as there is in war games played by academic militarists, to prophesy what is going to happen by making an inventory of tangible assets and liabilities. In the autumn of 1940 and in the autumn of 1941 the actual position was wholly unlike that which the calculators had predicted. They could not calculate, because these things cannot be measured quantitatively, the quality of men and their commanders and their weapons and of the people behind them.

Yet war, as distinguished from a war game, is not a game of chess but a conflict of wills. By what calculation could it have been foretold that at Midway our fliers would get through to the carriers though nine out of ten in one wave of the attack were lost in the attempt.

It is with this philosophy that we must reject as half truths, and therefore vitally false, the vast panoramas of disaster which are being offered to us as the possible probabilities of a great junction of Japan and Germany through China, Russia, India, the Middle East and Africa. Whether all this is conceivable depends in part, perhaps even finally, upon whether the people of the United Nations become fatalistically resigned to the idea or whether they are invincibly opposed to it. For whether men live or die when they are ill depends not only upon the doctors, the nurses, and the medicines but on whether they have the will to live.

THESE PANORAMIC pictures of disaster, which are so easy to write, are half truths, and therefore false, if for no other reason than that they do not really take into account the fact that America is at war. Our present contributions are, of course, taken into account, and so too is the growth of our armed power. But this is still no true measure of the decisive differences between the position now and the position in the summer of 1940 and 1941.

We can measure the true difference only by realizing that if Britain had been conquered in 1940, and then Russia in 1941, Hitler would have been master of the Western World before the United States had even begun to mobilize. It would have been impossible to oppose Japan without opening South America and perhaps even Canada to an easy invasion from Nazi Europe. Today we are not only mobilized, but, even more decisively, we have learned from Pearl Harbor, we have learned from our own mobilization, we have learned from the submarine war in our own waters that for us there is no conceivable peace without victory.

We did not know that in 1940 or in 1941. We know it in 1942, and the effect of that knowledge, exhibited at Wake, at Bataan and at Midway, is to make it certain that we shall use the power we are developing, relentlessly and remorselessly. It means that we are no longer merely an arsenal exporting weapons to those with whom we sympathize, but a great nation at war fitting out armadas which go forth unceasingly.

THUS IT is now impossible for the enemy to win a final decision in any of his many theaters of war. He must stand everlastingly on guard, wherever he is. He can never demobilize. He can never remain at rest. He can never assimilate the people or the land he occupies. We disturb him everywhere. We arouse men against him everywhere, and so nothing he holds is won, and nothing we lose, is lost.

This is the supreme factor in 1942. It was not present in 1940 or in 1941. Let us not forget it. Let us not allow ourselves to be robbed of it by the academic and pedantic military calculators who never once since this titanic struggle was begun have ever judged truly the spirit of the nations and the soul of man.

Discontent In Ecuador

By Jean A. Crawford

Hope For Revenge

Quito, Ecuador.

"OUR ONLY hope is revenge," an Ecuadorean lieutenant told me, referring to the settlement between his country and Peru. This opinion, expressed during a day-long but ride between Tulcan and Quito, summarizes the viewpoint of practically every Ecuadorean with whom I talked over a four-week period of travel and residence in the country.

"We don't hate the United States, nor are we pro-Axis," one of the leading newspapermen in Guayaquil said, "but we can't help feeling resentful over the settlement. We were the victims not only of Peru, but of the Rio Conference as well." This attitude is partly the result of national sentiment built up during the war. Radio stations used to announce: "This is station——, operating in Ecuador, an Amazonian country." When the terms of the Rio Conference settlement were published, flags flew at half-mast, and the announcement was changed to read: "This is station——, operating in Ecuador, a country mutilated on the altar of Pan-American unity."

INFORMED Ecuadoreans admit that they are in the position of a defeated country, and that they would have lost even Guayaquil if neutral nations had not intervened. They were glad to see the war stopped at any price, but expected that the Amazonian section of Ecuador and most of the invaded Oro Province would be restored.

Dissatisfied with the conduct of the war, the people now blame the present administration. They accuse President Carlos Arroyo del Rio, never popular with the masses, of not preparing the country, although he had been in office only six months when Peru attacked. He has also been accused of stationing the best troops of the country in the provincial capitals—where revolutionary action might start—rather than sending them to the Oro Province to fight.

Leading objector was Captain Leonidas Plaza, who recently published an open letter of condemnation in the German-subsidized Quito newspaper "El Debate." May 28, Captain Plaza led an assault on the capitol building, during which three policemen were killed and seven civilians injured. Numerous arrests followed, and Dr. Galo Plaza, brother of Leonidas and leading candidate for the next presidential term, is still being detained.

Other factors causing discontent in Ecuador result naturally from the conflict with Peru and the present world war. The cost of living has risen noticeably. Increased prices for domestic goods can be traced to three principal factors: (1) higher taxes to support national defense measures; (2) increased transportation charges due to the tire shortage; and (3) the unusually delayed rainy season, which caused the failure of many crops.

Prices of imported goods, among which are lard and wheat flour, continue to rise with increased freight and insurance charges. Tires, iron and steel, and other strategic materials are more expensive and scarce not only because of priority requirements, but because of lack of shipping space. To date the government has not attempted price control and if it does later, the agricultural nature and administrative difficulties of the country will make effective action almost impossible. Actually, the general price structure is as sound as could be expected under the circumstances. A few products, such as machetes, have experienced run-away prices, but ordinary business has in most cases been little affected.

The most serious exception to this is rice, which was the primary staple for the lower classes of the coastal regions. Most of the domestically produced rice is now exported in response to the increased price on the world market. World prices of other exportable products may rise due to wartime interruption of commerce with producing areas. The great disadvantage for Ecuador is that lack of shipping space may keep goods from moving in response to price, in which case even rice may become cheap on the domestic market. Petroleum shipments are already retarded by the difficulty in obtaining tankers.

THE COMBINED EFFECT of decreased shipments from the United States, and our loans and gifts to Ecuador, have caused a surplus of dollar exchange against the sucre, and thus a strengthened position of Ecuadorean currency.

Domestic industrial development will be only slightly stimulated by wartime lack of manufactured articles. There is very little in the way of raw materials which can be developed rapidly or processed in the country. The most important industry is that of low-grade textiles, in which the country already produces most of its own needs. Rubber production is about 1500 tons a year, is of a low grade, and although no accurate survey has been made, estimates place the maximum production of which the west coast region is capable at 3000 to 6000 tons a year.

At a time when reconstruction seems to be the greatest need of Ecuador, few people are thinking in such terms. "Revolution will be tried again before the end of the year," is the comment you hear around the Plaza de la Independencia, "and this time perhaps successfully."

Asia For Japan?

By Clarke Kawakami

Nippon's Conquests—A Boomerang

IT IS now nearly seven months since Japan embarked upon what she dubbed a holy war to free Asia from Western imperialism. In that brief space of time Japanese armies have carried their battle cry of "Asia for the Asiatics" into the Philippines, Malaya, the Dutch East Indies and Burma, all possessions of non-Asiatic powers. They now stand upon the threshold of India, apparently gathering strength for an assault upon this most crucial bastion of British power in Asia.

Events have proved that the Japanese acted cleverly in sending forth their legions under the imposing banner of Asiatic liberation. The Japanese soldier in the role of apostle of freedom seems definitely out of character, but the fact remains that Japan did thus succeed in winning native support for her armies, notably in Malaya and in Burma.

This is a sad commentary upon a colonial system which kept the native peoples in economic subjection, suppressed nationalism and discouraged political progress. It is not so surprising, then, that when the Japanese, a fellow Asiatic, came along and held out the bait of freedom, the natives swallowed it, not suspecting what was behind it.

BUT if Japan's military conquests were facilitated by the use of this clever propaganda, the conquerors, in holding forth such glittering promises, certainly planted no bed of roses for themselves. Unless they live up to those promises the nationalistic feeling which they have cultivated as a weapon against the white powers is likely to prove a boomerang.

Let us see, then, how the colonial peoples are actually faring at the hands of their Japanese "liberators." The veil over the conquered areas is now being partially lifted, and the picture we are able to piece together is one which shows little divergence from the pattern of Japanese rule in occupied China and of Nazi exploitation of the conquered areas of Europe.

In keeping with their role, it is true, the Japanese have adopted an outwardly sympathetic attitude toward the natives and are encouraging hopes of self-government by setting up native puppet officials chosen from among those most friendly to Japan.

At the same time, however, Japanese civil servants and teachers who followed on the heels of the army are reportedly taking over all key administrative posts and the educational system. Teaching of the Japanese language has been introduced, newspapers printed in Japanese have taken the place of the Dutch or English, and it is reported that even the Japanese calendar has been substituted, making 1942 the year 2602, dating from the legendary foundation of the Japanese empire.

All this would seem to indicate that the conquerers are busy laying the foundations for something more than a temporary stewardship of the colonial areas. And on the economic side, it is even clearer that the promised liberation will turn out to be little more than the substitution of King Log for King Stork.

British, Dutch and American enterprises have been handed over to big Japanese development companies for exploitation. Native as well as foreign property has been seized. The army is issuing its own fiat paper money in order to "pay" for requisitioned food, goods and services, thus disguising what really amounts to outright confiscation.

Soon a host of carpetbaggers, scalawags and ronin (adventurers) from Japan will, with the connivance of the occupying armies, swarm into the conquered lands to make their fortunes. The "liberated" peoples will then begin to ask: does "Asia for the Asiatics" as preached by the Japanese mean "Asia for Japan?"

THE JAPANESE may or may not by nature be mean—that is beside the mark. The fact is that the resources at their command do not permit them to be generous toward the peoples to whom they want to be "big brother." Japan embarked upon her present misadventure at a time when her drawn-out struggle in China had drained her economic and financial strength. Thus she finds herself compelled willy-nilly to exploit the conquered countries quicky and ruthlessly, even at the expense of the peoples whom she professes to redeem. If she does not, she is doomed to early defeat.

Like Hitler, Japan thus faces the same combination of circumstances which ultimately wrought the downfall of Napoleon after he had extended his sway over nearly all of Europe. The analogy is particularly striking in Japan's case because both the armies of Napoleon and the Japanese armies of today carried into the lands they conquered a revolutionary ideology.

Just as Napoleon's troops marched under the banner of the Revolution, with the watchword of "Liberty, Equality, Fraternity," so the Japanese have marched under the banner of Asiatic Freedom. Napoleon thus won the support of the oppressed middle classes of Germany, Italy and Austria. Japan thus struck a responsive chord in the hearts of the subject peoples of Asia.

France, however, was in much the same financial and economic position that Japan finds herself in today. Her meager resources were too inadequate to support the vast French armies spread out over the continent, and Napoleon consequently had to quarter as many troops as possible in the conquered countries, letting them live off the land. The result was that the French, once hailed as deliverers, came to be hated as the oppressors of Europe.

MEANWHILE, Britain, with a century's start over France in the abolition of feudalistic restraints upon trade and thanks to the Navigation Acts and a policy of colonial exploitation, had become the world's richest nation. Not only was she able to foot the cost of her expeditionary armies sent against Napoleon, but she subsidized with a lavish hand all the continental nations against France. When Napoleon bowed to Wellington at Waterloo, it was symbolic that he bowed to a man who, as Arthur Wellesley, had won fame and wealth in the service of the East India Co.

Today, too, Britain and America far outweigh the Axis powers in financial and economic strength and are using it not only to put their own vast armies, navies and air forces into the field, but also to arm and equip the other United Nations. When they are ready to strike offensively, they are likely to find helpers in the conquered peoples of Europe and Asia who are now tasting disillusionment under the new orders of the conquerors.

It is unlikely, however, that even when Japan has been defeated, the idea of Asiatic liberation will die an easy death. Just as the spirit of "Liberty, Equality, Fraternity," survived Napoleon in all parts of reactionary Europe, so the ideal of "Asia for the Asiatics," laudable in its true sense, will survive the setting of the Rising Sun. History does repeat itself.

Paradoxically enough, it will be chiefly up to America, who took up arms against the authors of the "Asia for Asiatics" slogan to see to it that the reforms which that slogan implies are carried into effect when peace returns. China significantly is already making it plain that there can be no return to the pre-war imperialism of the Western powers in Asia, and many clear-thinking Americans are beginning to share that view.

At the coming peace conference there will be no great Japanese diplomat like Talleyrand, who wrested from the conquerors of Napoleon a pledge that social and political reforms of the Revolution would be preserved. The role of liberator of the Asiatic peoples will be played by some other nation, logically by the United States.

Standby Pay

IF THE COURT please, I would like to say a few words on behalf of the local professional musicians around and about our country who often find themselves in competition with amateur talent under circumstances which make them seem unpatriotic, arrogant and selfish if they but seek a day's work or, anyway, the wages thereof. Music is only sweet wind and vibrations and is a luxury and so our people, especially in our smaller communities, are the more impatient when the high school band, the fife and drum corps of the Boy Scouts or the great band of the nearby military or naval post accepts a date to play at some public festival to which admission is paid by the public and the local union then steps in to demand stand-by wages for a certain number of its members, who are, themselves, local wage earners and taxpayers and are, in the matter of character, about the same as the general run of their neighbors.

The situation is based on the so-called standby principle which is morally wrong and, therefore, was joyously upheld by our Supreme Court in the recent teamsters' case, but which, nevertheless, appeals strongly to the sympathy of fair people in special circumstances. In a typical, hypothetical case, an Army band will be engaged to play at a big charity ball game for the USO or some thoroughly legitimate fund for the relief of the distress among the families of soldiers and sailors. If special seats or lights are needed for the occasion nobody in town would think of employing amateur carpenters or electricians and the pay of the workers, who will be local men and respected fellow citizens of the rest, is charged to the normal cost of production and deducted from the receipts. Nobody objects to that nor are the carpenters or electricians held up to scorn.

BUT the musicians of the community find themselves out of their particular job which is legitimate work in their line and accused of preying on charity if their business agent puts in for standby pay for them. Not only in war but in times of peace they find themselves competing with amateurs and usually under conditions which make them seem not only to lack public spirit, but to be anti-Boy Scout or anti-Shriner or anti-American Legion or whatever.

There are relatively few opportunities for professional musicians to make a few dollars playing behind turnstiles. It is a crowded field and, what with the radio in the home and piped-radio and the juke-boxes in the dumps or cafes the public patronizes live music only on occasion. During the World's Fair in New York a children's band from a high school in a southern city raised money by popular subscription for a trip to New York to play a few selections at the special festivities in honor of their State. Their fellow townsmen were furious because the musicians' Union in New York demanded standby pay which, in undeniable practical effect, was a demand for tribute if the children were permitted to make an appearance for which they had practiced faithfully and on which they had set their hearts. But the professional musicians in their home town had been done out of the job and the travel by the little amateurs.

ONE REASON why our martial spirit does not express itself in music, although it is very expressive in other ways, is that our music has been horribly distorted and is unsuitable and even repugnant to the martial spirit. It is not a brave or inspiring sound, but hideous noise and not music at all. But that is not the fault of the poor musicians. They play the music that is set before them and these defilements are the fault of a set of vandals called arrangers, who cannot create music themselves and, in their sullen envy of those who can, produce evil caricatures as monstrous as Hitler's most hateful distortions of truth. They even mock "Anchors Aweigh" and "The Caissons Go Rolling Along" beyond recognition and probably that is an additional reason why the people prefer to hear service bands when they can for the services are literal-minded.

Most of the work of the professional musician is performed in unpleasant surroundings and in the company of people who are not at their best, for he plays mainly in drinking places and our drinking habits are not stately. When there is a parade or a festival he is likely to be dealt out in favor of the amateur.

I do not suggest that professional standbys should be paid every time a post band gives a concert on a reservation or plays in a parade, but I do propose that the public consider the musician's own side of each case and that where admission is charged he be considered as a fellow citizen who has to make a living too.

The Once-Over

By H. I. Phillips

Paul Revere

Bang! And another illusion's shattered . . .
Pow! And another great hero's battered . . .
Lissen, my children, and you shall hear
That Paul Revere wasn't Paul Revere!

* * * *

He wasn't the Paul of whom they told us——
He wasn't the Paul Longfellow sold us!!!

* * * *

He didn't ride and spread the alarm
To every Middlesex village and farm;
It wasn't 2 by the village clock
When he came to the bridge in Concord town;
In fact (and brace yourself for the shock),
He's not there yet by new facts set down!

* * * *

He never got to the bridge at all,
He never got to the town did Paul;
In fact, Lexington was as far and wide
As he planned to go on his famous ride!

* * * *

Was just for a rime with a word like 'fleet;"
That part of it is a lot of bull——
Paul's horse was under a constant pull!!

* * * *

"A shape in the moonlight, a bulk in the dark,
And beneath, from the pebbles, in passing, a spark" . . .
Fiction, my boys, and a poet's talk——
The horse left town in a COMMON WALK!

* * * *

"By the Mystic, meeting the ocean tides,
And under the alders that skirt its edge,
Now soft on the sand, now loud on the ledge,
Is heard the tramp of the steed as he rides." . . .
Bunk, dear folks, for Paul rode with care
And took it easy with speed to spare;
The British were watching the roads, and so
Paul seldom, if ever, got out of "low."

* * * *

He felt his way with both skill and art,
Which proves that Paul was both cool and smart;
As for "hurrying hoofbeats of that steed"
They were one thing Paul didn't want or need!
"And so through that night went his cry of alarm" . . .
Here Longfellow wasn't the least bit warm;
Arousing the Minute Men? That's the bunk . . .
Paul's purpose was this: to save Hancock's TRUNK!

* * * *

And save the trunk was what Paul did——
He concentrated on that amid
The sound of battle and carnage hot
On the village green, where Paul was NOT!

* * * *

We got this dope with a sad, sad look
From Esther Forbes in a brand new book
Which says Paul Revere was no fighter bold,
But a fellow cool and at times quite cold,
Who was in few fights on those village greens,
But was always active behind the scenes.

* * * *

And what hurts us most is Miss Forbes' discourse.
She not only spoils Paul, but she spoils his horse;
It wasn't the charger the posters show,
But merely a pony . . . and BORROWED, TOO!

* * * *

Oh, sad is our heart at this Paul so new,
And our answer to Esther is just "Sez you!" . . .
She can have her Paul and his horse (or more)——
We'll stick to the H. Longfellow pair!

Whirlaway only has to win $33,000 more to reach Seabiscuit's world record of $437,730. Sometimes we wish we had paid more attention through the years to the cry, "Get a horse!"

The stretch-run of Whirlaway is an amazing thing. He is always in the ruck, only to come through in a sensational finish. As a racing fan exclaimed after witnessing it, "You can't tell me all he gets is three gallons of gas a week."

Can WAAC Soprano Bark Orders? Commander Wonders

By George S. Mills
Associated Press Staff Writer

Fort Des Moines, Iowa, July 8—Col. Don C. Faith, commandant of the WAAC Training School here, is going to delve into grand opera.

Not that he has any illusions about the musical qualities of his own booming voice. Rather, he is looking for ways and means of developing the carrying power of a feminine "forward m-arch!"

The first 770 enrollees in the Women's Army Auxiliary Corps will report here July 20. Of these, 440 will be given officers' training, including instructions in commanding squads, companies and battalions.

A Soprano Sergeant?

Whether the auxiliaries (privates) in the rear rank and on the opposite side of the field will always hear "Squads right!" and "At ease!" from a soprano sergeant is what's worrying Colonel Faith.

"There is no problem in teaching a man to speak out so that everyone can hear," he said. "Army officers are taught to give their voices an extra push from 'way down in their stomachs. But women have lower-volumed voices."

Will They Skip?

He expects his operatic studies (in the abstract) will help him teach women to make themselves heard.

Another thing: The standard Army marching step is 30 inches. Faith says he doesn't expect a 5-foot-2-eyes-of-blue miss to stretch that far to martial music, but he doesn't know yet how much the distance will be shortened.

"There's a minor tempest on that question among our staff members right now," he said.

"But just imagine what we'll be up against some time when WAACS and soldiers march in the same parade, one with a step longer than the other and both marching to the same music."

Maybe this will be the solution to all Faith's problems: The plans contemplate ultimately making the training school faculty all feminine.

"Eventually, in all probability, there will be a woman commandant, too," he observed.

Administration Will Demand Showdown on Farm Measure

Administration supporters of the President's farm policies will seek another House vote on the still-deadlocked 680 million dollars agriculture appropriation bill in an effort to settle once and for all the Government's right to sell surplus grain below parity.

This was indicated yesterday as congressional farm bill conferees confronted another impasse, after clearing temporary funds for the Agriculture Department on Tuesday.

Embattled conferees planned to resume negotiations on full-year appropriations and powers of the agency later this week, but there seemed little hope of a prompt conference settlement.

Failing an agreement, it would be in order for any member to move to discharge the present House Conference Committee, which motion, if carried, would permit the Speaker to select a new set of managers.

It was suggested in one informed quarter that a more likely course will be an effort in conference to persuade present House managers to go back to the House for a new set of instructions.

Four Votes Taken

Prior to Tuesday's temporary extension of funds, without restrictions on grain sales, the House had voted four times to ban marketing of any sound grain below parity, and to slash farm security appropriations.

The President meanwhile had taken the issue directly to the country, in an appeal for full clearance of his "food for victory" program. Some observers saw in Tuesday's House vote for a 30-day extension of the President's policies indications that the House will support the Administration's parity stand for the full year, if given another opportunity.

If the House again votes to ban subparity release of corn and wheat to feed livestock, and every move for compromise fails, it was suggested that as a last resort the bill may be passed with the ban, nad laid on the President's doorstep for an almost certain veto.

Farm spokesmen in both Houses have been advised informally that the President would never permit drastic restrictions on sales of surplus commodities to become law, except over his veto. If a veto becomes necessary, it was said that the President might use the opportunity to state his case in a vigorous message to Congress.

The Senate-approved bill to grant full parity loans to cooperating farm producers of six basic commodities meanwhile will go to the House Agriculture Committee, where early hearings are planned. Leaders voiced doubt that there would be any possibility of the measure reaching the House floor until after the mid-summer recess.

Wartime Secrecy Veils Trial of Nazi Saboteurs

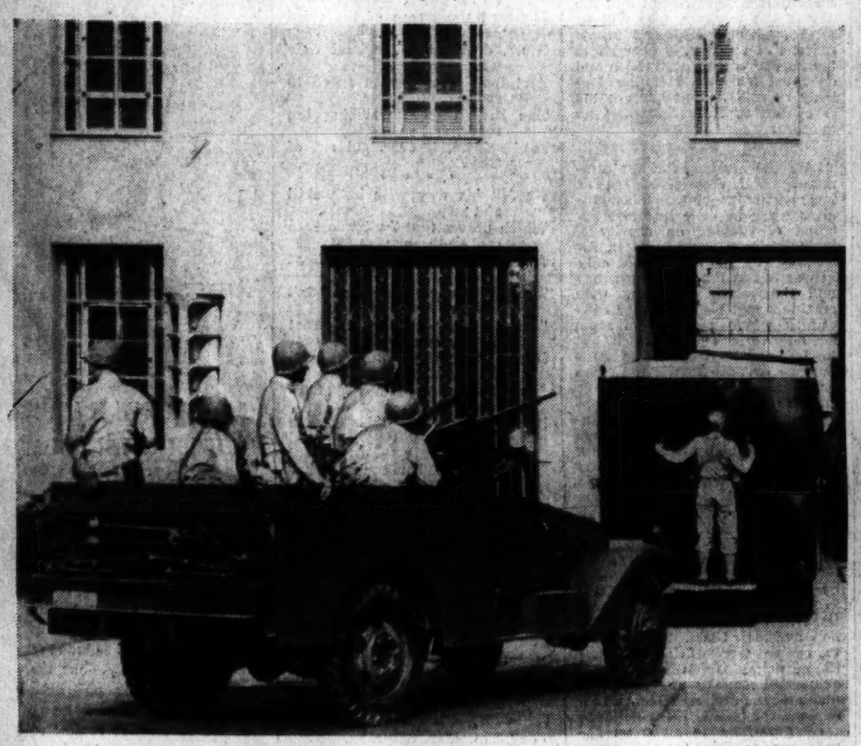
Troops Guard Vans—Passing through shadows as deep as the secrecy veiling the trial of eight accused Nazi saboteur-spies, two United States marshal's vans are driven from the District Jail preceded and followed by machine-gun-bearing troops in Army armored cars. They were driven through downtown Washington past wide-eyed spectators to the . . .



. . . Department of Justice where the trial started yesterday. The public and newspapermen were not permitted to see whether vans carried witnesses, accused spies, both or anyone

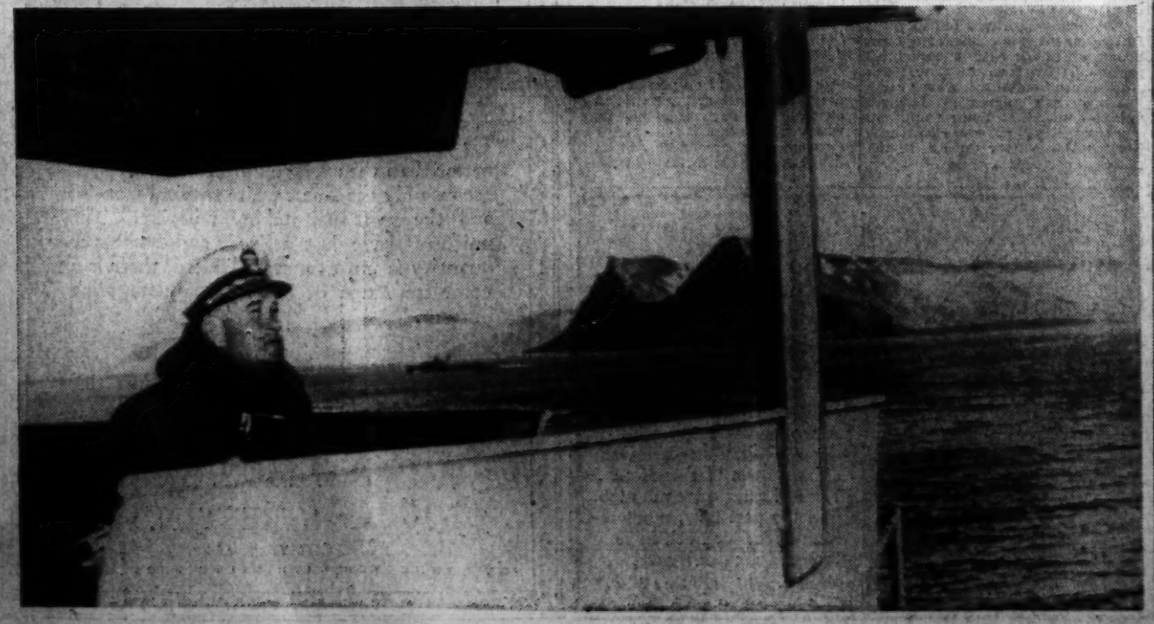
U. S. Task Force May Meet German Battleship Tirpitz

An American task force under command of Rear Admiral Robert Giffen guards the shipping lanes of the North Atlantic. When the call to battle stations is sounded, the admiral's mess attendants, three United States-born Chinese, man an aircraft gun (top, left). They are Norman Chinn, Harry Lee and Jimmie Chang. Admiral Giffen stands on the bridge of his ship (below) on patrol off the rock-bound coast of Iceland. The American sailor (inset) stands watch under the guns of a United States warship on patrol. It was announced June 11 that the task force under Admiral Giffen had joined the British home fleet for a share in the job of keeping Hitler's high-seas fleet bottled up. Yesterday it was reported from Moscow that the big German battleship Tirpitz was on the loose again. She has been reported torpedoed and damaged by a Russian submarine.



Women Replace Men to Test Guns and Tanks at Aberdeen

More than 1000 women have replaced men testing all types of material at the Army's proving grounds, Aberdeen, Md. During the six weeks since the start of the program, only six male replacements have been necessary. Loretta Young Boosts Bond Sales to Rotary Loretta Young, her big blue eyes getting bigger, sold war bonds and stamps at the Rotary Club luncheon in the Willard yesterday.

Wearing a "10 per cent" button on the same chain with her cross, the actress signed "Sincerely, Loretta Young" over many a time and threw in a handshake apiece for purchasers, who lined up the length of the ballroom.

New officers, headed by M. K. Wilberding as president, were inducted at the meeting. The Washington Rotary Club marked its thirtieth anniversary July 1.

The luncheon was Miss Young's first public appearance during a ten-day stay in the Capital. The Kiwanis Club's turn comes today when the actress will autograph bond and stamp purchases at the 12:30 p. m. luncheon at the Mayflower. Later, she will go to Jelleff's to preside at the main floor stamp booth. A big bond rally at Annapolis is set for noon tomorrow.

Asked if this schedule were leaving room for a real visit with her husband, Maj. Thomas H. Lewis, who is stationed here at the War Department, the movie actress gave unhesitating reply, "It certainly isn't!"

Then she added, "But I'm here for work this time."

Ralph A. Beals, public librarian for the District, told of the steadily growing day to day use of the library and brought out that reading along occupational lines had taken a big jump since the war, with mathematics leading the popularity list. "Books on statistics are always out," he said. Beals told of the War Reading Room which contains pamphlets on civilian defense, and current and historical books about Europe and this country. "Mein Kampf" is a leader in this field, and books on post war planning are getting an increased circulation, he stated.

Rotary officers inducted for next year were Wilberding, president; Albert W. Atwood, vice president; Warde B. Stringham, secretary; William Paul Hoffman, treasurer, and Wilfred B. Putnam, sergeant at arms. Algernon P. Reeves is retiring president. Directors are Bruce R. Allen, Carter T. Barron, Charles E. Hood, Edward Costigan, Ralph W. Lee, jr., Lelewellyn D. Nicolson, Clark G. Diamond, Howard S. LeRoy and Foster M. Reeder.

license several days ago in utmost secrecy. She signed herself as the Countess Haugwitz-Reventlow and gave her age as 29. It was Grant's second marriage, her third.

The newlyweds left immediately after the ceremony without disclosing their destination, but Grant said they would make their home in Brentwood. He is due back at his studio tomorrow to resume work on his current film, "Once Upon a Honeymoon."

Grant, 38, was born Archibald Alexander Leach in Bristol, Eng. He played in stock, on the stage and in operettas before coming to Hollywood in 1931.

Grant only last week became an American citizen. At the time, he said he intended to volunteer for active duty with U. S. armed forces as soon as he could get his affairs in shape.

He was married once before, to Actress Virginia Cherrill. They were divorced.

His wife's fortune has been variously estimated at from 20 million dollars to 30 million dollars. She was born November 14, 1912, in New York, the daughter of Franklin Laws Hutton and the former Edna Woolworth, daughter of F. W. Woolworth.

Her fortune was such that a normal life was impossible. People began to call her "poor little rich girl."

She took society by surprise when, before she became of age, she announced her engagement to Prince Alexis Mdivani. They were married in Paris June 22, 1933, but she divorced him in Reno May 13, 1935, charging cruelty.

Twenty-four hours after her divorce, she married Count Court Haugwitz-Reventlow, wealthy Danish nobleman.

Their son, Lance, was born February 24, 1938. She sued the count for divorce in June, 1938, but it was not made final until March 1, 1941, when King Christian affixed his signature.

Eklund Denies All Connections With Slaying

John Eugene Eklund ascended the witness stand in his District Court murder trial yesterday and denied all connection with the "sniper" slaying that ended a series of Negro murders in Washington during the autumn of 1940.

Speaking in thin tones and with well-chosen words, the former George Washington University student admitted he had owned a gun, but asserted he had used it only in target practice and for "shooting rats" behind a Virginia Hot Shoppe where he was employed.

Former Reporter to Testify

Meanwhile, a former Washington Post reporter was scheduled to be called upon by the prosecution today to rebut yesterday's testimony by Eklund. He is Al Lewis, who was summoned from Parris Island, S. C., where he is in training with the Marine Corps. Lewis will testify concerning a number of crudely printed notes sent to him in the fall of 1940 when he was assigned to cover the "sniper" shootings. Included in the notes are predictions of further killings and several denunciations of the Negro people.

Confronted with these notes yesterday, Eklund said he had never seen them.

Preceding the 27-year-old defendant on the witness stand was his mother, Mrs. Sadie W. Eklund. She testified that on the night of the fatal shooting of Hyland McClaine, Negro, with which Eklund is charged, her son was home. During that evening, she said, Eklund was practicing stenotypy and later went to bed.

Eklund was asked by Defense Attorney Harry T. Whelan at one point whether he got up during the night.

"Oh, no, sir!" was the instant reply.

Drawing Exhibited

Under cross-examination by Assistant United States John W. Fihelly, Eklund was shown a drawing taken from his room in Baltimore and asked whether it did not show a design for a gun silencer. The youth denied this, and added that it was a plan for a piece of machinery he was constructing at the Glen Martin airplane factory in Baltimore where he was working at the time.

"Did you not write to the Colt Firearms Co. requesting a specially made gun with an extra half-inch at the end of its barrel?" Fihelly asked.

"Yes," replied Eklund, "but the reason for that was that I thought it would increase the gun's accuracy."

Several weeks ago, with the aid of Richard Marvin Harlow, a jailmate of Eklund, police found a .38 caliber Colt revolver buried in Preston Gardens Park, Baltimore, around the corner from the house in which Eklund lived for almost a month until his arrest November 15, 1940.

Bullets Match

Yesterday Eklund said his gun was a Smith and Wesson .38-caliber. Earlier this week, two ballistics experts testified that two bullets removed from McClaine's body and two others removed from a tree trunk behind the Virginia Hot Shoppe came from a 38-caliber Colt and all came from the same gun.

Pale and apparently tense under the stress of two hours' questioning, Eklund appeared relieved when, at about 5:30, Justice James W. Morris excused the jury until this morning and began hearing arguments on an objection by Whelan concerning the relevancy of a Washington Post clipping found in Eklund's Baltimore room.

Whelan contended that the clipping, an editorial on the "crime picture" in Washington, had nothing to do with the shooting of McClaine, but Fihelly pointed out that Eklund was apparently interested in statistics on the percentages of criminals apprehended and convicted in the District.

U. S., District Workers Can Use 'I Share My Car' Stickers

Permission to put "I Share My Car" stickers on windshields was given Federal and District employes by the commissioners last night, acting upon the recommendation of the Department of Vehicles and Traffic. The stickers must be 3x8 inches, and may be displayed only at the bottom of the right hand half of the windshield, adjacent to the center post.

Traffic Director William A. Van Duzer, who had long opposed the use of such stickers as any general encouragemnt to offering and accepting indiscriminate pick-up rides, said that the stickers were only to identify members of the Federal car sharing clubs, and were not to be used by anyone else or for any other purpose.

D. C. Worker Spends Year's Pay for Bonds

Just about the most all-out patriot in the District Building yesterday was John A. Jarboe, chief draftsman of the surveyor's department, who spent an entire year's salary for War Bonds.

Jarboe, who has worked in the District Building since it was opened in 1907, bought four $1000 bonds yesterday to help his department's bond drive along. Up to that time, only $1200 worth of bonds had been sold in the surveyor's office since December.

"I think every man should do what he can, and this is all I can do," said Jarboe, who at the moment was giving his draftsman's talent also to the war effort, painting a large scroll illuminated with colored eagles and ags, for the department's honor roll of men in the services.

Blackout Bill Action Due Today

The House is scheduled to act this afternoon on the District blackout bill, which would give the Commissioners additional funds and almost unlimited authority with which to prosecute the city's civilian defense program.

The House District Committee approved the measure on Monday.

The bill authorized the District to borrow another million dollars for defense purposes, and gives the Commissioners power to take over private property if they feel it necessary.

One Way to Make Junior Bathe

Uncle Sam's facts and figures are usually for grown-ups, but one mother saw interest for her 7-year-old in a recent announcement. When the Navy stated that each year the average gob buys 24 cakes of toilet soap, she let her young hopeful figure out that most men in blue use a cake of soap every two weeks.

To this particular lad sailors were all heroes. So mother suggested that she would "issue" soap to him, and he could see if he lived up to Navy standards. He was delighted, and mother now reports that he takes his baths most willingly and comes regularly to table with hands and face well washed.

Good habits are a matter of training. With this child, the Navy appeal worked. With another, it may be the fact that a favorite baseball hero takes a shower after every game. Many a wise parent finds that hero-worship brings quicker results and happier attitudes than simple requests or than nagging or scolding.

To demonstrate the proper method of drying rayon hose, the girl above shapes them on a towel. If she has a sufficient number of pairs, she can allow them to dry completely on the towel. If not, she may hang them over a smooth rod

Now that rayon hose are the order of the day, it is important to know how to wash them so that they will not stretch. It is the nature of rayon to possess an unusual amount of strength and durability when dry, but when damp it is very elastic. For this reason rayon hose require care in washing and drying, even as do all fine stockings. Here are a few simple instructions:

1. Wash quickly and gently after each wearing in mild, lukewarm suds.
2. Do not rub or twist and rinse well.
3. Press out moisture and do not dry in the sun or excessive heat.
4. Allow at least 24 hours to dry thoroughly. Rayon stockings are weak when damp; therefore they must be thoroughly dry to give the best wear.

These are the instructions manufacturers give, but practical experience would advise going even a little further in the care of rayon hose. Washington, unlike most parts of the country, is very humid in the summer. Even nylon hose, which are known for their rapid drying qualities, sometimes do not completely dry overnight during extremely damp and rainy weather. Special care should also be given to press them as dry as possible in a towel first. Generally, the completely dry rayon hose will not stretch, and its life thus will be prolonger.

Space-Saving Device

If your closet is small and bureau drawer space limited, you'll be interested in a new glove case which Jane Wyatt recently purchased. It's made of heavy rayon, shaped like a large envelope, long enough to hold several pairs of gloves without folding them. Jane places the flap of the "envelope" under her hat boxes on a top shelf, lets the envelope itself hang down from the edge of the shelf. Weight of the hat boxes prevents the case from falling to the floor. Convenient gadget when Jane wants gloves in a hurry—and no extra space required.

Mary Haworth's Mail

Husband and Wife Try to Find Happy Solution Of Latter's Melancholy, Induced by Separation From Illegitimate Child She Gave for Adoption

DEAR MARY HAWORTH: I am a woman 28 years of age and have been married since last February. I love my husband very much and he is very good to me, but even so, I am not happy. When I was 17 years old, I had a child born out of wedlock. I loved her as much as a mother could love a child and kept her with me for two years; but times were hard and I was getting desperate, as I was an orphan and had no one to help me with my burdens.

I was boarding in the home of a lady who kept my child while I worked. She grew very fond of the child and asked me if she could adopt her. She said she would give her a home and I could see her when I wanted to. So I consented. Although the lady is not wealthy, she gives her all the necessities of life and treats her as lovingly as if she were her own child. Five years ago (when my daughter was 5) her foster-mother moved to another city to be near her grown children; and since then, we have visited back and forth numerous times. But still that didn't ease my mind in regard to my daughter, except when I was with her. The child does not look upon me as her mother. I mean—she does not call me mother.

I have spent many sleepless nights and at times have worried myself sick because she is not with me. Only through letters from her foster-mother can I learn if she is healthy and happy. I also worry about what people think of me for letting my child be adopted. (Only a few persons know she was born out of wedlock; and a very few more know that I gave her for adoption). Have I reason to worry about these things?

After marriage, I continued to love my child above all else—including my husband. When this became noticeable to him, he put the following question: If I asked you to choose between your daughter and me, whom would you choose? Then he went on to say: If you choose me, it means you must never again see or in any way communicate with your daughter or anyone connected with her. If you choose your daughter, I will ask for a divorce. At that time I told him I would choose my daughter. He accepted the statement in silence, but he gave no indication of hurt feelings. Several days later I told him I was sorry, as I didn't mean to make that choice and that I loved him best.

Since then, we have discussed the matter calmly, trying to face the problem and be reasonable about it. My husband has told me that if anything were to happen to the foster mother, we would bring my child into our home and adopt her. But he also says I must realize that in giving her for adoption, I did the best thing possible for her happiness. He says: Ask yourself whether you could have given her a normal life the past 11 years, and the respect of other children—which she has had? (I would have had to rear her in the city where she was born; and where some knew she was born out of wedlock.)

Now, for a very important question: Is there a chance that if I had kept the child, she might have hated me in her later teens, for having borne her out of wedlock? My husband says: If Miss Haworth's answer to this is, "Yes," then I should thank God that my child is where she is; and that I should adjust my future accordingly. My husband feels that my love for my child should be put far enough in the background of my life not to interfere with my wifely duties and love for him. He says I should consider my child's welfare ahead of my own feelings. He says if I don't follow the course that is best for her, then I don't love her; and am being selfish. Is he right?

Should I find out from the foster mother what she intends to tell the child concerning her birth? If she thinks it best not to tell her the truth, should I (when I visit them) show my mother love for the child? Or should I try to respect her as another woman's child? I often send money to the foster mother to buy specified articles for the child, letting her know that they come from me. Should I break this habit and send the money to the foster mother to buy what she thinks best—without letting the child know it comes from me? My husband and I have written this letter together—knowing that your answer will be unbiased.

WILMA.

Wife Has Reason to Be At Peace With Conscience

DEAR WILMA: Your torment stems from an uneasy conscience. You have never been able to make up your mind whether you did "the right thing" in giving your child for adoption. Hence, remorse has been your companion, ever since;—remorse, which the dictionary defines as "distress, like gnawing pain, excited by a sense of guilt."

Considering the circumstances that shaped your decision to give the child for adoption, it is my absolute conviction that you were animated by the most praiseworthy motives in embracing the plan. One must construe your consent, indeed, as incontestable proof of the very perfection of your mother love. Do you know the story of the two women who came before King Solomon, disputing their claim to an infant?

Two women, living in the same house, had given birth to sons in the same hour. On the third day, one infant died in the night; whereupon the bereft mother sought to possess the living child as her own. As the chronicle goes, then said the king: "Bring me a sword. And they brought a sword before the king. And the king said, Divide the living child in two, and give half to the one, and half to the other. Then spake the woman whose the living child was . . . and she said, O my lord, give her the living child, and in nowise slay it . . . Then the king answered and said, Give her the living child, and in no wise slay it: she is the mother thereof."

"Love," as one philosopher has said, "is the desire to give fullness of life." And as an eminent analyst of human emotions explains, "When the security and satisfaction of another person is as important to one as his own security and satisfaction, a condition of love may be said to exist." Your love for your child meets the test of either definition. Your hard decision to give her "fullness of life," at the expense of renouncing a mother's claim to her, was no less indicative of the highest sense of parental responsibility than is your continuing interest in her welfare and happiness. Be at peace with your conscience, therefore. Having long ago committed yourself to a personally punitive course of action designed to promote her good, don't diminish the virtue inherent in that choice by lapsing periodically into heart-sick self-reproach. Instead, turn every thought of your daughter into soul-felt gratitude that providence opened the way, very early, for her entree "to a normal life and the respect of other children."

It were futile to dwell on the question of whether the child might have suffered great humiliation, and hated you in consequence, if you had kept her with you. The fact is, you provided generously against that possibility; and still retain full opportunity to cultivate the finest sort of friendship with her. After all, the only significant, reciprocally satisfying bond that remains to well balanced parent and child, after the earlier years, is that of friendship—when thoughtfully developed on the parent's initiative.

It would be well to talk with the foster mother, to determine in confidence whether to acquaint the child frankly with the fact that she is adopted. Wise foster parents let an adopted child know his "preferred" status as soon as he is able to digest the fact—which may be as early as 5 years of age. He is made to feel secure by their declaration that they loved him and wanted him and deliberately chose him; and, usually, they give some kindly, reassuring and honest (if limited) explanation of why his blood parents entrusted him to them.

If your child's foster mother is willing to give the partial truth gently to the youngster, you could be made known to her now as her "other mother," toward whom she might warmly feel a secondary brand of devotion, as to an aunt or grandparent. I know a child, for instance, near your daughter's age, whose parents were divorced, and the father remarried. This child, well poised and with great good will toward all mankind, sweetly counts four mothers among her blessings: Her own mother, her step-mother, her "mother in heaven" (the mother of Jesus), and the Mother Superior of the convent school she attends. Happy children have great natural grace of feeling; and respond rather better to a healthily detached devotion than to intense possessiveness.

I cannot agree with your husband that your love for your daughter should be "put far in the background of your life," so as not (theoretically) to interfere with your wifely duties. The more you might try to drive that love underground, the more devastating would be the effect on your personality and wifely performance. The sensible solution is to rise spiritually above foolish remorse, rejoice in her long-established security, cultivate her friendship when occasion offers, and proceed from here to a new chapter in parenthood. Another baby, or two or three—in due course—should banish that ache in your heart that has known no assuagement since you committed your first-born to another's loving care.

Lip Exercises Will Ease Face Strain

Hollywood, Calif.—One day after a highly dramatic and tense scene in her new movie Alexis Smith sat down on the sidelines and started doing lip exercises.

"For heaven's sake," said her hairdressser, "I should think you would relax after that scene."

"But that's just what I am doing," replied Alexis. "My facial muscles are all tense and tight from the emotional strain of the scene. With a few lip exercises, I can loosen them up and then they will relax."

The exercise Alexis was doing was one with the teeth closed. She extended the lips as far forward as possible in circular form, holding the position for a few moments, then allowing the lips to return to their normal, closed position, ready to repeat. She starts out slowly on this exercise, gradually speeding it up.

Old Kit Bag Is Mainstay to Win War

By Ida Jean Kain

I NEVER thought to see the day when our stores would invite us to bring things back to be repaired instead of throwing them away and buying new ones, or the laundries would pay for advertising space to tell us how to save on washing so that materials could be made to last longer.

But that is the American spirit today. In our national emergency, thrift is such an urgent matter of patriotism that keeping up with the Joneses has ceased to be of interest. Homemakers all over the country are being asked to "wear it out—make it do—do without."

Unnecessary Purchases

Not that we're worried about acute shortages of the luxuries which have come to be looked upon as necessities. But the more money we spend on unnecessary replacements, the less we have for stamps and bonds for defense. And there's another angle, just as serious. The greater the purchase of articles for civilian consumption, the slower the rechanneling of the man power needed for war production. And finally, the unnecessary purchases tend to create a shortage where there is no valid reason for one to exist.

We had almost forgotten how to be as thrifty as our parents were. Can't you remember the ball of string your mother saved in the kitchen cupboard drawer? She would tie the ends of used string together and wind it up into a neat ball. And instead of striking another match to light burners on the gas stove, she would light an old match from a burner already in use.

No scrap of soap was ever wasted. Many a housewife carefully saved the suds water from the week's washing to mop up the kitchen floor. Waste of food was looked upon as a mortal sin. We said a blessing before we ate and then we cleaned up our plates. If you didn't clean up your plate, you didn't get any dessert. You got a scolding.

Hand Me Downs

It was taken for granted that clothes would be handed down from one child to the next. Whenever new clothing was purchased it was carefully chosen a size too large to allow the child to grow into it.

Yes, we had almost forgotten all those economies. And when it comes to a choice between thrift or freedom, thrift is a pleasure as well as an obligation.

Even those who can afford to buy replacements can't afford to be wasteful. This war is being fought on the production line. Every civilian has a part in it.

'Bones' Routed, School History Proves; Stylists Assent

Evolution in dress over a half century at Mount Vernon Seminary reveals many changes. For example, girls may now wear socks on the campus. The wearing of a strand of pearls has also recently been permitted. Below—Day Student Dorothy Miller, vice president of her graduating class this year, models the type of dress students wear to class. It is white waffle pique with a full red and white check dirndl skirt and matching trim. For further information call National 4200, Extension 259

Dress Reformer Mrs. Jeness Miller is sketched above in the revolutionary, loose-fitting dress she was advocating for young women during the 90's

A Mount Vernon student of 1885-87, Agnes Cheney (now Mrs. Charles Henry Fish) is shown below in the tight-laced, corseted dress that was the fashion of the times. Miss Cheney might have been the girl whom the headmistress called down for finishing her toilet on the street. (She put on her gloves after, instead of before, leaving the grounds)

By Jane Driscoll

The Post Fashion Editor

"BUT really, will we have to go back into 'bones' again?" Virtually every corset buyer is asked this question by women who are afraid the rubber shortage will put them back into steel armour.

"Don't worry," the buyers assure their questioners. They point out that they have bought heavily and have enough stock to carry them through a normal year. One specialty store boasts plenty of Lastex girdles in lace or two-way stretch satin styles. Even in the new type of priority girdles the deceased amount of rubber will work no hardship on the wearers.

But for even more assurance, uneasy women may turn to the pages of history. The case of the girls at Mount Vernon Seminary here in Washington, during the gay 90's, is an instance. Old records recently unearthed at the school show that a half century ago dress reformers came in simple, loose hanging gowns to rescue women from their stiff wasp waist costumes and heavy draperies. The result—the uncorseted student of today in knee length dirndl skirts, and airy blouses and panty girdles.

Early Crusader for Reform

Mrs. Jenness Miller, a dress reformer of 1890, introduced the idea at Mount Vernon Seminary that women should have freedom of attire. Yet Mrs. Miller was not one of those feminine freaks usually associated with dress reform. The Mount Vernon school paper, The Record, of December, 1890, thus reports her appearance at the assembly: "A flutter of excitment passed over the company which filled to overflowing the chapel of Mount Vernon Seminary as Mrs. Jenness Miller, the wellknown dress reformer, stepped before their expectant eyes . . . a tall, slender, and erect woman of natural proportions appeared, dressed in a simple gown of golden silk, cut modestly low, displaying the graceful curves of her throat, above which rose a head crowned by masses of dark, wavy hair, bringing out in strong relief the purity and delicacy of a complexion absolutely free from the arts and devices so often considered the necessary accompaniment of a lady's toilet."

In commenting on Mrs. Miller's epoch-making speech, the paper continued: "Her interesting lecture was introduced by a reference to Eve and the grief which followed and ever will follow the breaking of natural laws." Mentioned as the numerous abuses were "the corset, the tightlacing and the heavy draperies overburdening the hips, and breaking down the very springs of life . . . She asked why woman, always so eager to cultivate beauty in any form, persists in wearing costumes acknowledged to be ungraceful, if not disgraceful.

Gymnastics in Ball Costume

"As a proof of her own physical powers, Mrs. Miller performed the most astonishing gymnastics while arrayed in ball costumes, at which critical period the ordinary women must not move a muscle for fear of causing a wrinkle. The question was asked, if there were really no bones in her dresses, in reply to which she said: "Only those that nature gave me?"

The author concluded in speaking of Mrs. Miller: "She has a great work before her in revolutionizing the dress, and as a natural result in improving the health of the women of her time, and she cannot do it alone. We girls who are to make the women and mothers of the future must lend a helping hand by accepting the principles and adopting the customs, not because they are mere dictates of fashion, but because they are demands made upon us by this noble movement which is to benefit mankind."

Thus eulogized the author of this piece, Edith Dingley, as it appeared in The Record 52 years ago. If she were writing today she would probably point out that a half century of progress over the steel corset of the 90's is not going to be lost with one, two or even five years of war. Women will not give up the freedom they fought for. War may bring changes due to priorities, but it will not mean decadence. Rather it will bring progress and new use of creative genius, as has already been noted in lingerie, corset and foundation styles to come.

Furniture Repainting Requires Care

By Elizabeth MacRae Boykin

THERE'S no use laying all our summer furniture woes on the war. True enough, there are curtailment in materials and ceilings on prices. But the real headache over summer furniture is the upkeep, for any furniture that is used outdoors takes quite a beating from the weather—war or peace.

Metal furniture must be thoroughly sand-papered or rubbed good with steel wool till all rust spots are removed. Rust will keep on eating into the metal even under a new coat of paint. Sometimes it may take crude oil to clean up advanced cases of corrosion—in which case the oil must be entirely removed before painting—to do this properly wipe with mineral spirits of turpentine. Touch up these spots with red lead . .or some firms even consider an undercoat of auto-and-metal-surfacer as a "must" before painting metal. Whatever you do for the undercoat, let it dry thoroughly before applying the final coating which should be the best grade of outdoor enamel. An extra coat of outdoor varnish will add further durability to the surface.

Modern Furniture

Wooden outdoor furniture, if it has never been painted before, requires first a wood filler coat . . . but check first with the furniture store, for some outdoor unpainted furniture has already been treated with a filler coat. After that you'll want two coats of exterior enamel and preferably a final coat of clear exterior varnish. If the wood furniture has been painted before, wash and rinse it carefully . . . the rinsing is specially important to remove any soap. Be sure the surface is thoroughly dry before applying paint. If the old coat is cracked or scaled, the experts advise removing it with paint remover followed by a washing over with gasoline or turpentine, then a thorough drying, then a priming coat thinned with turpentine.

Colors For Outdoors

As for colors of summer furniture—crisp starched looking white is prettier than anything. But it requires the most attention as far as upkeep is concerned. Dull Pompeiian greens are good-looking too; we've scouted around the town trying to find whether there is a paint available that will achieve those handsome dull greens and other dull surfaced effects that some of the "boughten" metal furniture has. The nearest thing to it would be a coat of dull green exterior enamel, toned down afterwards with raw or burnt umber (or a combination of both), brushed on, then rubbed partly off with a piece of cheesecloth. Or you can apply a coat of lacquer which won't have much shine and will come fairly close to the effect of the nice greens you see in the stores. Many greens are too raw looking and fight with the foliage, so make sure you get a dull weathered green tone. Canary yellow is pretty for outdoor furniture . . . so is dusty pink . . . terra cotta . . . bright blue.

Rites in Texas August 1 to Unite Betty Lee and Lieut. Scull; Belgian Premier Expected Here Today; M. and Mme. Tixier in New York for 'Free French Week'

DEEP IN THE HEART of Texas—in historic San Antonio, to be exact—Miss Elizabeth Lee will walk down that well-known aisle on August 1 to become the bride of Lieut. David Scull. Since the engagement was announced a couple of months ago, everybody has been wondering when and where the marriage would take place.

MISS ELIZABETH LEE

Now that it's all settled and invitations are going out for the ceremony, parties are piling up for the popular bride-elect to such an extent she can hardly find time to finish buying her trousseau, pack her bags and get up to Chestnut Hill, Pa., for a few days' visit with her fiance's parents, Mr. and Mrs. Marshall Scull. But I'm getting ahead of my story. . . .

Shortly after the betrothal was made known here in April, Lieutenant Scull was sent to station in California from Fort Riley, Kans., where he had been on duty for several months. A few weeks ago he was transferred to Brooks Field for a special aerial observer's course. The latter is to be completed this month, and shortly after the wedding in August he and his bride will start back to California, where he is to return for station.

The bride-elect, who is the daughter of Mrs. Clarence Aspinwall and Lieut. Col. E. Brooke Lee, made her bow to Capital society last October at a large tea in the Aspinwall home, 2340 Kalorama Road. In contrast to her prewar debut, however, her wedding is to be an extremely quiet affair. St. Mark's Church is to be the scene of the ceremony, at which the Rev. Edward Jones, who formerly was connected with the National Cathedral, will officiate. The bride, who is to be given in marriage by Mr. Aspinwall, her stepfather, will dispense with attendants.

Accompanied by Mr. and Mrs. Aspinwall, Miss Lee will leave Washington on July 27. But you can count on it that there will be as many parties in her honor before then as she can crowd onto her calendar. As I mentioned before, she will also go to Chestnut Hill to spend a few days before she takes off to Texas.

Dinner Planned for Prime Minister

They're doubling up on us—dignitaries, I mean. Up to now, they've managed to come to the Capital one at a time . . . or all in one group, such as that delegation to the current Inter-American Economic Conference, who deserve a lot more attention than they have had the past few days, what with saboteurs and submarine sinkings taking practically all the headlines.

But now, while wartime Washington officialdom is trying to spend all its spare time wining and dining the Colombian President-Elect, still another distinguished visitor turns up in our country and announces his intentions of coming to Washington. He is Hubert Pierlot, Prime Minister of the Belgian government-in-exile, and he is scheduled to be in our town today. He will stay at the Belgian Embassy; will be received by President Roosevelt tomorrow; will have a number of conferences with officials, and will be entertained at a dinner at the embassy on Monday evening.

While his plans are not yet definitely known here, chances are he will not linger long in Washington, but will leave probably Tuesday or Wednesday to continue his journey to the Belgian Congo.

This is the Prime Minister's second visit to America, his first being in 1910. Originally, arrangements had been made for him to come the latter part of this month, but as he said in New York shortly after he arrived, "We have to travel by any plane we can get these days."

Program to Accent 'Free French Week'

The Free French will not only have a day—they'll have almost a week of luncheons, dinners, mass meetings and conferences in New York . . . beginning today and culminating with a final mass meeting on Bastille Day, the "French Fourth of July," next Tuesday.

Already in New York for the round of fetes is Adrien Pierre Tixier of Washington, head of the Free French delegation in this country, who will be joined there today by Mme. Tixier, who will be on her way there from Washington by the time you read this.

The gala calendar officially got under way yesterday afternoon when Wendell Willkie gave a radio speech, directed to the Free French forces all over the world, from Freedom House, New York. Directly following his address came the reply from General de Gaulle, speaking from London.

On today's program is the luncheon to be given jointly by the Free French Relief Organization and the American Field Service. Louis Bromfield, noted American novelist, who lived in France for many years, and the Free French Military Attache, Colonel de Chevigne, will be the principal speakers. On display at Freedom House from today through July 14 will be an exhibition of photographs showing the activities of the Free French forces at the front.

Activities planned for Bastille Day include a reception at Free French headquarters in Rockefeller Center from 12 until 2 o'clock, when M. and Mme. Tixier will receive members of the Free French colony. The mass meeting at Manhattan Center that evening is being arranged under the auspices of France Forever, and M. Tixier will be one of the principal speakers at that event. According to present plans, he and Mme. Tixier will return to Washington the following day.

Mme. Litvinoff Is Hostess at Service Fete

It was a gala afternoon for those 30 soldiers, sailors and marines—and the bevy of attractive Government girls—who were entertained at the Soviet Embassy yesterday by Mme. Litvinoff, wife of the Soviet Ambassador.

Starting off with movies, the party progressed to singing, led by Mme Bazykin, wife of the First Secretary of the Embassy, and finished with dancing in the ornate salon. Huge bowls of fruit centered the buffet table in the dining room which was filled with sandwiches, punch, coffee, ice cream—and Russian tea served in tall glasses. American and Soviet flags served as the only adornment for the reception which was held on the second floor of the embassy.

Assisting Mme. Litvinoff were the ladies of the embassy including Mme. Fedotov, Mme. Pastoyev, Mme. Kohmianin, Mlle. Tsimburskaya, Mlle. Kotenkova and Mme. Rastorchuk. The party was given under the auspices of the Home Hospitality Committee, of which Mrs. Martin Vogel is chairman.

Dinner Planned For Delegates to Current Conference

Delegates to the Inter-American Conference on the Systems of Economic and Financial Controls, which comes to a close on Friday, will be honor guests at a dinner tomorrow night at which members of the United States contingent will be hosts.

The dinner will culminate the series of small social affairs at which the delegates have been honored since the opening of the conference several weeks ago. Among the final events planned for tomorrow is a luncheon to be given by the Ambassador of Bolivia, Dr. Luis Fernando Guachalla. Honor guests will be the Minister of Finance of Bolivia, Joaquin Espada, and the Minister of National Economy, Alberto Crespo. The two prominent Bolivian delegates arrived several days after the opening of the conference.

All meetings of the conference have taken place at the Pan American Union.

Mrs. Distler Returns

Mrs. Walter Distler returned to Washington last night, accompanied by her daughter, Miss Ann Distler, from New York City, where they have been stopping at the Plaza.

To Be Wed This Month

MISS BETTY LORAINNE JENSEN

is the bride-elect of Lieut. Donald Gleason Fitzpatrick, according to an announcement made today by her parents, Representative and Mrs. Ben F. Jensen of Exira, Iowa, and Washington. The bride-elect is a graduate of Mary Washington College at Fredericksburg, Va. Ensign Lohr was graduated from the United States Naval Academy in June. No date has been set for the wedding.

Brazilian Delegate Guest at Dinner

Dr. Francisco Alves dos Santos Filho, Brazilian delegate to the current Inter-American Economic Conference, and Senora de Filho were among the guests at the small dinner given last evening by Mr. and Mrs. Harold J. Wood on the Shoreham Terrace.

Others in the company were the Minister Counselor of the Brazilian Embassy and Mme. Lobo, Mr. and Mrs. Achilles Moreau and Maj. and Mrs. John Gillett.

Mrs. Lewis Entertains

Mrs. A. Dennie Lewis was hostess at a small luncheon yesterday at the Shoreham in honor of Mrs. Jackson Davis, who is leaving to join Lieut. Davis at Wright Field, Dayton, Ohio. Covers were laid for 12.

Mrs. George R. Kent Is Guest Of Honor at Mullally Party

Some hundred or more old friends and acquaintances of Mr. and Mrs. Joseph Mullally dropped in at their Calvert Street home yesterday during the cocktail hours when the Mullallys entertained informally for their house guest, Mrs. George R. Kent.

The honor guest arrived in Washington this week for an indefinite stay with her hosts who themselves have only recently returned to the city for the duration. Mrs. Kent, who is now of New York and Washington Crossing, Pa., was formerly Mrs. Victor Llewellyn and before her first marriage was Miss Alicia du Pont.

Among those who came to renew old friendships over tall frosted mint julep glasses were the Naval Attache at the Brazilian Embassy, Comdr. Edmundo Jordas Amorim do Valle and Mme. do Valle; the Second Secretary and Mme. Gouthier and Second Secretary Fernando Saboia de Medeiros; Senorita Cristina Michels, daughter of the Chilean Ambassador; Admiral and Mrs. William Blandy, Mr. and Mrs. Charles Wilson; Admiral and Mrs. John Towers, Comdr. Robert Lee, William Cushman, Mrs. Sutherland Mayo, Mrs. Hugh Casey, Mr. and Mrs. Kenneth Watson, Mr. and Mrs. George Lockhart and W. W. Woods.

Collins, Randolph Harrison, Mrs. Edward Bradly, Mrs. Esther Norman, Comdr. James Mooney, Mr. and Mrs. George Amory Maddox and Lieut. and Mrs. Millard F. West, jr.

Mrs. Wyatt and Miss Fleming Give Luncheon

Gaily informal was the luncheon yesterday at which Miss Minnie Mae Fleming of Dallas, Tex., and Washington, and Mrs. Walter Wyatt were joint hostesses in the latter's home on Kalmia Road.

Although the fete was not given in honor of any one guest, Mrs. Tom Connally was a special center of attention, and the event was arranged on a date that would be convenient for her. Others who shared the spotlight with Mrs. Connally were several newcomers to the Capital and a few out-of-towners, one of whom, Mrs. A. B. Dudley of Columbus, Ga., is visiting Mrs. Wyatt.

Mme. Bilmanis, wife of the Latvian Minister, was ranking guest in the company of 30. Others there were Mrs. Luther Johnson, Mrs. Fritz Lanham, Senora de Munilla of the Cuban Embassy; Mme. Yu of the Chinese Embassy; Mrs. Ollie James, Mrs. Roy Miller and her daughter-in-law, Mrs. Dale Miller of Dallas; Mrs. James Souby, Mrs. William A. Disque, Mrs. Clinton Tribby, Mrs. William Stanley, Mrs. William Levis, Mrs. Barnet Nover and Mrs. Wallace McClure.

Still others there included Mrs. Hardin Arledge, Mrs. George M. Badger, Mrs. Frank Schneider, who came here recently from Dallas; Mrs. Charles J. Brand, Mrs. Frank Waring, Mrs. Jack Beall, Mrs. Seiford Stellwagon, Mrs. Hugh Dean, Mrs. Oliver Colvin, wife of Commander Colvin, who recently came here from New Jersey and has taken a house next door to Mrs. Wyatt; Mrs. Eugene Catron, who is now living in the Silver Spring home of Justice and Mrs. William O. Douglas; Mrs. Virginia Killinger, and Mrs. J. D. Davis of Fort Worth, Tex., who is the house guest of her sister, Mrs. Lanham.

Senorita Obaldia To Visit Alfaros

A newcomer to the international set in Washington the end of this month will be Senorita Manuela Obaldia of Panama, who plans an indefinite stay in the Capital.

Upon her arrival she will visit for a few days with her cousin Mme. Richard Alfaro and Dr. Alfaro, the former President of Panama.

Schedule of Dr. Lopez Crowded Today as Usual

Although Thursday was left "open" on the original schedule for Dr. Alfonso Lopez, President-elect of Colombia, today will turn out to be as crowded as any other during the Capital sojourn of the distinguished visitor and his party.

To begin with—one item on yesterday's calendar has been carried over to this noon. Plans for Dr. Lopez to visit Congress were shifted when it was discovered that the House and Senate were not to be in session yesterday, and that Congressional leaders were up to their ears in committee meetings. As arrangements stand so far, Dr. Lopez will be on Capitol Hill at noon today and will be received in the office of Vice President Wallace and will also be greeted by House Speaker Sam Rayburn.

At 1:30 p. m. the distinguished visitor will be guest of honor at a luncheon to be given by the Ambassador of Venezuela, Dr. Don Diogenes Escalante, at the Venezuelan Embassy. At 6 p. m. Dr. Lopez will be feted at a cocktail party at which Assistant Secretary of State Adolf A. Berle will be host. Today's calendar will wind up with a dinner this evening at Blair House.

The luncheon at the Venezuelan Embassy today will include members of the Lopez party as well as the Colombian Ambassador, Dr. Turbay, and the staff of the embassy; the Ambassador of Peru, Don Manuel Frere y Santander; the Ambassador of Ecuador, Capitan Colon Eloy Alfaro; the Ambassador of Panama, Ernesto Jaen Guardia, and the staff of the Venezuelan Embassy. Still others who will attend are the delegates from Venezuela to the economic conference, Dr. Jose J. Gonzalez Gorrondona, Dr. M. Perez Guerrero, and the delegates to the conference from Colombia, Alberto Bayon and Antonio Puerto. A few other friends of the Ambassador will be in the group.

Last evening Dr. Lopez was feted at a dinner given by Undersecretary of State Sumner Welles at the Mayflower Hotel. Guests included the President's son, Pedro Lopez y Michelson; the former Minister of Foreign Relations, Jorge Soto del Corral; the former Minister of Education, Alfonso Araujo; and the former Minister of Labor, Alberto Jarmillo Sanchez.

Also the Minister of Colombia, Dr. Turbay, and Juan Jose Turbay, Postmaster Gen. Frank C. Walker; the Secretary of Commerce, Jesse Jones; Senator Tom Connally, Senator Joseph F. Guffey, Representative Luther A. Johnson, Representative Charles A. Eaton; the new United States Ambassador to Colombia, Arthur Bliss Lane; the Director of the Pan American Union, Leo S. Rowe; Archibald MacLeish, Laurence Duggan, Capt. Frank Loftin, U. S. N., Naval Aide to the President-elect; Lieut. Col. Arthur L. Richmond, Military Aide to the President-elect; John H. Morgan, Stanley Woodward, Alburn D. West, Robert Knowlton and Joseph Kingsbury Smith.

Winters-Bayly Engagement Told

Closes on Wedding Trip; To Live in Richmond

After a wedding trip to the Finger Lakes region of New York, Mr. and Mrs. Ross Arthur Close will make their home in Richmond, Va. Before their recent marriage the bride was Miss Janet Almeda McDonald, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Edgar C. McDonald of Beech Glen, Alexandria, Va. He is the son of Mrs. Arthur C. Close and the late Mr. Close of Wellsboro, Pa.

Their marriage took place on Sunday, July 5 at the home of the bride's aunt, Mrs. L. C. Bright, in Washington. Given in marriage by her father, she wore a bridal costume of crepe de chine belonging to her mother, made on princess lines with insets of lace on the skirt, yoke and sleeves. Her mother's wedding veil of ivory tulle with a wreath of orange blossoms and a bouquet of gardenias completed her costume. The matron of honor, Mrs. Richard Baldwin, wore aqua lace and net, and carried yellow rosebuds. Henry Bright McDonald, brother of the bride, was best man.

Immediately following the ceremony a wedding breakfast was held for members of the immediate families and the bridal party. For her traveling costume the bride wore a brown and white two-piece suit with a corsage of sweetheart roses. She attended the University of Maryland's Conservatory of Music and George Washington University, where she was a member of Phi Mu. Mr. Close was graduated from Penn State College.

The Hunt Country

By Nina Carter Tabb

OF INTEREST throughout Northern Virginia is the news just received here, of the marriage of Miss Edith Shepard Gwathmey, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Gaines Gwathmey to Lieut. Ettore Howard Anthony Grassi, United States Army, which took place on Monday in Westbury, Long Island. The bride, who is a granddaughter of Mrs. Richard Wallach of Warrenton and the late "Dick" Wallach has been a frequent visitor in Virginia. Her mother was formerly Miss Edith Shepard Wallach.

An outstanding sports event of the weekend will be the Front Royal Remount Depot Horse Show and Sale which will be attended by scores of people from nearby counties. Such well-known stables as Springsburg Farm, Meander Farm, Waverley Farm and Beau Val will compete in the various classes. Fort Belvoir is sending a 50-piece military band for the occasion.

Among the many service men who visited friends and relatives in the hunt country this week were Capt. Nathaniel A. Yuckman, United States Army, and Edward Wright Ferry, United States Army, who are stationed at Camp Pickett in Blackstone, Va.

RETURNING TO their homes this week after a stay of several days with Mrs. Jane Foster Palmer at Glenville near The Plains were Mrs. Robert Fauntleroy Turner of Washington, Miss Virginia Coryell and Miss Susan Carter of Alexandria, Miss Edith Lawton and Miss Joan Pringle of the British Embassy in Washington and Lieut. Arthur Smith of Fort Washington.

House guest this week of Miss Marguerettа Fitzhugh Turner of Middleburg has been Mrs. Virginia McGill Coryell of Georgetown. Miss Harriot Fleming of Washington has been spending several days with her mother, Mrs. Richard Bland Lee Fleming at her home, Green Mont, in The Plains. Miss Clarissa Fleming of The Plains has been visiting Mrs. Southgate Morison at Redgate and Mrs. William Rust at Leesburg.

ONE OF THE important dinner parties of the week was given Monday night by Mrs. Mary Elizabeth Whitney in honor of Luddington Patton, who left Tuesday to join the armed forces.

The Gerard B. Lamberts of Princeton, N. J., have been spending several days at their Virginia home, Carter Hall, in Millwood and entertained a small group of friends at dinner there recently.

Back from Blacksburg, Va., is Miss Harriet Ann Middleton of The Plains. While there she visited her twin brothers, who are attending V. P. I.

Here for the month of July are Mr. and Mrs. N. Holmes Morison, jr. of New York who are guests of his parents, Mr. and Mrs. Nathaniel H. Morison at Welbourne. Miss Mary Kate Wheeler of Washington is the house guest of Mrs. Howard White at Pelham near Upperville.

Newcomers to Virginia are Mrs. Norman Toerge and her daughter, Miss Nancy Redmond of Long Island, who are occupying their newly complete home near Zula. They entertained on Monday at a cocktail party.

CHARLES JONES came from New York last weekend to join Mrs. Jones and their son, Charles, jr., at their Virginia farm near Bluemont. They have as house guests this week Mr. and Mrs. Munford Boyd of Charlottesville, who are now living in Washington at the St. Nicholas Apartments. Miss Betty Lyon of Black Oak Ridge in Purcellville has returned home from a visit in Pittsburgh, where she was a bridesmaid at the wedding of Miss Marion McCague and Charles Anderson on Saturday. The bride has been a frequent visitor to this part of Virginia and has many friends here. Miss Mary Owen Lyon is at home after a visit with her grandmother, Mrs. Robert Bentley, in Baltimore.

Local Girls Make Good—in Opera

Two Washington girls, Miss Elizabeth Ryder and Miss Margaret Butterfield, both of Chevy Chase, have been accepted for the Chautauqua Opera Company Chorus for the summer. The company has Metropolitan Opera stars for its lead in summer and is one of the highest rating opera companies in the country.

Both girls are former pupils of Mrs. Florence Howard, and Miss Butterfield has sung on several occasions for the USO in Washington.

D. E. Braun and Bride At Home in Arlington

Mr. and Mrs. Douglas E. Braun are making their home in Arlington, Va., following their marriage in the Wallace Memorial United Presbyterian Church on June 27. The bride is the former Miss Jane H. Lobaugh, daughter of Mrs. S. L. Lobaugh of Breckenridge, Tex. Mr. Braun is the son of Mr. and Mrs. S. E. Braun of Pompton Plains, N. Y.

The Rev. C. E. Hawthorne officiated at the ceremony and Miss Lena Lobaugh, cousin of the bride, was maid of honor. Eugene Scheele was best man and a reception followed at 1500 Rhode Island Avenue Northwest.

Women's Auxiliary Gives Full Support To Air Program

IDLE LEISURE hours for school boys and girls are going to be few and far between—at least for the duration. That is—if the newly created Women's Auxiliary of the Air Youth Division, National Aeronautics Association, has its way.

Out to make the American youths definitely air minded, the women's division would substitute aviation for football, basketball or other peacetime activities. In other words, at the end of the school day, the boys and girls would spend their time learning the fundamentals of aviation instead of congregating at the corner drug store.

Purpose of the program is to train the youth of the Americas to be of service to their countries in the field of aviation, since the success of this war and the Nation's future security rests with youth. Other aims of the plan are: To stand side by side with South America and Canada in creating an esprit de corps in the Western Hemisphere, to bring parents, teachers and children closer together in a united cause.

Recently Organized

Organized about two weeks ago, the Women's Auxiliary of the Air Youth Division of the National Aeronautic Association has as its chairman Mrs. Clarence Norton Goodwin, wife of Judge Goodwin, counsel for the Government in the Bridges case.

Mrs. Goodwin started her war work last year. A widely known social magazine gave her several pages in the July issue in reference to the "Nightingales." Last winter she headed a First Aid Motor Corps for 50 girls, which subsequently was absorbed by the Red Cross and Woman's Volunteer Services. One magazine dubbed her "Nightingales"—"Our country's most exclusive first aid group."

To this new job, Mrs. Goodwin is bringing her usual exuberant enthusiasm and tremendous ability for getting things done. What's more, she isn't just talking aviation, she's taking flying lessons from one of her sons.

Two Vice Chairmen

Mrs. Robert P. Patterson, wife of the Undersecretary of War, is one of two vice chairmen of the Women's Auxiliary. The other is Mrs. Harry Thomas Jordan of Philadelphia, national wing commander for Girls Junior Air Reserve, National Aeronautic Association.

Enthusiastic Washington members of the board include Mrs. William O. Douglas, wife of Justice Douglas of the Supreme Court; Mrs. Warren Lee Pierson, wife of the president of the Import-Export Bank; Mrs. William A. N. Burden, wife of the vice president, Defense Supplies Corp., division of American Republics Aviation, and Mrs. Ralph Bard, wife of the Assistant Secretary of the Navy.

On the honorary list of sponsors are Mrs. Jesse H. Jones, Mrs. Paul V. McNutt, Mrs. Robert H. Hinckley, Mrs. Frederick H. Brooke and Mrs. Ralph G. Wright of New York City.

Distinguished List

Out of town members of the board are Mrs. James Millis of Wilmington, Del., who has been appointed chairman of the committee of regional directors; Mrs. Merrill Meigs of Chicago and Washington; Mrs. C. Leslie Glenn, one of the vice presidents of the National Girl Scouts and national chairman of the program committee.

Still others include Mrs. Roger Firestone of Cleveland, treasurer; Mrs. Thomas H. Beck, Connecticut; Mrs. E. Swift Newton, Philadelphia, Pa.; Mrs. Stewart Elliott, San Francisco, and Mrs. Cecil B. DeMille, Los Angeles.

Did You Know . . . ?

THAT—Mrs. Charles Fisher Taylor, who returned in June from France on the Drottningholm, has many hair-raising tales to tell? Prodding her always for more, guests centered around her at the party given in her honor Tuesday afternoon by her niece, Mrs. Livingston Vann, jr., at Confederate Memorial. Mrs. Taylor, who has lived in France for over four years, went to Vichy after the fall of Paris.

The tea was in the form of a birthday party for one of the sisters, Mrs. Goodwin Davis Ellsworth, who was celebrating her eighty-sixth birthday. Other sisters present were Mrs. Thomas Preston Johnson of Strathmere, N. J., and Mrs. Adolphus Wilkerson Wells, mother of the hostess.

Also representing the family circle were Mrs. Taylor's sister-in-law, Mrs. A. S. J. Williams of Richmond; a niece, Mrs. Omar Bailey Buchanan of Wilkinsburg, Pa., and a grandniece, Miss Margaret Carlton of Wallace, N. C.

Both Mrs. Vann and Mrs. Taylor are active in the work of the United Daughters of the Confederacy. Mrs. Taylor is founder and honorary president of the Asha Faison Colwell Williams Chapter here. Also, she is affiliated with the Daughters of the American Revolution and the League of American Pen Women.

Mrs. C. N. Goodwin Organizes Group To Enlist Youth

Receive Portrait

A NEW POSTER by Bradshaw Crandell, well-known magazine cover and poster artist, depicting a Girl Scout as a modern "Minute Maid" indorsing the purchase of war bonds and stamps, was presented to Mrs. Henry Morgenthau on behalf of the artist and of the Girl Scout yesterday at the Treasury Department.

The presentation was made by 13-year-old Girl Scout Betty Bredin of Kew Gardens, Queens, N. Y., who was selected by Crandell as a typical Girl Scout model. Mrs. Morgenthau received the poster on behalf of the Treasury Department. It will be distributed by the Girl Scouts throughout the Nation as part of their effort to increase the sale of war bonds and stamps.

The poster shows Betty in her uniform as an intermediate Girl Scout pasting a war savings stamp in an official stamp book. In the background is the Minute Man, which is the insignia of the Treasury Department in its campaign for the sale of war bonds and stamps. The slogan reads "Girl Scouts . . . today's Minute Maids. . . . Do their part. . . . Do Yours Now. . . . Buy War Bonds and Stamps."

Both Crandell and Betty have contributed their services to the production of the poster for the Treasury Department. Betty is a member of Girl Scout Troop No. 123, Queens, and attends Public School 99 in Queens. She has been in scouting since she was 7 years old, when she entered a Brownie Pack, the special Girl Scout group for little girls. She is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Walter Bredin.

THAT—the regular board meeting of the District of Columbia, Daughters of the American Revolution Chapter House, meets Friday morning at the Chapter House? Following the meeting, members of the board will honor Mrs. Frank Fisher, the new manager of the Chapter House, with a luncheon.

Suffrage Celebration

Come July 19—members of the National Woman's Party throughout the Nation will celebrate the ninety-fourth anniversary of the Seneca Falls, N. Y., Woman's Right Convention. Over at national headquarters—the Alva Belmont House, 144 B Street Northwest—local groups will join with national representatives to commemorate the occasion.

Senator James H. Hughes of Delaware will be honor guest at the reception, from 5 to 7:30 p. m. in the garden at the party's headquarters.

Mrs. Mathilde Bahr, chairman of the D. C. Branch of the National Woman's Party, will receive the guests with Mrs. Harvey W. Wiley, national president.

Scouts Present 'Thanks Badge' To Mrs. Fries

Mrs. Amos A. Fries, who is proud of her all-Scout family, was awarded a "thanks badge" for 20 years of service to the D. C. Girl Scouts. The badge was presented by the D. C. Girl Scouts at a meeting Tuesday at the headquarters.

In presenting the "thanks badge," Mrs. Edward W. Sturdevant, Girl Scout commissioner, recalled that it was through Mrs. Fries' interest and the assistance of her husband, General Fries, that the first local Girl Scout camp was established at Edgewood Arsenal in 1921. Camp Bradley was used by local Girl Scouts until Camp May Flather was built in 1927. General Fries was the first in the family to receive the "thanks badge."

MRS. AMOS A. FRIES

Three Daughters Active Scouts

The three daughters of the Fries family—Mrs. Theodore Pierson, Mrs. Robert G. Merrit and Mrs. Elizabeth Henney—were all Girl Scouts. In fact, Mrs. Henney was a Golden Eaglet in Troop 8 of which Mrs. Herbert Hoover was then leader. The son, Capt. Stuart G. Fries, now with the Tank Corps in New Caledonia, has a Boy Scout record to his credit.

The council heard a report from Mrs. George Welker in charge of the new Wing Scout program. Twenty senior Scouts started their training at Central High School, Monday night, under the instruction of Edward Heyl, a Civilian Air Patrol pilot.

Construction kits brought down from Philadelphia by Mrs. Harry Thomas Jordan, National Junior Air Reserve wing commander for girls, National Aeronautic Association, were used by the wing scouts last night as they started construction of flying models. Joseph Tenschert and Robert Parks are instructors for this phase of the training program.

Mrs. Welker to Attend Course

Mrs. Welker will leave for Philadelphia Sunday to attend the wing scout training course, July 13 to 25, given by the National Junior Air Reserve of the National Aeronautic Association.

The next meeting of the District of Columbia Council of Girl Scouts will be held the first Tuesday in September. The council has found it necessary to continue to hold monthly meetings except August this summer due to intensified activity in connection with their war program.

Look at the Mediterranean -from here!

Stand beside Admiral William V. Pratt —on the Admiral's Bridge.

See through his eyes... as the conflict unfolds from week to week.

You will see clearly. You will see things you never saw before.

READ ADMIRAL PRATT'S column today in NEWSWEEK . . . It uncovers the true situation in the Mediterranean.

This outstanding naval figure—former Chief of Naval Operations—is a brilliant strategist and observer. He is a gifted writer, exclusive in NEWSWEEK, who backs up every word with blue-water "know-how" and a hard-headed sense of naval purposes and plans.

No wonder, then, that Admiral Pratt, since Pearl Harbor, has become one of the most eagerly-read authorities on the war. No wonder he has such a loyal following among people who want to see beyond Page One of their newspapers.

Admiral Pratt is one of several outstanding men who regularly write signed opinion in NEWSWEEK . . . providing the salt of wisdom that every intelligent mind seeks. Others are Major General Stephen O. Fuqua . . . Ralph Robey, far-sighted economist . . . Raymond Moley, on national affairs . . . John Lardner, war correspondent . . . and Ernest K. Lindley in Washington.

The news—and what it means

Thinking people are turning to NEWSWEEK for its complete reporting of the news. Not only news coverage . . . but news significance.

NEWSWEEK places the facts of today's events in realistic relation with yesterday's and tomorrow's.

World happenings do not come to you as unrelated bits of information. You see what has preceded these events—and what's likely to follow. You see the whole vast news parade—not just segments of it.

. . . and the Periscope—89% accurate

Probably the most discussed development in journalism today is NEWSWEEK's Periscope, covering news that hasn't happened—yet.

Each week this department—which is exclusive with NEWSWEEK—turns a penetrating eye on the future. And better than 4 out of 5 of its predictions prove accurate!

Because NEWSWEEK speaks out in all three tenses—past, present and future—it is the favorite news magazine of opinion-forming Americans. No other magazine has so large a concentrated readership among leaders in industry, government and the professions.

Security Status to Be Denied Job-Shoppers

Job-shopping will be discouraged by the Civil Service Commission. The shoppers will be denied re-employment rights after the war. A new policy to that effect will be announced soon by the commission. It will give the commission absolute control over transfers and that will mean fewer transfers. The agency priority system will be shaken up to protect the agencies with low priority ratings. If an employe were doing essential work in a low priority agency he would be kept in that job unless a war agency can show that he would be given more important work. The priority ratings of agencies will fade into insignificance. Emphasis will be placed on the importance of the job in question no matter whether it be in an agency with a No. 1 or No. 5 rating.

Most transfers now are the result of job-shopping. An employe of a low priority agency such as General Accounting Office makes application, say, at Office of Price Administration, which has a high rating. OPA decides to hire the employe and makes a request for his services through the commission. Under the commission's regulations, the employe is entitled to job security after the war. He can return to his old GAO job when his OPA position peters out. Under the new transfer policy the employe would not get the re-employment rights.

McCarty to Join Army

Milburn McCarty, press chief of the War Saving Bonds Division, whose draft status has created such a ruckus, will settle the issue himself by joining the Army very shortly . . . Department heads have strict orders from F. D. R. not to make any comments about rubber until after the salvage drive is over . . . War Information Boss Elmer Davis may be given an order giving him some control over Army and Navy news.

Secret Service will hire 20 women to guard Treasury buildings. They will replace men called to the colors. The women will wear blue uniforms, skirts, jackets and overseas caps, but Secret Service officials are debating whether to give them guns. They will be assigned to jobs where the element of safety is not involved . . . Treasury's General Counsel Edward Foley is expected to take a commission in the Army shortly. His draft number came up but he was deferred. Foley is a valuable cog at Treasury and many believe he can be of a greater service in his present position than he would be if he accepted a commission.

National Labor Relations Board is having personnel trouble. It has had to cut the salaries of scores of lawyers whose jobs were given a higher classification by the Civil Service Commission. The House committee did not approve of the rises. Now the lawyers are quitting to take other jobs . . . Fowler Hamilton is in London, where he is negotiating a working arrangement between the Board of Economic Warfare and the corresponding British ministry . . . Commerce has published a popular small town manual for community action which gives the small towns hints on how they can contribute toward winning the war.

Day Work for Girls, 18

Girls under 18 probably will be taken off night shifts as a result of pressure from the Civil Service Commission. The commission not only recommends it but it points out also that Federal agencies that are working youngsters between the hours of 7 p. m. and 7 a. m. are in effect breaking the District law. And of course the Government should live up to the standards it sets for private industry, although it does not always do so. Many 16 and 17-year-old girls are now working night shifts in the various war agencies as clerks, stenographers and typists. It is a violation of the Act of May 29, 1928 for private industry to do it.

Army Air Corps is holding up commissions for civilians. Commissions were "frozen" several weeks ago and apparently they will stay that way for another week or so . . . Now that birth certificates are no longer necessary to get war jobs, on order of Man Power Boss Paul McNutt, some Census workers probably will be thrown out of jobs. Census received 20,000 requests a week for proof of birth and age. A staff of 800 employes was built up to handle the requests. Now the requests will fall off sharply and many of the employes will be assigned to other jobs in the bureau . . .

Curves Mark the Patriot

Uncontrolled curves and unrestrained bulges along milady's figure no longer mark the owner as an uncaring creature. They are a mark of patriotism, according to W. H. Boyd, jr., head of the rubber drive, who reported yesterday many girls have surrendered their girdles. "Any girl who seems out of shape is more a patriot than her sister whose curves are still confined," he said.

What! No Mustard?

The Civilian Defense Volunteer Office yesterday took over the booth in Post Square to use as a registration center. During the day it registered a number of civilian defense volunteers, sold some War Savings Stamps and answered questions. There was one unsatisfied customer; he slapped a quarter on the counter and said, "Two hot dogs and a cup of coffee, please!"

PUC to Get 30-90c Taxi Demand Today

Cabmen Unite On Plan Raising Fees, Changing Zones

A united demand for a taxi rate scale of 30-50-70-90 cents and for a modified subzone system will be presented today to the Public Utilities Commission by 22 cab associations and the cab union, following an all-day conference between representatives of the companies and the drivers at the District Building yesterday.

The scheduled conference between the PUC and the industry leaders yesterday morning was adjourned shortly after noon in favor of a conference confined to members of the cab industry, who had spent the morning arguing among themselves instead of with the PUC.

Points Listed

After six hours of debate, the union representatives and company operators reached an unanimous agreement on the following points:

1. The rates should be 30-50-70-90 cents for the four major zones, with a small new zone in the extreme southeast point of Anacostia south of Atlantic Avenue, for which the charge from the downtown Zone 1 should be $1.10.

2. Adoption of a zone map similar to one submitted to the PUC on Monday by the Combined Cab Companies. The original map submitted used the new PUC map for the Northwest section of town, and the old standard zone map for the Northeast secion. It was decided yesterday to change the western boundary of Zone 3 so it would run from the Potomac River up Foxhall Road to Nebraska Avenue, along Nebraska to Albemarle Street, thence to Broad Branch Road to Peabody Street. The northern boundary of the second zone was recommended to cut from Randolph Street through Soldiers' Home to Franklin Street and thence down Twelfth Street to H.

Hains Point Fare 90 Cents

3. The fare to Hains Point should be 90 cents, with the Zone 2 boundary just north of East Potomac Park straightened out so the Jefferson Memirial would also lie in the 90-cent zone.

4. A system of subzones should be instituted to prevent excessively long one zone trips for which the driver, under the old rates, could charge only 30 cents. Instead of having set charges for trips from a subzone of one major zone into a subzone of another major division, which makes the subzone system ordered by the PUC so complicated that it requires a vast chart to figure out each trip, the subzones approved yesterday would be effective only for trips confined to one zone.

5. To ask that the waiting time be increased to $2.50 per hour and 15 cents for each five minutes thereafter.

Proposals that a time limit be given the commission were made but rejected after Ringgold Hart, Diamond Cab counsel who acted as moderator of yesterday's meeting objected, and Edward A. Glenn, union president, commented that anyway "the union has sufficient clubs swinging over the heads of the PUC to make it act snappy."

Point of Discussion

Dissension among the cabmen's leaders in the morning was principally on the question of the subzone system, as all were practically agreed upon the rates to ask before the hearing began.

Results of the two-day polling of drivers by the cab union were announced in part at the hearing. Glenn said that of 1761 drivers polled 1758 had asked for the 30-50-70-90 rates.

Later he revealed that 1679 drivers had voted to ask the removal of Gregory Hankin as member of the Public Utilities Commission. On the question of representation, 1536 asked that the union continue negotiations and 1623 agreed upon a "vacation" as the means of settling the issue.

British Scout Heroes Calmly Tell Deeds; Breathlessly Wait to Meet D. C. Girls

King "blitz" Scouts of Great Britain and Eagle Boy Scouts of Washington met for the first time yesterday, and the Britishers immediately wanted to meet American girls.

The four Englishmen—Stanley Newton, 18, of London; Roy Davis, 18, of Southampton; Hugh Bright, 17, a "bonny Scotsman" from Glasgow, and John Bethel, 16, of Birkenhead, England—arrived in the afternoon at Union Station. They were met by local Scout officials and Jo V. Morgan, "one-man board of tax appeals," representing the District government.

They were whisked to the Ambassador Hotel for a brushing-up before their five-minute broadcast at 4:15 over Station WWDC and at 5 o'clock attended a reception at the British Embassy.

The three English boys were attired in regular Scout uniforms, but the fourth, the Scotch lad, wore the traditional modified Scotch kilt outfit.

Last night they attended a rally in their honor at the Sylvan Theater when Dr. Paul Bartsch, acting president of the local Boy Scout Council, presided and introduced the youngsters. Following music by the Naval School Music Band, each of the "blitz" scouts recounted his experiences, which have made them heroes in the British Isles.

Scout Leader Newton won his spurs as a fire watcher and rescue worker in London and took a leading part in the British ministry of information film, "Men of Tomorrow." Upon his return to London he will join the R. A. F.

King Scout Davis of Southampton did outstanding work during the raid on that English port last April, and Troop Leader Bright of Glasgow, performed heroically as a stretcher-bearer during the German raids on the Clyde. Scout John Bethell, leader of the Sixty-fifth Birkenhead Troop won the Scout Bronze Cross for conspicuous bravery and devotion to duty during the heavy repeated air attacks on his home town. He was credited with the rescue of 12 persons buried beneath collapsed homes. Following a busy itinerary today, the British heroes will have an opportunity to meet American girls. This will be at a reception this afternoon given for them by Gen. and Mrs. Stuart C. Godfrey at their home on Thirty-third Place.

This morning their first call will be at the British Embassy at 9:30, followed by a visit to the Washington Cathedral 15 minutes later. At 11:15 o'clock they will call on Presidential Secretary Steve Early at the White House, and hope to meet President Roosevelt. At noon they will be luncheon guests of the Kiwanis Club and the Junior Board of Trade.

Later, they will visit Senator Capper at the Capitol, and at 4 p.m. will lay a wreath on the Tomb of the Unknown Soldier. Their reception at the home of General and Mrs. Godfrey will conclude their program. They are due in Buffalo, N. Y., on Friday.

In addition to Mr. Morgan, those meeting them at Union Station upon arrival included Scout Executive Linn C. Drake and William C. Wessel of National Scout Headquarters.

Washington Eagle Scouts accompanying them here were Robert Ashford, Richard Rogers, Jerry Brentlinger and David McCabe.

8 Killed as Fast Trolleys Crash

Norristown, Pa., July 8 (AP).—Eight persons were killed today and more than a score injured, many critically, when an interurban passenger trolley of the Lehigh Valley Transit Co. and an express freight crashed head-on on the single track at Penn Square, 3½ miles from here.

The motorman on the freight who was slightly injured, said he was "running under orders" and had expected to pass the pasenger on a siding just a short distance from the crash scene. Instead, he related, he saw the speeding limited rounding a curve about 50 yards ahead. He threw the controls into reverse and ran back into the car. The two trolleys telescoped, the freight ramming back to about the third seat section of the passenger.

Court Suspends Attorney Halpern

The justices of District Court yesterday suspended Isadore H. Halpern, an attorney with offices in the Southern Building, from law practice for a period of six months.

Halpern was adjudged guilty of unethical tactics in a case involving a will. The decision was handed down by Justices F. Dickinson Letts, Matthew F. McGuire, and Bolitha J. Laws.

Charges against Halpern had been brought by the committee on grievances and admissions of the District Bar Association.

W. E. Edwards Named

Winchester, Va., July 8—W. Erle Edwards, former Commonwealth's attorney for Frederick County, has been appointed to a 4-year term as trial justice of Frederick County.

New D. C. Judges Take Oath Today

The eight new appointees to the reorganized Municipal Court and newly created Municipal Court of Appeals will take the oath of office today from Chief Justice D. Lawrence Groner of the United States Court of Appeals.

At 11 a. m. Justice Groner will swear in the members of the new appellate tribunal—Chief Judge William E. Richardson and Associate Judges Nathan Cayton and Andrew M. Hood. The ceremony will be held at the Court of Appeals Building, Fifth and E Streets Northwest.

Sylvan Levin Is Conductor At Watergate

By Ray C. B. Brown

Sylvan Levin conducts the National Symphony Orchestra in the Seventy-fourth "Sunset Symphony Concert" at the Potomac Watergate on Wednesday night. Soloists: Ethel Bartlett and Rae Robertson. Program: Symphony No. 8 in B minor (Schubert), Two-Piano Concerto in E flat major (Mozart), Fantasia on Waltzes from "The Gypsy Baron" (Strauss-Byrns), Ballet Music from "Ramuntcho" (Deems Taylor), Two-Piano Pieces by Arenski, Lecuona and Milhaud.

Propitious weather accompanied last evening's Watergate concert by the National Symphony, and no one in the audience took seriously the light sprinkle of rain that fell from a passing cloud just as the red globe of the sun disappeared below the horizon. It was only too evident by the clear western sky that the showerlet was no omen of storm, and the assembling crowd grew continuously larger in the opalescent twilight. A dry and temperate air provided the right degree of comfort for thorough enjoyment of a program built primarily for entertainment and made doubly sure by the presence of those admirable duo-pianists, Ethel Bartlett and Rae Robertson.

Brown

Sylvan Levin, the young native Washingtonian who now directs the Philadelphia Opera Company, was the conductor without baton or mannerisms, but with a forthright and dynamic absorption in his task. He began with an alert and unsentimental, yet satisfyingly poetic reading of Schubert's B minor symphony. That masterpiece needs careful treatment lest it slip on the one hand into mawkishness or on the other into too desperate a gloom. It is music nicely balanced between the consciousness that all men are mortal and the Keatsian conviction that a thing of beauty is a joy forever. The symphony is not so much "unfinished" as interrupted, as though Schubert had suddenly awakened from a reverie on life and death, and then could not resume the broken thread of inspiration.

The guest artists filled out the first part of the program with Mozart's sparkling E flat concerto to which they gave the requisite brittle brilliance of tone. This is not emotional music but a display of clear and rather icy patterns, as scintillant and frosty as a winter landscape in bright sunlight. If it has a mood at all, it is that of light-hearted conversation gay with repartee.

After the intermission, Mr. Levin went all out for vivacity in a dashing performance of Byrns' fantasia on waltz themes from the Johann Strauss operetta, "The Gypsy Baron." Responding to his excitement, the players outdid themselves in prestissimo tempi and vertiginous rhythms. In much the same animation, but with less grace in the material, was the concluding ballet music from Deems Taylor's "Ramuntcho."

Allowed a solo spot on the program while the orchestra members became auditors, the Robertsons played the inevitable waltz and romance from Anton Arenski's first suite for two pianos with so much charm that one wished they had chosen unfamiliar movements from the other three suites. They also presented Lecuona's "Malaguena" and one of Darius Milhaud's "Saudades de Brasil." Recalled enthusiastically, they responded with the Brahms A major waltz, the Turkish march from Beethoven's "The Ruins of Athens" and an arrangement of Bach's "Jesu, Joy of Man's Desiring."

The audience asked Mr. Levin and the orchestra for extra numbers as a matter of course, and the concert was prolonged to the extent of Smetana's "Dance of the Comedians" and Sousa's "The Stars and Stripes Forever."

Higgins Turning Out Boats But Won't Talk About Them

He is a fabulous being, like the centaur or the Hydra or John Henry.

But yesterday, as he lay stretched full length on his bed in the Raleigh Hotel, making dates with Congressmen over the phone and spouting blue language, Andrew Jackson Higgins looked very mortal, indeed.

He isn't mortal, of course, because Higgins is performing the impossible as a shipbuilder and mortals don't do the impossible. His plant in New Orleans, as the current issue of Saturday Evening Post says, is turning out so many ships——

"Hold on, there," interrupted the ruddy-jowled son of a Nebraska judge, "don't you say anything about how many cargo ships we're turning out a day. Too much publicity, already; yeh, too much publicity.

"Just say this: When I launch my 100th ship, we're going to throw a blowout that'll make the Mardi Gras look like a honky tonk. Then you'll get an interview to end all interviews.

"But mind you, there is one condition: If one of our (United Nations) ships has been sunk in the Gulf of Mexico anytime during the preceding week, there'll be no blowout. Right now, though, no story. We've already had too ——— much publicity. No picture, either. Give my apologies to the photographer."

And that's why Andrew Jackson Higgins, in town for a couple of days to confer with Government officials, was mum about his mission. He wouldn't discuss his rubber explorations in South America (Frank, one of his four sons and general manager of Higgins Industries, Inc., got back from Venezuela not long ago.)

He wouldn't say whether his shipbuilding plant in New Orleans, the busiest in the world today, is achieving its goal of a Liberty freighter a day (200 of them are contracted for, to be launched in 1942-43).

Higgins, tantalizing man that he is, unburdened himself of a wad of off-the-record stories and photographs but, for publication, he was tighter than a snare drum. But to his credit it must be said that he did not cover up in the usual way: "Military secret and that sort of thing, you understand."

His son, Frank, and other members of the Higgins entourage left for home last night. A. J. himself probably will return today—the clam!

'Take a Letter, Darling' Transcribes Into a Hit

Rosalind Russell and Fred MacMurray Tops In Ace Cast in Brittle Palace Comedy; Interesting Shorts Supplement Feature

"TAKE A LETTER, DARLING." Paramount picturization of a story by George Beck, adapted to the screen by Claude Binyon, co-starring Rosalind Russell and Fred MacMurray, with Constance Moore, Macdonald Carey, Robert Benchley, Charles E. Arnt, Dooley Wilson, Cecil Kellaway, John Holland, Florine McKinney, Kathleen Howard, Margaret Seddon, George H. Reed, Margaret Hayes and Sonny Boy Williams. Produced and directed by Mitchell Leisen. At Loew's Palace Theater.

NEVER MIND THE BOSS' DAUGHTER, marry the boss. Especially if she happens to be Rosalind Russell and hasn't got a daughter.

That is, vaguely, the ancient theme of Paramount's brightly amusing comedy of "Take a Letter, Darling," which opens this morning on the screen at Loew's Palace Theater, with Miss Russell and Fred MacMurray costarred. But don't let those two words, "vaguely" and "ancient" lead you astray from the truth. The truth is that despite a basic idea that is slightly threadbare and the introduction of a comedy device or two that are distinctly superannuated, "Take a Letter, Darling" is one of the breeziest, most enlivening and wittiest "smart" fol-de-rols of the season.

Credit and gratitude for this happy eventuation should be split three ways in equal proportion—first, to Claude Binyon for his joyously entertaining script; second, to the stars and supporting cast for uniformly diverting performances and, third, to Producer-Director Mitchell Leisen for having given the piece an opulent production, plus movement, pace and diversity of scene and action in keeping with its brisk and buoyant story of love and big business in the advertising agencies.

If a quick analogy were needed for purposes of immediate classification, the same company's "Skylark," in which Claudette Colbert, Ray Milland, Brian Aherne and Binnie Barnes recently appeared, probably would afford the closest approach to the present exhilarating item. Except that "Take a Letter, Darling" is entirely different in its development and decoration of an identical idea.

In this brittle fable, Miss Russell is the resilient mainspring of a huge advertising agency, whose personal wiles wangle contracts that run into the millions. As a sop to the wives whose husbands she hypotizes—in a ladylike, businesslike, innocent way, you understand—she hires Mr. MacMurray as her private secretary. Needing the money to pursue a career in art, Mr. MacMurray accepts the ignominy as gracefully and graciously as may be—which is not so very. However, the crafty scheme works perfectly, until Miss Russell encounters one Mr. Jonathan Caldwell, who, with his sister, controls a fabulous tobacco business that squanders 10 million dollars a year on its advertising campaigns. He has been married and divorced four times and abhors women—until Miss Russell bounces into his life. Mr. MacMurray has stopped abhoring them long ago. So the action transplants itself to the Caldwell Carolina acres and thenceforward is motivated strictly by the venomous promptings of jealousy with the greenest eyes that ever gazed upon distracted lovers. How and why it all works out so happily and hilariously is the part no one will wish to miss in a day when such invigorating amusement is so scarce.

Played With Laughable and Lusty Skill

Rosalind Russell, hiding behind the deceptive name of A. M. MacGregor, brings a new excitement into the executive offices. She is as charmingly vulnerable a piece of chilled steel as ever defied the course of true love. Humorous, full of bravado and fear, and utterly feminine, "MacGregor" is one of Miss Russell's most delightful creations. As Tom Verney, the acquiescent artist, who inwardly rebels at "living a lie," profitable as it is, Fred MacMurray takes full comic and romantic advantage of one of his richest assignments in recent months. Completing the pivotal quadrangle, Constance Moore and Macdonald Carey, struggling along on that pitiful 39-million-dollar tobacco fortune, bring fresh and vigorous talents to a comedy of sufficient worth to deserve them, and Robert Benchley contributes an effectively droll touch as MacGregor's comparatively silent partner, addicted to miniature games with which he can while away his time in the office while Miss Russell does all the work—skeeball, horse shoes, quoits, mechanical animals, and the like. Quaint, no end.

Among numerous others who serve valuably in maintaining the high quality of excellence that characterizes every aspect of the picture are Kathleen Howard, Margaret Seddon, Cecil Kellaway and Charles E. Arnt, cast as one of Miss Russell's earlier and easier casualties.

The settings and all material accessories are such as to harmonize perfectly with the aristocratic atmosphere of a fanciful number that never deigns to mention a commission of less than a million on any advertising contract.

Even so, Director Leisen was not above permitting Miss Russell to pull the old "fainting" gag as a means of engaging Mr. Caldwell's attention, or letting Mr. MacMurray's handsome trailer get stuck on the railroad tracks as the Limited thunders down upon it—almost. Pretty old hat, but nobody seems to mind.

Although "Take a Letter, Darling" could do nicely without support, the new bill at the Palace also includes "For the Common Defense," a two-reel precaution against espionage and sabotage, in the "Crime Does Not Pay Series;" "Little Gravel Voice," a color cartoon comedy, and the customary "News of the Day."

FRED MacMURRAY as the testy Tom Verney, costarred with Rosalind Russell's A. M. MacGregor, in Paramount's "Take a Letter, Darling," the brilliantly executed comedy, now on the screen at Loew's Palace Theater. Despite this discouraging start, Mr. Verney turned out to be a particularly well turned-out young man by the time MacGregor got through with him—even to the folding opera hat, large enough to fit his head

HEDDA HOPPER

'That Which We Call a Rose, Etc.'

Hollywood, Calif., July 8.—I wonder if they changed the title of the Rita Hayworth picture to "You Were Never Lovelier" because that's what Vic Mature has been saying to her since their romance has come out in the open. Maybe someone should tell Rita the facts of life. After she lost her husband, her rating went up. Now its going down.

FRED ASTAIRE

Incidentally, Columbia's made a deal with Fred Astaire to do another picture over there. I don't know why they keep saying that Fred Astaire has turned down "Lady in the Dark." Fred told me himself it had never been offered him.

Philip Dorn will star in "No Surrender," by Martha Albrand. He plays a Dutchman in Holland, who becomes head of the justice department and is considered a traitor, but isn't. Jean Rogers, because of her work in "Mrs. Hadley," gets the lead opposite him.

I hear "Mrs. Hadley" is really a fine picture. It's the first important chance Harry Bucquet's had as a director. So what? He's sent immediately to England to do a picture over there.

Jeanette MacDonald cabled Gene Raymond in England on his birthday, but so far, no word has been received by her.

Since "I Married an Angel," with Nelson Eddy, is playing a bad second fiddle to a Maisie picture, it should be recorded that Jeanette never wanted to do it in the first place.

I've always said casting makes or breaks any movie, and casting in that was like putting an elephant in a part written for Bambi—and I don't mean Jeanette.

Remember the amusing story of Mrs. F. T. K. Fisher's "How to Cook a Wolf?" Well, Paramount's got her under contract, and she's doing an original story for Roz Russell (they hope) about a female wine taster who keeps falling down in her own vat—I said vat.

I'm wondering what the English gentry are going to say when they see their Lady Korda as a show girl in Lester Cowan's "Heart of the City." Story's about the Windmill theater in London, which remained open during the blitz, and its courageous girls. Well, they always say, life completes the circle.

Mitzi Green is being brought out from New York by Metro to test for "Best Foot Forward." I hope it will be the beginning of a new career for her. I saw her when in New York and she looked lovely.

Since Paul Muni arrived here for "The Commandos," he seems to have forgotten that he once insisted upon being billed as "Mr. Muni." Now maybe we'll get somewhere. He's a good actor, but we have many others.

Rumor has it that Wendy Hiller, of "Pygmalion" fame, is about to welcome the stork again.

Elizabethan Comedy Repeats Hit at C. U.

By Ernest L. Schier

The lusty Elizabethan theater is reborn again in a revival of their earlier production of "The Knight of the Burning Pestle" by the Harlequins, undergraduate dramatic society of Catholic University.

The saucy characters and cleverly woven plots which won the audiences of Shakespeare's time are reproduced to enjoy the approbation of Washington theatergoers; or, to be more precise, Catholic U. enthusiasts and we humbly confess to being one of them.

In his first directorial endeavor Leo Brady, one-half of the successful playwriting team of Kerr and Brady, has achieved the supreme triumph of recreating with conspicuous talent, an authentic illusion of the English theater which was the forerunner of our modern drama. Aided by an adept cast, Mr. Brady has woven the Beaumont and Fletcher comedy into a merry tale of love and intrigue that is both delightful and fascinating to see.

Originally written as a lampoon of the Shakespearean cycle, "The Knight of the Burning Pestle" departed from all known convention and tradition of the time and poked fun at both play and playgoer. In so doing, it introduced not only a new type of comedy but laid the foundation for a more fluent theater.

The play within a play is typical of many comedies of that particular age and is concerned with the apprentice who steals his master's daughter, only to lose her and then win her back again. Which just goes to prove that "boy meets girl, etc." was invented long before Hollywood ever thought of it. A unique twist which also has been copied by present-day playwrights, is the appearance on stage, at the beginning of the play, of two typical Elizabethan characters, man and wife, who object strenuously to the stilted, cliche plots and introduce, to the consternation of the cast, their own apprentice, who they claim, is equal to any Thespian who ever trod the boards. Said character immediately proceeds to raise havoc with the players by introducing unrehearsed scenes according to the whims and desires of his master and mistress; nothing he does or says has anything to do with the actual play except to make a mess of everyone's intentions and to complicate matters beyond belief.

Like all good troupers, the actors suffer with noble patience the unscheduled interruptions and manage somehow to bring an end to things, but not until the real audience has had a completely unrestrained good time.

The cast, headed by Linel Booth, in the role he created, performs with abounding zest and appreciation of the mood and moment. Victor Orsinger and Concetta Alonzi, as the usurpers of dramatic rights, team up wonderfully, giving the impression of being an embryonic Lunt and Fontanne. Dick Sykes and Marion Walberg are youthful and fresh as the lovers. The fop, who almost wins the hand of the fair Luce, gains much sympathy through the performance of Fritz Paul, while Charles Steinmetz and Kyle Thompson are properly opposed as paternal heads of the two families. Other notable performances are given by Kay Becker, Arthur Mullen and Tommy Shields.

Ralph Brown's scenic creation of a typical Elizabethan theater would rival any Broadway production.

When Charles Coburn let go with his recent blast at contemporary schools which "employ amateurs to teach amateurs how to remain amateurs," he might have gone a step farther and pointed to Catholic University as an outstanding example of all that is good and right in method, technique and presentation.

LEONARD LYONS

Loose-Leaf Notebook

New York, July 8.

One of the eight submarine saboteurs, who are being tried this week, knew Hitler—personally. This man once was Ernest Roehm's aide, but was "absent" during the purge days when Roehm was slain . . . All eight saboteurs have signed full confessions and made statements implicating friends and relatives . . . The group which landed on Long Island had no connection with the four who arrived here via the Florida coast. They were a separate unit and communicated with the others many weeks after arrival . . . The Long Island group intended to land at Easthampton, but the fog necessitated a change in plans . . . Two of the men recognized J. Edgar Hoover when they met him and told him: "You're Mr. Hoover. We know you from your pictures."

PAULETTE GODDARD

All of the saboteurs are men of average height. They have no distinguishing features which might have made them prominent in a crowd of people. That's another reason why their arrest is an amazing feat of detection . . . They all wore "Victory" suits, which they purchased soon after landing from a clothing chain store . . . G-Man Hoover will attend their trials and will be one of the witnesses . . . When Hoover was asked what he plans to do with the $170,000 cash and all the dynamite brought here by the saboteurs, he replied: "The cash will pay for a United States Bomber. But the dynamite and other explosives will be returned to Germany—by our planes."

ooo

In Antwerp recently a Nazi vessel was blown up by some loyal Belgians. The guard assigned to the dock reported that he had seen a woman walking by stealthily a few minutes before the explosion. The Gestapo immediately began a campaign to discover that lady . . . Their first lead came when an anonymous Belgian sent them a photo of a pretty girl, but failed to mention her name or address. The photo was published in the Belgian newspapers, together with an offer of a reward for her identification . . . That week 2000 people applied to the Gestapo for the reward. They identified accurately the girl in the photo—Paulette Goddard.

Ernest Hemingway has started to work on an assignment similar to John Steinbeck's job for the United States Army Air Corps. Hemingway is writing a book and motion picture story, for the Engineer Corps. The movie rights will be sold for $250,000, which will go to Army Relief . . . Robert E. Sherwood is borrowing Harry Hopkins' Baedecker . . . Warner Bros. plan to send a film crew to Russia, for background shots to be used in the movie adaptation of "Mission to Moscow." Talent scouts now are in New York, seeking an unknown to play the role of Ambassador Davies . . . Because of the transportation problem, there probably will be no Ringling Bros. Circus show next season. The show grossed $32,000 in one day, at New Haven, Conn.

This is one of the laments of a resident of Amsterdam, who related that before his country was occupied, he and his wife used to keep two jars in their house—one jar for his tobacco, and the second for tea . . . "Now we only have one jar," he sighed. "If I want to smoke my pipe, I first ask my wife whether she's had enough tea. And if she wants tea, she always asks me first whether I'd had enough tobacco."

ooo

The Genius Club, the theatrical group organized here last season, didn't show enough genius and has dissolved. The successor organization is called Actors Cues, Inc., and its board of directors includes Thornton Wilder, Joseph Schildkraut and Alexander Ince . . . Moss Hart helped write the Noel Coward impersonation for Irving Berlin's "This Is the Army"—the Nation's No. 1 Show. Two of the opening night $1000 boxes were bought by Berlin himself . . . The Warner Brothers Studio's $250,000 check for the film rights to "This Is the Army," was a guarantee check, as against the 50 per cent which it will give to Army Emergency Relief . . . Elliot Paul is writing an Addendum to his "Life and Death of a Spanish Town," revealing the fate of the characters.

ooo

Last week the lowest royalty check in the history of the music publishing business was sent to the lyricist who wrote "Of All the Things I Love." This was the song which Walter Huston sang in "Love's Old Sweet Song" during its Broadway run two years ago . . . The check was for 1 cent, total royalties. B. M. I., the publishers, sent it to the lyricist, William Saroyan—together with an explanation that the check might have been for a few cents more were it not for the fact that the one copy sold had been sold at a discount . . . The explanation was unnecessary. The lone purchaser of that song was the author, Saroyan.

Flynn's Car Takes Unscheduled Jaunt

Errol Flynn paid the penalty for living in a mountain-top home, and having stunt man "Buster" Wiles as a semi-permanent house guest, trainer, secretary, and companion.

While Flynn one day recently was busy at Warner Bros. Studio in "Desperate Journey," Wiles was playing golf. He drove back to the Flynn home, and parked the car in the driveway. When he came back to get it about half an hour later, the car wasn't there.

Neither had it been stolen. The brakes had slipped, the car had rolled backward down 50 feet of a mountainside. As a result, Flynn is without transportation.

'Desert Song' Role For Flynn's Horse

Onyx, Errol Flynn's handsome black stallion which he rode in "They Died With Their Boots On," is going to resume his screen career.

Flynn is presenting the animal to Dennis Morgan for the latter to ride in Warner Brothers' Technicolor production of "The Desert Song."

Morgan currently is working with Ida Lupino and Joan Leslie in "The Hard Way" and is using his off days to accustom himself to Onyx's peculiarities.

Choose Ann

Ann Sheridan has been voted "the girl we would like most to be stranded with in a bomb shelter" by men of the Air Corps Technical School, Lowry Field, Colorado.

Some Sparklers to Go With the Firecrackers!

FOUR FOR A MUSICAL FOURTH OF JULY

Here are a quartet of adequate excuses for the Fourth of July number in the Mark Sandrich production for Paramount of "Holiday Inn," over and above the presence of Bing Crosby and Fred Astaire as the singing and dancing costars—each does both. Astaire's firecracker dance in this sequence will be talked about for days—and daze—after the picture has been viewed by the public

Twin Revivals Comprise New Bill at Pix

Continuing its present policy of bringing back outstanding films of years past, the Pix theater is currently showing the first picture made by Jack Benny, the Waukegan Jester.

Benny has come a long way since his early radio popularity, but it is interesting to note that his initial movie venture was given as pretentious a production as that rated by any top-ranking star. Since then, of course, he has justified the first vote of confidence given him, by turning out a series of merry farces which have made his cinema personality as popular as his radio programs.

Originally released as "Transatlantic Merry-Go-Round," the picture is now known as "Keep 'Em Laughing" and contains an abundance of stars, past and present, in addition to a variety of entertainment from comedy and songs to misunderstanding and tragedy. The locale of the story is aboard an ocean liner, bound from New York to Europe (this was during the good old days.) Benny, pretty much playing himself, is the master of ceremonies and manager of a theatrical troupe who are entertaining the passengers as well as broadcasting to stations on land. The collection of characters from all walks of life make the boat a sort of seagoing "Grand Hotel" which in itself is not altogether original, but the full quota of entertainment keeps the picture moving along at a rapid pace.

Nancy Carroll appears as one of the entertainers, whose brother is mixed up with a gang of shipboard thieves. When one of them is killed, he is considered one of the chief suspects, as is Jack Benny whose efforts to aid the girl involve him, too. Fortunately for all concerned, a New York detective, vacation bound, is on the passenger list and with his aid the murderer is found and the others are finally cleared. Gene Raymond is seen as the thief who outwits his adversaries and aids in the final capture.

Benny and his troupe perform a number of the skits which he made popular on the air, including the incessant knocking on the door during his broadcast, plus the famous parody on Garbo's immortal line, "Ay vant to be alone." Frank Parker sings a number of very pleasant songs which held considerable popularity at the time of the picture's release. The Boswell sisters, who were still a team when the film was made, perform vocally with considerable zest and rhythm. Comedy is provided by Mitzi Green, former child star, who is now a full grown musical comedy performer, and Patsy Kelly, who garners many laughs with her dry and caustic humor. Others in the cast include Sidney Blackmer, who makes a genial corpse; Frank Morgan, Sid Silvers, Shirley Gray and Robert Elliot.

Also on the bill is the only two-reeler Bob Hope ever made. It's called "Going Spanish," and was also made before screen popularity came to this nationally known radio comic. With Bob is songstress Leah Ray, who was formerly vocalist for Phil Harris' band. E. L. S.

LOUELLA O. PARSONS

The Boys Now in Fast Company!

Hollywood, July 8 (INS).—I never thought that when Whirlaway, the turf champ, made his movie debut it would be in an Abbott and Costello movie. Well, that, my friends is on the ticket at Universal, and if Producer Alex Gottlieb gets his way Whirly will be out here in September to share honors with my favorite zanies in "Hold Your Horses."

FREDRIC MARCH

The story by Damon Runyon is an oldie—but it is being brought up to date. Abbott and Costello play a couple of New York cab drivers who are down to their last set of tires. Convinced that the horse is coming back into his own, they steal Whirly—and from there the movies goes into a race track yarn.

ooo

The set-up for "Mission to Moscow" at the last Warner pow-wow was Freddie March for Joseph E. Davies and Claudette Colbert for Mrs. Davies. Claudette is contracted for two pictures at Paramount, but she has a little free time. It is possible she will make the picture, since she will have time to visit Dr. Pressman, now in the Navy, before the cameras start turning. When I last talked with Claudette she said she wanted to spend as much time as possible with her husband, and those of us who have husbands working for Uncle Sam away from home appreciate her feelings.

ooo

Wise-cracking Betty Hutton, blonde torch singer, is to get the same chance that Preston Sturges gave Veronica Lake. That is, she will be the feminine star in his next picture, a topical subject which he isn't even divulging, so fearful is he that it won't be exclusive if it's noised around. Betty, curiously enough, will play a serious role.

Tigers to Play Army, Navy Elevens in N. Y.

This Morning

—With Shirley Povich

Clark Griffith's normal hate for the National League has now worked up to the frothy stage since they thwarted his scheme for playing the remainder of Washington's home games at night, except Sundays.

POVICH

Griffith started hating the National League in the winter of 1900-01, so it is no new idea on his part. At that time he was a young rebel against the National League which, in his view, represented all the evils of soulless, capitalistic monopoly. Griff was trying to start the American League in opposition to the National as a major league.

They fought him viciously with their big bankrolls, trying to outbid him and hamstring him in his efforts to sign players. Their agents followed him around the country raising Griff's offers after he had induced National League players to jump their contracts and go along with the new league. They tried to keep the American League out of New York and succeeded until Griff in 1904 enlisted the help of Tammany Hall and the police chief of the city.

The 72-year-old owner of the Nats still rankles at the recollection of those early days of struggle against the rich National League which did not, until 1905, consent to a world series between the two league pennant winners. At the world series every year since, Griff has been the noisiest rooter against the National League. When the Yankees maul a National League champion in a series game and when the American League All-Stars trounce the National League's All-Star team, Griff is happy.

Calls N. L. "Natural Enemy"

He doesn't like to remember that he spent three years in the National League as manager of the Cincinnati Club in 1909-10-11. That was after he quit as manager of the Yankees and had to take the only other baseball job available. He once told a biographer that "during those three years in the National League I felt like I was siding with my natural enemies." He got out at the first chance, accepting a lower salary to come back to the American League as the Washington manager in 1912.

"Consarn it, they're bad people," Griff was saying yesterday when he detailed the defeat of his plan to stage more of his profitable night games in Washington. "They've always been a bad league to do business with. They follow their leaders like sheep. They didn't have any business turning me down on my night games.

"The American League is a free-thinking league," added Griffith. "We aren't brow-beaten into making unanimous decisions like the National. We have minds of our own. We don't have all of those unanimous votes. There are always two or three clubs in our league that have opinions of their own and stick to 'em, even when we're outvoted.

"But that National League is just a rubber-stamp league. Any organization that always votes unanimously like they did against my night ball is a bad organization. They get scared to speak up when they think they'll be outvoted. If some of those National League clubs had any courage, they'd have voted more night games for Washington. After all, President Roosevelt implied that we should have more night ball in war time."

Griffith declares he called names at the joint meeting of the two big leagues where his night-ball proposal was first discussed. "I made the Chicago and Philadelphia clubs of the National League admit that they wrote me letters saying they would vote for my plan, and I told Judge Landis that Larry MacPhail of Brooklyn had assured me by telephone that he would vote for me. Landis asked MacPhail about that and he admitted it, but said he had changed his mind since then because it looked as if the National League as a whole wasn't in favor of it. They didn't have the courage to keep their word. It's a bad league, I tell you."

Says Frick Acting "Mighty Big"

In fact, says Griffith, it's a bad situation anyway, that permits the National League to have any voice in the number of night games played in Washington, an American League city." A couple of years ago, Judge Landis ruled that night schedules were a matter that needed joint action of the two leagues but that was only because they didn't want to give one team in a two-team town any advantage. Washington doesn't have a team in the National League, so why should they have any control over us? I think it's none of their business how many night games we play."

Griffith isn't fond either of Ford Frick, the reformed baseball writer who has moved into the presidency of the National League. Frick is something of an upstart to hear Griff tell it, and he tells it with great emphasis.

"That Frick is acting mighty big," said Griffith, implying that Frick's britches no longer fit him. He's the one who started all this business of taking the world series on tour from coast to coast and trying to make a hoppodrome out of it. We can raise more money for war relief in our own way than by any half-baked schemes."

Frick made a special trip to Chicago to place his plan for a 15-game world series before Landis, according to Griffith, but he tried to put Landis and all of baseball on the spot by announcing his plan to the newspapers first. "Them National Leaguers are always balling things up," said Griff. "Any time they get a smart idea, it's by accident."

On the Line

A Meeting With Hale and Hearty Mr. Mack

New York, July 8.—Connie Mack, still going strong in his eightieth year, was standing in front of his hotel in the bright morning sunshine, in the manner of the old ballplayer that he is. He was killing a little time before catching his train back to Philadelphia.

CONSIDINE

"No, I didn't go to the Cleveland All-Star game," the spare and saintly old soul said. "My boy went for me." He said it as if he didn't quite trust his young 'un to travel that far, even with grown-ups. It turned out that "my boy" was son Earle, who will be 53 his next birthday.

"Well, it was a good show and I'm glad we won at the Polo Grounds," Connie chatted. "That was a very cheap home run Rudy York hit, but I suppose we would have beaten them anyway."

He said that he and the other owners had had a nice meeting with Judge Landis, but at the mention of the 75-year-old czar's name a look of genuine concern came into Connie's watery blue eyes.

"I don't like the way the judge looks," old Connie said. "He just doesn't look well. He gets tired during meetings. I wish he'd take things a little easier. I feel the same way about Clark Griffith, too. They should realize they're getting a little old," counseled the octogenarian.

Griff's Request Under Consideration

We asked Connie something about the battle between the American and National Leagues over Griff's request for even more night games.

"Those National League fellows certainly were opposed to it, my gracious me," he ejaculated. "They voted eight to nothing to kick it out. That vote put it squarely up to the judge, and the judge said he'd rather go to a hospital and have a leg cut off than vote against Griff. But he said he had to do it, and that some day Griff would thank him for saving baseball by not letting night games get out of hand.

"This is a day time game," old Connie went on. "When this war is over, I'll bet we go back to seven night games a year. At least that's what I'm going to suggest, when the war's over."

We asked him if he planned to stay on the bench next year. He seemed a little surprised.

"Certainly. Why not?" he asked. "I feel just dandy. I've got something I want to do, too. I'm not really living for 'one more pennant,' as some of you boys have written. Pennants are hard to get. But if I can build up a team that is a contender, one that has a chance to win every time it goes on the field, I'll be satisfied. I kinda thought I might have it this year, and I would've if we hadn't lost Chapman, Brancato, McCoy and that young man Richmond, who played third base for us for a couple of weeks before going into the service."

Vander Meer Gets a Coveted Bouquet

Connie was very much impressed by the pitching of Johnny Vander Meer in the All-Star game. "Goodness, he's fast," he ejaculated. "And what a good time of evening that was to put him in the box. I guess if he had a little more control nobody could hit him."

He talked a little more about his friend, the judge, after that. And, with touching concern:

"There can't ever be another one like him," he said, simply. "I sometimes think he was sent to us from heaven. He saved our game, that's what he did."

Yankee Field To Be Scene Of Big Tilts

Transfer Designed To Make it Easier For Alumni to See Team Play—Bushnell

By the Associated Press

Princeton, N. J., July 8.—Princeton University will play its 1942 football games with Navy and Army in Yankee Stadium, New York, Asa Bushnell, acting director of athletics, announced today. Both games originally were scheduled for Palmer Stadium.

"The gas and tire shortage and the limitations of railroad travel to essential purposes together with the increasing length of the working week will make it impossible for any Princeton alumni who ordinarily come to Princeton for football games to follow their usual custom next fall," Bushnell said.

"By transferring the Navy and Army games to New York City, we are making it possible for alumni in that area at least to see the Princeton team play."

The schedule:

October 3, Williams; 10, Navy at New York; 17, Penn at Philadelphia; 24, Brown; 31, Harvard at Cambridge, Mass.

November 7, Dartmouth; 14, Yale; 21, Army at New York.

G. U. Eleven, Navy School Meet Nov. 7

Georgetown University has completed one of its toughest schedules with the addition of the United States Naval Preflight School at Chapel Hill, N. C., for a game here at Griffith Stadium November 7, raduate Manager Rome Schwagel announced yesterday.

The future aviators, coached by Lieut. Comdr. Jim Crowley, formerly the $35,000 head coach of Fordham, make the ninth game on the Hoyas' card which otherwise includes Temple, Mississippi, Manhattan, Auburn, Detroit, Boston College, North Carolina State and George Washington.

Schwagel also announced that a change in original plans will find Georgetown trying Saturday night games next season for the first time. Manhattan, making its first visit here in five years, and Auburn, annually one of the tougher teams of the South, will be G. U.'s opponents in the experimental games.

Lieut. T. M. Carruthers, formerly graduate manager of athletics at the University of Virginia and now assistant director of athletics at the preflight school at Chapel Hill, will meet the local press Tuesday at a luncheon at the Touchdown Club given by the Georgetown University Athletic Association.

Georgetown's complete 1942 schedule:

*September, 25, at Temple.
*October 2, Mississippi; *10, Manhattan; †*17, Auburn; 24, at Detroit; 31, at Boston College.
November 7, U. S. Pre-Flight School (Chapel Hill, N. C.); 14, North Carolina State; 21, George Washington.
*Night game. †Home-coming game.

Dodgers Defeat Milwaukee, 7 to 6, On 2 Home Runs

Milwaukee, July 8 (AP).—Home runs by Joe Medwick and Pete Reiser accounted for three runs tonight to give the National League champion Brooklyn Dodgers a 7-to-6 win over Milwaukee in an exhibition game.

The Brewers, current occupants of third place in the American Association, staged a two-run rally against Freddy Fitzsimmons in the ninth inning and had the tying run on second base when the game ended.

South Beats North in I. L. Star Game, 6-1

By International News Service

Buffalo, N. Y., July 8.—The International League joined the major leagues tonight in an all-out effort for the bat and ball fund which furnishes equipment to Army and Navy posts. The southern group of the league defeated a picked team from the northern end of the circuit, 6 to 1, before a crowd of 6500 fans.

The northern team, piloted by Al Vincent of Buffalo, was composed of players from Buffalo, Montreal, Toronto and Rochester. The southern team was picked from players from Jersey City, Newark, Baltimore and Syracuse. Bill Meyer managed the southern and winning outfit.

Bobby Coombs of Jersey City was the winning pitcher. Nick Strincevich of Toronto was credited with the defeat.

Stirnweiss and Majeski of Newark and Edwards of Baltimore led the attack of the southern team. Majeski and Edwards belted home runs, Edwards connecting in the third inning and Majeski clouting his in the fifth frame.

The losing, or northern team used as their pitchers, Strincevich, Kraus, Brandt and Surkont while the moundsmen for the winners were Coombs, Barrett and Maglie.

Disposal of equipment for the armed services will be 75 per cent for American forces and 25 per cent for Canadians. The game marked the first all-out effort of the International League for the patriotic causes.

Cleveland, July 8 (INS).—Tris Speaker, the former star outfielder and the manager of the Cleveland Indians, rushed to a Cleveland hospital yesterday suffering from pneumonia, was reported "much better" tonight.

DiMaggio, Calm Over Booings, Feels Ready to Shake Slump

Yankee Clipper, In Worst Season at Bat, Sees His All-Star Game Hitting as Portent

By Sid Feder

Associated Press Sports Writer

New York, July 8.—In the Bronx, they are specialists at the Bronx cheer, and Joseph Paul DiMaggio is learning all the varieties this season, because the citizens are letting him have the entire list every time he pokes his head out of a dugout.

This Bronx cheer, as you probably have heard, consists of placing the tongue between the lips and giving off with a sound that definitely is not a pat on the back.

Now Joe is the first to admit that DiMaggio is having his worst season at bat since he arrived on the big league scene, but he figures there's nothing wrong with him that a base knock or two wouldn't cure. And what's more, he wouldn't be at all surprised if the three singles he whacked in the two All-Star games just concluded didn't indicate that he may be coming out of it.

If that's the case, and he starts to rattle the American League's fences again as he's done for half a dozen years, the Yankees' lean slugger expects the fans will stop making those noises at him, because they make his ears ring and other things.

"You can't blame 'em too much for booing," Joe said as he sat in the blackout after the American Leaguers had whipped the Nationals Monday night, in the course of which he had nearly been blown off the field by the jeers every time the customers got a look at him.

"I suppose they're giving it to me because I'm not hitting like I usually do. And they don't like it. Well, a hit or two is going to fix that.

"And I felt good in there tonight. I got those two hits, and I just topped another one, but the old swing was there when I went after it. A couple more like that and everything is going to be all right, I guess."

He followed up the first two pokes with a smash off Rapid Robert Feller in the Cleveland game Tuesday night to drive in the American Leaguers' first run. It could be that it's just as he says, and he's about ready to spring away from the lowly .260 mark around which he's been hovering all season.

But there is considerable eyebrow-raising around the league over his calm attitude toward the booing fans, especially on the heels of the way Ted Williams took the same treatment up in Boston a couple of weeks ago. Why, the first thing you know, Ted could have Joe read right out of the union.

Future of All-Star Service Game Doubted

"Red Tape," Difficulty of Selling Game To Fans, Lack of Competition Cited

By Judson Bailey

Associated Press Sports Writer

Cleveland, July 8.—Success was stamped on baseball's All-Star Service spectacle today as the major league representatives and Army and Navy players scattered, but there was a question in everyone's mind whether another such game ever would be attempted.

Alva, Bradley, president of the Cleveland Indians and host to 62,094 fans last night at the Municipal Stadium, said the Army Emergency Relief Fund and the Navy Relief Society would be able to divide approximately $70,000 from the game.

"It was great," he enthused to Lieut. Gordon (Mickey) Cochrane, pilot of the service stars and to others today. "It was a tremendous task to put over, but we did, and we'd gladly try it again next year if we thought we could raise $70,000 for the Army and Navy."

But there was no secret that the "red tape" encountered from officials, the difficulty of selling the show to the fans and the fact that the game itself was no test—the American League All-Stars won 5-0—made it doubtful that the venture would be undertaken on the same pattern next year.

Don't Figure to Improve

It was apparent that the prominent baseball players who are now soldiers and sailors have been doing more than playing baseball since entering the armed services. Most of them have been glad when they could play once or twice a week.

Obviously they are not going to become better ball players during another year of training to become better warriors, and certainly they are unlikely to ever become a reasonable match for such an array of active major league stars as the American League was able to bring into the game this year.

Because of this the affair last night

Baseballs Live as Ever, Says Maker

By the Associated Press

New York, July 8.—While denying that baseballs used by the two major leagues this season had lost any of their resiliency, the Spalding Co. admitted in a statement released here today that it had been necessary to use scrap rubber in the cores since last January instead of the pure crude rubber formerly employed.

Players of both leagues have been protesting vehemently ever since the campaign began that the official ball was much less lively than in other years. The manufacturers' statement was in reply to their complaints.

"The core still features the cushion center of cork and rubber," said Spalding. "The only difference here is that crude rubber is no longer used in the center, having been replaced by high grade reclaimed rubber. Driving machine tests conclusively show that no distance has been lost by this change."

Closing 68 Whips Field By 2 Strokes

Defending Champion One of 2 to Shatter Easy Par; Hammond, Spokane, is Second

By the Associated Press

Spokane, July 8.—Corp. Marvin "Bud" Ward, in the Army now but still the "Mr. Big" of amateur golf, fired his latest challenge to the field today by winning medal honors in the Western Amateur championship, of which he is the two-time and defending titleholder.

When the chips were down and real action was necessary today he whipped in with a 68, four under par, to post a 36-hole total of 141. It gave him medal laurels by 2 strokes in the tournament he has dominated the last two years.

Ward, stationed with the Air Force at nearby Fort Wright, had carded a 73 on opening day.

He was one of the last to finish today but when he dropped an 8-foot putt on the final green he had battered the par 36, 36—72 Manito course into complete submission. Ward put together a pair of 34's and could just as well have lopped half a dozen strokes off those figures if his tee shots had behaved.

Hammond Second

The national as well as Western kingpin hit 3 drivers into the woods, had 2 bogies on the first nine and a double bogey 6 on the par 4, 428-yard twelfth.

Marsh Hammond, a local crackshot ran second to Ward in the qualifying race. With rounds of 72, 71—143.

Two topnotchers were bracketed at 145—Bruce McCormick of Los Angeles and Wilford Wehrle of Racine, Wis. The former is a former National Public Links champion and Wehrle has held the Western Amateur title and last year won the Mexican championship from a field that included Ward.

Among the other big-timers who qualified for tomorrow's match play rounds were Corpl. Pat Abbott of Los Angeles and Bill Welch of Houston, Tex., past and present National Public Links champions, respectively. Each had 76, 73—149.

Harry Givan of Seattle, leader at the halfway mark with a 69, soared to an 80 today but qualified nevertheless.

Scores of 167 tied for the last two of the 64 qualifying places.

Otto Rosand, Spokane, and Jack McIntyre, Tacoma, won the spots in the playoff and Guy Barnes, Spokane, was eliminated.

All of the prominent entries got past the qualifying trials with the exception of Art Doering, jr., of Chicago, who picked up on the twelfth green after a weak 41 for the first nine today.

Although the course appears easy only Ward and Hammond were able to remain below par.

Empire City Feature Won By Optimism

By the Associated Press

Empire City Race Track, N. Y., July 8.—With the advance favorite, La Reigh, scratched from the field of 2-year-old fillies, Mrs. H. C. Phipps' Optimism had little trouble outrunning five rivals in the twenty-eighth Demoiselle Stakes before another large crowd here today.

Johnny Longden, deprived of the chance to pilot La Reigh, thus was enabled to ride Optimism, and he guided the latter under the wire a length and a half clear of Christiana Stable's Bras. Marshall Field's Demolition was third, a length farther away.

Optimism, paying $11.40, picked up a purse of $5100 and was timed in 1:09 2-5 for the 5½ furlongs.

It was the first stakes score for Optimism. The victory gave her revenge over John A. Bell, jr.'s Hurriette, whom she trailed by a nose last April in Jamacia's Rosedale Stakes. Hurriette, starting topweight today under 119 pounds as compared to the winner's 111, raced as an entry with By Line in this Demoiselle renewal. The Max Hirsch-trained pair ruled favorite. Their defeat was the fifth setback in as many races for form players, who, until today, had put over 31 winners out of 56 races decided at the meeting.

The attendance was 14,588.

Longden had Optimism away like a bullet. The combination soon drew into a lead of several lengths, frustrating Demolition's challenge with the greatest of ease. Bras overtook Demolition as the stretch run got under way and cut down the winner's advantage, but was held safe by the daughter of Snark. Hurriette broke last and never had more than one horse headed.

Cincinnati Donates Home Plate to Scrap

Cincinnati, July 8 (AP).—Home plate at Crosley Field—specifically, the one that served during the Cincinnati Reds, 1936 season—has been donated to the Nation's scrap rubber heap.

Disposition of the relic was disclosed today by friends of the donor. It was retrieved from the field during the record Ohio River flood in 1937.

Notre Dame Eleven Card 11 Contests

By the Associated Press

South Bend, Ind., July 8.—An eleven-game schedule for the 1942 Notre Dame football team was announced today by university officials. Five of the games are to be played at home as part of the university's centennial celebration.

Nats Will Test Twilight Baseball Starting Next Friday

Chisox Here Tonight to Open Series

Griff to Experiment With Twilight Games; Another Night Tilt With Sox Tomorrow

The Chicago White Sox, viewed by the Nats as one hope in their campaign to escape from the cellar, move into Griffith Stadium tonight for the start of a three-game series.

The back-sliding White Sox are in sixth place only four games ahead of the Nats and for the last week have been slumping like candidates for last place. Manager Bucky Harris will start either Buck Newsom or Early Wynn in tonight's game, in an effort to reduce that margin. Game time will be at the new hour of 8:30 p. m.

The Nats' front office yesterday announced a revised schedule for the next two weeks, featuring six night games, a pair of double headers and the stadium's first twilight game.

Detroit will be the opposition in the first twilight affair, scheduled for Friday of next week. The starting time will be 7 o'clock, with the lights to be turned on thereafter at the discretion of the umpires.

"This is going to be in the nature of a test," said Clark Griffith yesterday. "If the public likes the twilight games better than the afternoon games, then we'll continue them."

The revised Griffith Stadium schedule for the next 11 days follows:

Tonight—Chicago, night game.
Friday—Chicago, night game.
Saturday—Chicago, day game.
Sunday—Cleveland, double header.
Monday, July 13—Cleveland, night.
Tuesday, July 14—Open date.
Wednesday, July 15—Detroit, night
Thursday, July 16—Detroit, night.
Friday, July 17—Detroit, twilight.
Saturday, July 18—St. Louis, day.
Sunday, July 19—St. Louis, double header.

Agreeing with Manager Bucky Harris that the Washington infield is responsible for most of the club's troubles, Griffith declared that he is frantically attempting to acquire new infield talent. He hopes to announce a deal within a few days, he stated.

Harris' infield problem has been heightened by the injury to Ellis Clary, diminutive second baseman, who has been out of the lineup with a bruised thumb. Clary hurt his thumb originally while tagging out a runner in St. Louis ten days ago, and a few days later he was hit by a pitched ball on the same member.

"Our pitching has been good enough and our outfield is all right," declared Griffith, "but our infield has been losing too many ball games for us. Our pitchers don't get a good break with that kind of support."

Not on Star Squad but Riddle's Happy

Boxers' Fund Gives $548.50 To Mrs. Drew

The Board of Control, Injured Boxers' Relief Fund yesterday voted to allot the sum of $548.50 to the widow and two young children of the late Preston Drew, who died of injuries resulting from a boxing match here.

Of the amount, $200 in cash will be paid in four monthly installments of $50 per month. The remainder will be used to meet bills as follows: funeral expenses, $210; hospital bill, $38.50, and physician's fee, $100.

The Injured Boxers' Relief Fund donation brought to $1102.28 the total so far raised for Mrs. Drew. Fans at Monday night's benefit card chipped in with $553.78. The fund will be swelled further when announcement is made of the money to be donated from Monday's fights as well as the checks turned over to Mrs. Drew by Marty Gallagher and Charlie Reynolds, referees on the card, who kicked in with their night's pay.

Kovacs Joins Army, Leaves His Racquets

By the Associated Press

Oakland, Calif., July 8.—Frank Kovacs, 21, the tennis clown, reported to the Army Tuesday for induction, taking along his golf clubs and a violin but leaving his tennis racquets behind.

"I'm afraid to take my tennis racquets," he jested. "Maybe I can find somebody in the Army to play the violin.

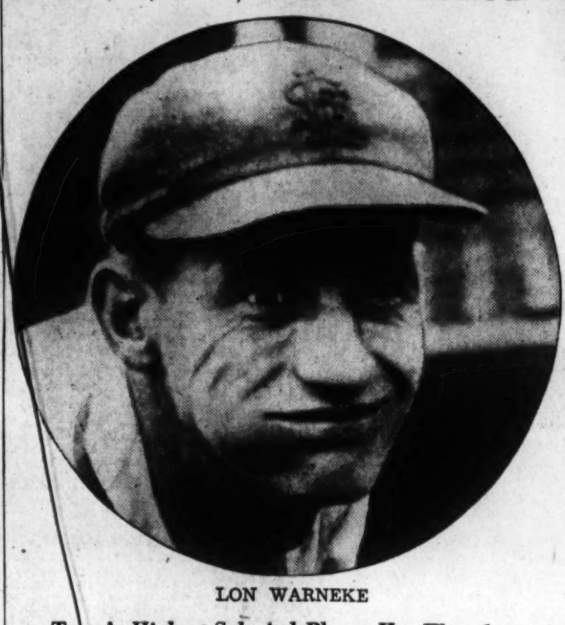
"It'll be good to be in a uniform. I felt like a dude walking around New York City in sport clothes. Everybody else was wearing some sort of uniform, even the street sweepers.

"The draft board gave me an extra week so I could play in the professional tournament at Forest Hill, but they can't get along without me any more."

He is married and has a daughter.

He registered for the first draft before his marriage.

Cards Sell Warneke to Cubs For $7,500; Fans Puzzled



LON WARNEKE

Team's Highest-Salaried Player Has Won 6, Lost 4; Officials Say He's Slipping

By the Associated Press

St. Louis, July 8.—Right in the midst of a desperate drive to overtake the Brooklyn Dodgers, the St. Louis Cardinals today sold lean Lon Warneke to the Chicago Cubs for the waiver price of $7,500 in a deal that puzzled baseball fans.

The 33-year-old veteran pitcher, last member of the famed Mudcats' Band of Cardinal Cutups, has not been fully effective this season. Late rounding into form, he has won six games and lost four, scarcely the record of a has-been.

Last year, Warneke won 17 games, including a no-hit triumph over Cincinnati, and lost only 9. His all-time major league total is 183 victories and 108 defeats.

He was proably the highest salaried man on the roster with a contract calling for about $15,000, and one critic was unkind enough to say the money might have influenced the decision to let him go.

However, officials of the team were positive in saying the deal was based solely on other considerations. They said Warneke was slipping and his home run ball was coming up with too frequent regularity.

"With a weak-hitting team, that home run ball is a dangerous thing," one official said. "Our other pitchers have been stingy with runs. We believe we have excellent starting replacements in John Beazley and Murray Dickson."

Warneke originally was the property of the Cardinal organization but he was released and broke into the major leagues with the Cubs in 1930. He had a brilliant year in 1932, winning 22 and losing only 6, and has never been a losing pitcher since then.

After the 1936 season, he was traded to the Cardinals.

His jaw jampacked with "chaw" tobacco, squinting as he leans forward to get his catcher's signal, Werneke is a colorful figure on the mound. He pitches with a free and easy side-arm motion that whips the ball to the corners of the plate.

Falkenburg Net Entry Stays Intact

By the Associated Press

Philadelphia, July 8.—The Falkenburg entry still remained unbroken today in the national interscholastic tennis championships.

Tom Falkenburg, elder of the two brothers of Actress Jinx, managed to edge out Fred Kovaleski of Hamtramck (Mich.) High School, 9—11, 6—4, 6—4, in a two-hour struggle to advance to the semifinals.

Tomorrow, while the Fairfax High of Hollywood (Calif.) representative engages top-seeded Frank Willett of Anniston, Ala., his younger brother, Bob Falkenburg, takes on Holmes Cathrall, Wilkes-Barre (Pa.) star, who attends Blair Academy.

Tom's match was the only singles played today, and at the end of the long battle, only one point separated the two contestants.

Tom and Bob went into the semifinals of the doubles play with a 6—2, 12—10 victory over Howard Gallaway and John Bucknell of Alexandria, Va.

Charles Fenwick Named Chairman Of Va. Ring Board

By the Associated Press

Richmond, Va., July 8.—Charles R. Fenwick, member of the House of Delegates from Arlington County, was named today as chairman of the State Boxing and Wrestling Commission, succeeding Senator Ralph H. Daughton of Norfolk.

The chairmanship is held every third year by each member of the three-man commission. The third member of the commission is D. Andrew Welch of Richmond, who is slated for the chairmanship next year.

Joe Bauers was reelected secretary at a meeting held in the commission office.

Mrs. Stokes and Pitt Win Mixed Golf Play

By Merrell W. Whittlesey

Mrs. Walter R. Stokes, the District and Maryland women's champion, and Harry G. Pitt, Manor's golf committee chairman, won gross honors in the Maryland State Mixed Two-Ball Tournament yesterday at Chevy Chase and all because their names were drawn together as blind partners last Sunday at Manor in a similar event.

Mrs. Stokes and Pitt played their home course in 73 strokes and won the intraclub affair three-days ago so they decided to try their luck as partners again and it was a wise choice for both. Playing selective drives and alternate shots they came to the eighteenth hole of the testing Chevy Chase layout with par for a record 70 but they took six and still turned in the best score of the day, a 3-over par 72.

The Hillendale Club in Baltimore supplies the low net winners in Mrs. M. Louise Bell, a former Middle Atlantic titlist, and Francis Carnes, an 8-handicapped amateur who put together a great back nine of 34 for a 73 and deducted 7 handicap shots for a net 66. Both members of the low net team received a $25 war savings bond.

Out in 39

Mrs. Bell and Carnes were out in 39, a fairly common score for the day among the better teams, but starting with the twelfth hole they poured in the birdies. A short putt by Mrs. Bell netted a birdie on the twelfth and after playing 13 and 14 in regulation 3-4 they followed with two great 3s on tough par 4 holes. On both Carnes hit the drives and Mrs. Bell wrapped wood shots within a foot of the pin, making Carnes' task of sinking the birdie putts a simple one.

Baltimoreans also copped second net honors in the field of 73 teams, a near all-time record gathering for the popular one-day affairs. Mr. and Mrs. Tighlman Marden, also of Hillendale, posted a 47 and 46 for 93 and minus 25 handicap strokes netted a 68.

Two teams tied for third low net honors at a net 69. The host club duo of Barness De Gruben and Don DeVeau, the latter one of the longest hitters in the District when he connects, barely beat the dusk with a 40-38, 78-9, 69. The handicap of all teams was half the combined total. They tied the Baltimore duo of Mrs. C. E. Richards and Mason Bartlett of Bonnie View, who had 79-10, 69.

Other Winners

Fifth low net winners and last team to collect the War Savings Stamps which went for prizes was Kenwood's Mrs. Rex Howard and Maury Fitzgerald, with 80-10, 70. Mrs. Howard, whose handicap has come down 10 shots in six weeks winning a Class B Cup Tournament,

And he can compare averages with a fellow pupil and teammate, Shortstop Johnny Pesky.

Phelan Severs 12-Year Job With Huskies to Coach Gaels

By Jim Hutcheson
Wide World Sports Writer

Seattle, July 8.—The bells of St. Mary's—but they haven't the do-re-me jingle they had in the days when Slip Madigan got a cut of the gate receipts—are calling James Merlin Phelan.

Irish Jim expects to close his 12-year Seattle domicile this week and head south for the one-time citadel of Pacific Coast non-conference football.

Time—and financial aches—have dimmed some of the St. Mary's gridiron lustre, but Phelan says the wartime prospect on the Moraga campus looks good to him.

Phelan is stepping into a unique coaching situation, but he's confident he isn't going to come out with wet feet. The St. Mary's campus is the site for the West's naval aviation "toughening" school. Phelan and the St. Mary's collegians will be bedmates of the infant Navy project, but you know how these military babies are. They're likely to push their bedmates right out into the cold in these times, and rightly enough.

Enrollment Way Down

Under the agreement that brought the Navy's "School of Hard Knocks" to the campus, with the prospect of thousands of cadets, St. Mary's enrollment was cut to a maximum of 200 men. That's a long drop from the former 750 or so in "The House That Slip Built." The 200 would be perfectly O. K. with Jim if he could pick 'em. But don't feel too sorry for him. He expects to have a hand in making sure of at least a football squad among the frosh enrolling this fall. He has about 40 holdover players from last year's varsity squad, but how good they are he doesn't know.

The Cadets will be taking over the St. Mary's football fields, but Phelan expects to have a new one for his players. The Gaels play all their games off the campus anyhow, either in San Francisco or on the road. After the Navy lads see the St. Mary's gridders embark on a three-week trip to Los Angeles-to New York-to Pittsburgh to play Loyola, Fordham and Duquesne, they may think they're in the wrong boat, and should have enlisted with the galloping Gaels to see the world.

At St. Mary's, Phelan points out, there is one head man. Since the coach is more interested in how much weight a full back carries than in how much a regent packs, Phelan thinks he'll like that setup.

Except for the four times his teams ran against Minnesota, without getting closer than smelling distance to a victory, Jim says he is leaving Washington without any regrets. He won his share of games in a tough league and took one championship eleven to the Rose Bowl (now who brought that up? Pitt 21, Washington 0), but he was operating under a handicap.

Class B Cup Play Draws Field of 60

The class B handicapped players of the District Women's Golf Association will play for the C. B. S. Cup tomorrow at Washington Golf and Country Club, an 18-hole medal play handicap event for those with handicaps of 19 through the maximum of 36.

Mrs. George Jani, of Congressional, will not defend her title as last year's winner has graduated into class A. Play will start in twosomes at 8:30 and continue off the first tee only through 11 o'clock.

O'Toole, Leone Wrestle to Rare Draw

Extra! Extra! The feature wrestling match at Turner's Arena last night between United States Coast Guardsman Tommy O'Toole and Michele Leone lasted 60 minutes—the time limit—to a draw. This is one of the few times this has happened in the history of the local theatricals—and merely emphasizes the fact that Washington must be crowded to the rafters when the athletes have to spend most of the night on the mat rather than retire to a local hostelry after a respectable interval of grunting.

From the outset, Leone was the fellow in the driver's seat and his tactics had O'Toole as disconfused as a juggler in a blackout. However, the plaudits of the fans seemed to inspire the sailor, who rallied with an offensive of his own after approximately 45 minutes of perspiring. From then until the final whistle Tommy stuck right with his assailant and his conduct bordered a bit on the mayhem side. In fact, after O'Toole had thrown Leone out of the enclosure one time that fellow turned upon the crowd with an impassioned plea for fair play which was as little heeded as the bleatings of an isolationist Congressman.

Finally, the clock ran out on the boys and the weary arbiter called it a draw. The fans expended their last bit of energy in hissing Leone as he trudged into the dressing room.

Maurice La Chappelle and John Melas of Florida, teamed in the semifinal to win a two-man team affair from Al Norcus and Angelo Savoldi, a villainous pair indeed. The referee ruled the latter duet unethical early in this act, and awarded the laurel to the heroes, who proudly scorned taking it the easy way—just as heroes should.

After refusing a hollow victory they came back strong to harry the naughty ones with adversity for some 16 minutes.

Hans Kampfer and Freddy Grobmier groaned to a strenuous draw, in which the Teutonic Hans was cast as the villain.

In the opener, Johnny Long, a newcomer from Texas, finally vanquished Joe Vanski, an evil fellow, with a series of flying scissors holds in 19 minutes after Vanski had all but pulled a gun on the cowboy. OSCAR ELDER.

Lupoba Lasts to Nose Out Saddling Bell at Hagerstown

Christmas Horse Gets Strong Ride

Jockey Hernandez Goes to Whip With Success; Few Fans Cash in on $15.80

By Walter Haight

A Staff Correspondent

Hagerstown, Md., July 8.—Under a strong ride by Jockey John Hernandez, B. F. Christmas' Lupoba lasted to score a nose victory over R. L. Pearson's Saddling Bell in the 6½ furlong Antietam Purse, featuring the Tuesday program here. Third money in the field of eight went to J. M. Rogers' Happy Slave.

Lupoba, a 3-year-old daughter of Jamestown and Kawa, had only a scattered backing and paid her backers a $15.80 mutuel. The favorite players were bounced around most of the afternoon and then went down swinging in the big race on Happy Slave.

Hernandez took Lupoba away head and head with Happy Slave and the two battled along in the early stages. Saddling Bell, steadied and close up, moved to Lupoba when Happy Slave weakened. The Christmas filly, saving ground, fought it out with rare courage, however, and Hernandez went to the whip right at the wire to save the verdict.

$87.30 Shot Wins

Although the program began with a victory by an odds-on favorite, K. D. Kolseth's Buckle Down, the fans had hardly collected the $3.90 mutual before fireworks began. Miss Margo Daly's Flaming Petee, trained by her mother, Mrs. M. V. Daly, got to the front in the second race and refused to be caught, winning at an $87.30 mutuel. Miss M. D. Heubeck's Eljelis, the favorite, had a very rough trip and finished second.

Flaming Petee, a 7-year-old former jumper, put the finishing touches on a $369.40 daily double.

The favorite players had their innings in the third even when Jockey Al Bocson rode Man at Arms to a well-earned victory ahead of Blue Gander and Westling. Man at Arms paid $5.70.

In the sixth race, the telephone numbers were again standard equipment. Mrs. A. Mazzeo's Streamer took the top soon after the start and made every post a winning one to pay $67.90. The favored Walter Light and High Arch were closest to the winner at the end of the mile and a sixteenth.

Two-dollar mutuels paid—MAN AT ARMS, $5.70, $3.70, $2.60; BLUE GANDER, $6.10, $4.60; WESTING, $3.30.

MAN AT ARMS, steadied while racing in first flight, came around BLUE GANDER to take command and drew out to win easily. BLUE GANDER had to be rushed early to take lead from WESTING, saved ground, but could not resist winner. WESTING, first away, saved ground and weakened gradually after being displaced. VESTALE closed some ground.

FOURTH RACE—Six and one-half furlongs. Purse, $600. For 3-year-olds and upward; claiming. Start good. Won driving; place same. Went to post at 4:01. Off at 4:02. Winner, J. V. Tisani's ch. f. (3) by Jamestown—Kawa. Trained by M. Duprey. Value to winner, $425; second, $100; third, $50; fourth, $25. Time, 1:21.

Two-dollar mutuels paid—LUPOBA, $15.80, $8.30, $4.80; SADDLING BELL, $5.90, $3.80; HAPPY SLAVE, $2.90.

LUPOBA saved ground while setting and forcing pace with HAPPY SLAVE and barely held SADDLING BELL safe in closing test. SADDLING BELL was well placed throughout, moved up menacingly and fought it out with good energy. HAPPY SLAVE set early pace and weakened gradually. LER-LIN tired some.

FIFTH RACE—One and one-sixteenth miles. Purse, $600. For 4-year-olds and upward; claiming. Start good. Won driving; place same. Went to post at 4:30½. Off at 4:32½. Winner, W. B. Goss' ch. g. Two-dollar mutuels paid—HOT MAN, $6.30, $3.10, $2.70; REAL BOY, $3.20, $2.60; BOB JUNIOR, $5.00.

HOT MAN, allowed to settle into stride and not hurried for half, improved position gradually thereafter and wore down REAL BOY in final strides. REAL BOY saved ground while setting pace and barely failed to last. BOB JUNIOR saved ground to improve position and hung in final drive. DURABLE was closest to pace early and tired.

SIXTH RACE—One and one-sixteenth miles. Purse, $600. For 4-year-olds and upward; claiming. Start good. Won driving; place same. Went to post at 5:00½. Off at 5:01½. Winner, Mrs. A. Mazzeo's ch. m. Two-dollar mutuels paid—STREAMER, $67.90, $19.40, $9.90; WALTER LIGHT, $5.00, $3.20; HIGH ARCH, $5.20.

STREAMER went to front in opening furlong, saved ground while setting pace, withstood bid of WALTER LIGHT and held on gamely. WALTER LIGHT, off alertly, was strongly handled while closest to pace and weakened in final test. HIGH ARCH saved ground moved up menacingly and then weakened. WIRE ME was well placed early and tired in final stages.

SEVENTH RACE—One and one-sixteenth miles. Purse, $600. For 3-year-olds; claiming. Start good. Won driving; place same. Went to post at 5:27½. Off at 5:29½. Winner, B. F. Christmas' ch. f. Two-dollar mutuels paid—PHANTOM LADY, $5.00, $3.70, $2.70; ECOWAY, $3.60, $3.03; SUN MAKER, $3.60.

PHANTOM LADY saved ground while setting pace, shook off SUN MAKER and came under strong handling to hold ECOWAY safe. The latter was well placed from start, moved into brief lead and was tiring at close. SUN MAKER, shuffled back early, came through on inside to vie to serious contention and weakened. BEGRUDGED was not a serious factor. MARKET PLACE was impeded at first turn.

EIGHTH RACE—One and one-eighth miles. Purse, $600. For 4-year-olds and upward; claiming. Start good. Won easily; place same. Went to post at 5:58½. Off at 5:59. Winner, Mrs. D. Chamblin's b. m. Two-dollar mutuels paid—ALAMODE, $18.50, $7.50, $4.80; TANGANYIKA, $11.30, $8.00; SIR TIME, $5.70.

ALAMODE, steadied in early stages, went to outside when placed to drive and wore down JACOTTE to win easily. TANGANYIKA was closest to pace of JACOTTE from start, was strongly handled, but could not reach winner. SIR TIME saved ground and had no excuses. JACOTTE was rushed setting pace and weakened. BONNIE VIXEN was listlessly handled and can do better.

Selections at Hagerstown

Dear Al:

Despite the fact that transportation problems are bound to have their effect on smaller track racing the Maryland Racing Commission has upped the expenses of the half-milers. The additions to their expenses total $1500 for the meeting. The stewards have been raised to $60 a day and already this has caused some jockeying for those lucrative posts. Although the commission rules only called for $50 for the steward representing the commission and $25 for the others, the tracks made up the difference and paid them all a half-hundred daily. The new orders have forced the paying of three extra vets as well as an increase in pay for the chief horse doctor. Another item is the hiring of an additional inspector. Then again the cost of the saliva tests has been raised. Add to these the fact that the "tote," photo finishes and electric starting gate have all been made compulsory and the profits of the small tracks are given quite a slicing. The Heloria and Eastview Stables, trained by J. L. Garthright, are being shipped to New York for racing. Frank Cronan came over from Charles Town where he is aiding in cleaning up work on the recent Victory meeting. Figures on the all-out war charities session will come out next week and little Charles Town will rank high in racing circles. The Washington Post was the only paper aside from the Racing Form, to give the meeting full coverage. There were plenty of daily double tickets sold on the hunch combination of Satchel in the first race and Suitcase in the second. Granny Cake racing for E. A. Nicodemus, is by Granville out of a mare named Beaten Biscuit. The dam is a full sister of Seabiscuit and Owner C. S. Howard, who owns the all-time money winner champion, once offered a sizable sum for the mare who never raced. Walter Haight, the colt, goes today. He seems to be far over his head and a buck across the board is all I can play on him. See you on the rail.

BILL.

First race—LINDEN GIRL breaks off the rail and has the speed to make the most of the position. Needs only the right ride. DR. POSEY won two at Charles Town and belongs close. FAIR FIND is a possible surprise.

Second race—BILLK, turned on the heat in his last and needs only to run back to that effort to win this. ROLLS ROUGH has speed and will be better suited if the mud comes up. SMART LAD and MY ONE are good ones on the reserve list.

Third race—LAURIDEN is a maiden with plenty of speed. Came here from Delaware Park and gets my call. LADY LONGWOETH won at the other town and will be close. ROUGH AMOS to take care of the others.

Fourth race—TERRY MAY has speed enough to take the top on these and will be hard to beat. MALVOIS is well placed here and will take it all if the top one makes mistakes. LIT UP and LITTLE SUZANNE are best of the also eligibles.

Fifth race—LIGHT OF MORN can win a race of this kind with the right handling. This one can get away in front and that's where I want to see her. INGOMAR has class and belongs close. SPECTATOR is a possible surprise.

Sixth race—BUTCHER BOY and SUMMER STOCK are a tight fit in this distance affair, and I prefer them in the order listed. BAR SHIP probably will be along in time to be dangerous.

Seventh race—MERRY MISTAKE if sent back, would be hard to handle at this distance. TRIPOD has closing ability and will be coming at the end. RECORD FLIGHT will be dangerous with slight improvement over that last.

Eighth race—PENDENCIERO has plenty of speed and may show the way to this gang. GOOD ODDS would be right there if taken off the reserve list. WORTHOWNING to take care of the others.

Best bet—TERRY MAY.

Geisel Due Out Of Hospital Soon

Chicago, July 8 (INS).—Harry Geisel, the American League umpire who suffered a brain concussion in the Yankee-White Sox game in Chicago June 27, will be released from the hospital, within a few days, his physician announced tonight.

Geisel was injured when he was knocked down in a collision with Yankee Pitcher Soud Chandler at third base.

Richmond Signs Hurler Nats Tried

Richmond, Va., July 8 (AP).—Eddie Mooers, owner of the Richmond club in the Piedmont League, has announced the signing of Montia Kennedy, 20-year-old left-handed pitching sensation of the Richmond semi-pro ranks.

Kennedy, who will join the Colts tomorrow when they return home to meet Norfolk's Tars, worked out with the Washington Senators before their exhibition game with Camp Lee here yesterday.

Arlington Donates $126,095 to Relief

Great Lakes, Ill., July 8 (AP).—In a brief presentation ceremony at Great Lakes Naval Training Station today, Treasurer Joseph J. Rice of the Arlington Park Jockey Club turned over to the Army and Navy Relief Funds a check for $126,095.50, the net proceeds from the July 4 Army and Navy racing program.

Rail Service Ban Ignored By Manager

New Jersey to Get First Racing in Quarter Century Despite Troubles

By the Associated Press

Camden, N. J., July 8.—The horses will run at the opening of the new $2,000,000 Garden State race track July 18 even if the only spectators are the judges.

"Regardless of how many people are in the stands," General Manager Walter H. Donovan promised tonight, "the horses will be on the track at 2:30 p. m. July 18, ready to start New Jersey's first racing meet in a half century."

Donovan's statement came after public transportation agencies had clamped a ban on special service to the park, six miles from Camden. Officials of Pennsylvania-Reading Seashore Lines said yesterday there will be no special trains to the park, or stops on scheduled runs, and State and township officials previously had refused applications for bus permits. The railroad announcement said the refusal was based on a general policy that special service to amusement centers is "out for the duration."

Trouble is no stranger to the park promoters. From the start, citizens' and church groups tried to block the project in the courts. Then the War Production Board held up materials priorities. Finally, construction was completed barely in time to escape a WPB ban on nonessential building.

And the end is not yet in sight. The Rev. Carl McIntire, pastor of the Bible Presbyterian Church in Collingswood and leader of the church antiracing faction, announced tonight that he will devote a one-hour radio broadcast Sunday evening to presentation of the evidence of political corruption involving the racetrack."

"We're going right on with our fight, stronger than ever," Mr. McIntire declared. "There will be some very interesting developments."

He described the railroad's refusal of service as "the only sensible position the railroad could take in view of the war," adding that "we wish the Government had taken the same attitude a long time ago."

Big Favorite Loses Goshen Stake Event

Goshen, N. Y., July 8 (AP).—The junior trotters in the $1500 Chester Stake featured the Grant Circle card at Goshen Raceway today, and resulted in the defeat of the top-heavy favorite Scarlet Hanover, winner of the Harriman Challenge Stake here last week.

The winner turned up in Austin Hanover, owned by T. G. Graney of Sparkill, N. Y., and driven by Fred Brooks. Bad manners at the post caused the downfall of the favorite.

Lew McKinney, from the Maine stable of Sullivan and Mawhinney, won the event for 15 class pacers, nosing out Dillmite in the final heat. Lew McKinney was driven by Wayne Smart, replacing the stable driver Franklin Safford, who drew a suspension yesterday for beating the barrier. Silver May of Montour Stable of Corsopolis, Pa., which won the 22 trot, her second win of the meeting.

Toronto, owned by Joseph Neville of Delaware, Ohio, and driven by Wayne Smart, won the 20 pacers for which he was a heavy favorite.

Recreation Golf Play Starts July 17

Qualifying for the D. C. Recreation Department's colored golf tournament will open with a qualifying round Friday, July 17, at the Langston course and the medal rounds will continue the following day, with match play starting on the 19th.

Isaac Brown, who won the tournament last year over a field of 54, will face a larger field this year, including out-of-town entries from Baltimore and White Sulphur Springs.

Virginia All-Star Game Attracted 2530

Lynchburg, Va., July 8 (AP).—Paid attendance at the East-West Virginia League All-Star game here Tuesday night was announced officially today at 2530.

The crowd, second largest to see a game in Municipal Stadium here, paid $1193.60.

The Lynchburg U. S. O. campaign, for the benefit of which the game was played, will receive approximately $1000 after traveling expenses of players, meals and lodging and a few other bills have been paid.

The four teams with 71 nets who just missed the prize list included low gross winners the last time a mixed tournament was held at Chevy Chase, Mrs. Betty Meckley and Volney Burnett, with a 75-4, 71. The inconsistencies of alternate shot golf was shown in the score of Baltimore's best known team, Mrs. T. E. Schluderberg and Spencer Overton, who required 84 strokes.

Mrs. Stokes, currently playing the finest golf of her career, and Pitt, whose record of three successive Chevy Chase Invitation triumphs from 1928-30 has never been threatened, included four birdies in their round, Pitt dropping 20-foot putts for two of them and Mrs. Stokes putting the other two. They used Pitt's tee shots 11 times and Mrs. Stokes' on 11 occasions.

The Manor team came to the eighteenth tee with four for a 70 and after Pitt pushed a drive on the thirteenth he chose to play Mrs. Stokes' drive and he hooked it into a trap short of the green. His partner then blasted 30 feet over the green and Pitt chipped back past the cup and Mrs. Stokes' bid for a five hit the cup but bounced out. The finishing holes were Jonahs to the winners as they also took four on the par three ninth when a trey would have meant a par 35.

Famed Tennis Clubs to Hold Round Robins

By the Associated Press

New York, July 8—Rather than abandon their annual tennis tournaments entirely because of wartime restrictions, two of the East's most famous clubs, Seabright and Southampton, have decided to stage round robin events involving a few top-ranking amateurs, it was revealed in a joint announcement today.

The Seabright club will hold its 55th annual tournament July 24, 25 and 26, with eight men's doubles teams engaging in a round robin to decide the championship. In the event of a tie, the team winning the most games or sets will be declared the victor.

The Meadow Club meet at Southampton from July 27 to August 1 will include both singles and doubles, both also on the round robin plan. The two clubs credit Sidney Wood, jr., the former Wimbleton champion, with having suggested the plan.

No Women's Play

At Southampton a dozen of the Nation's leading players will be divided into two groups for the singles. Each group will play a round robin within itself, with the winners in the two divisions meeting for the title.

Seabright's curtailed program makes no provision for a women's tournament this year.

Explaining that it is planned to include all top-ranking players who are in the East at this time, the club announced that among those who will be invited are the National Doubles champions, Ted Schroeder and Jack Kramer, Wood and Francis X. Shields of New York, Robert Odman of Washington, recent winner of the Eastern Collegiate championship, and Victor Seixas of Philadelphia and the University of North Carolina, frehman winner in the same tourney; Francesco Segura of Ecuador and Alejo Russel of Argentina, Rolando and Armondo Vega of Mexico, Charles T. Mattman and George Richards of New York, and William Talbert of Cincinnat, tenth ranking American player, and Ladislav Hecht, former Czech Davis Cupper.

Twilight Track Meet Tomorrow

A twilight track and field meet starting at 6 o'clock tomorrow at the Banneker Recreation Center will be sponsored by the D. C. Recreation Department for colored defense workers, Government employes and members of the services. Dedication exercises will start a half hour earlier.

Center Market Beats Cameo, Ties for Lead

Center Market went into a first-place tie with Heurich in The Post Industrial League yesterday by defeating Cameo Furniture, 2-0, in probably the best played game of the season.

The contest, a scoreless pitchers' battle for seven innings between Marketman Joe Wells and Cameo's Kenny Deavers, was decided on a freak play in the eighth. Hershey Cowan tripled to open the eighth but was trapped on Finn's grounder. Before Cowan was finally tagged out, however, Finn streaked all the way to third and scored later on a fly.

Market scored their second run in the ninth on another triple by Wesley Moore and a long fly to right by McNeil.

Those two triples were the only two extra base hits in the remarkably clean ball game on the North Ellipse. Deavers gave up five singles in addition to the pair of long knocks and Wells set the Furniture nine down with five one-basers.

Center Market and Heurich have now won three and lost none each in the second half of Post Industrial League play.

Its goal was not to settle the supremacy of baseball players in or out of the service, but to raise a big amount of money for war purposes and it did.

Bradley said the gross receipts were $143,571, of which $62,094 was for the purchase of war savings stamps. Attached to each ticket was a stub entitling the purchaser to exchange it for a $1 stamp at a Cleveland Bank before August 1. The Indians' executive said he knew of many persons who would not make the exchange and thus allow a part of this money also to revert to Army-Navy relief.

Federal taxes to be deducted from the gross amount to $7797 and the printing of tickets, hiring of ushers and police and other expenses were expected to approximate this same amount. Expenses of the major league players were paid for by the club and no passes were issued. In addition profits from the sale of score cards, amounting to $1475, and about $2000 from concessions will be added to the pool.

There was no question that the crowd got its money's worth. People still were talking today about the military pageant that preceded the game—the hundreds of marching soldiers, sailors, marines and Coast Guardsmen, the rolling parade of a mechanized battalion, the big tanks, the raising and lowering of the colors while lumps swelled in everyone's throat—and the one-minute test blackout in the middle of the game when 60,000 prectators sat without even a glint of a cigaret to be seen.

It was a great show and it might have been a great game. The soldiers and sailors sat around in the hotel lobby today and rehashed the contest among themselves, and Lieut. Cochrane mourned that he couldn't get just one hit when the bases were loaded in the first inning. But even he admitted "it would have taken a miracle to get a hit through that American League infield."

Naiman Beats Marines, 5-4; Errors Help

Naiman Photographers yesterday edged the Marine Corps Headquarters nine, 5-4, in a Departmental League game for their third consecutive league victory on the Ellipse.

The Marines outhit the victors, 10 to 9, and Pitcher Nelson really deserved a victory. His mates committed seven misplays.

It was a see-saw battle all the way. That important Naiman fifth run didn't come until the eighth when Martin singled, was sacrificed to second and scored when Toddy Lagos smashed out a solid hit.

Mrs. Lewis Is Clarendon Pin Leader

Even though outbowled by her partner, Al Wright, Mrs. Madge Lewis took most of the honors in the mixed doubles match at Clarendon Bowling Center last night when she combined two double-header strikes and two spares for a splendid 169 frame and 635 set, which with Wright's 892, made a total of 1327. The Clarendon twosome, Aline Fairchild and "Chick" Darr, posted a 1202 total. Mrs. Lewis' big game featured the evening.

Takoma

Dutch Sherbahn led the mixed doubles at Takoma Recreation with a 380 set, while Jimmie Harding topped the women with 337 and, with her partner, Blair Mullican, won a pair of games from Susie and Joe Kocsis.

Ice Palace

In the Ice Palace mixed league Ann Zepp and Mason Hungerford totaled 670 for set in taking a pair from the combination of Stevens-Haig. Lucile Youngs 135-372 and Ollie Clark's 343 gave them 715 for high set and a pair of games over the Leo Sorrells despite Leo's 128-353. The Bainbridges won all three from Audrey Chamberlain and Dutch Imirie and Mae and Ralph Diehl won the odd tilt from the Halls when Mrs. Diehl posted a 119 game and 335 set. Pat Smith had 139-354.

Temple

Bill Gartrell, of Temple Aces and the manager of Northeast Temple Alleys, led the summer league last night with 141-415 although he had to share honors on the game total with Mario Kidwell, of Kidwell Senators. The Senators had 628 for high team game with the Aces winning set honors after a 1809 pinfall.

Recreation

Miss Cavanaugh, Inspection, was best pinswoman in the Army Air Corps League at New Recreation with her 124 game and 329 set, with Kozel, Twirlers, and Lieut. Wright, Straight Shooters, taking honors for the men with respective totals of 138 and 342.

Greenway

Mike Petek's 136-371 not only led the Greenway mixed league but helped his Warmongers take three in a row from the Cookies and post high team set of 1540. "Pop" Absher's 128-352 led his Absher Construction boys and girls to a sweep over the Zombies and to high team game of 533.

Mrs. J. E. Brooks, Widow of Officer, Buried Today

Mrs. Theresa Brooks, 76, widow of Capt. John E. Brooks, U. S. A., retired, will be buried in Arlington National Cemetery at 3 p. m. today. She had lived in Washington for 60 years.

The Rev. Peyton Williams, of Christ Church in Georgetown, will officiate at funeral services at 2:30 p. m. at the Lee funeral home, fourth Street and Massachusetts Avenue Northeast.

For the past six years Mrs. Brooks had made her home with her daughter, Mrs. Henry R. Smalley and Col. Smalley, retired, at 1236 Thirty-third Street Northwest.

Born in Baltimore Mrs. Brooks came to Washington as a young girl and was married here in the parsonage of Epiphany Church. Capt. Brooks served in France for more than a year during World War I. He died in 1932.

Wal, Pard, Autry's Joined Air Force

Hollywood, July 8 (AP).—Gene Autry is swapping the expensive cowboy outfits he's worn exclusively for seven years for an Air Corps uniform. The singing star of Western movies proudly said tonight that he had been accepted as an enlisted man and instructed to report to Bolling Field, Washington, D. C., August 1. Since he's 32, he can't fly, so he's not certain what his duties will be.

Autry has worn nothing but cowboy garb since he entered movies seven years ago. He says he doesn't even own a business suit. The actor, married but childless, is completing his fifty-fourth picture.

Obituaries

Kathryn Lake, Wife of D. C. Showman, Dies

Child of a show family and herself a former showgirl, Mrs. Kathryn Lake, wife of Jimmy Lake, veteran of Washington burlesque, died yesterday after three months' illness at her home, 715 D Street Northeast.

The former Kathryn Donnelly was married to Lake in 1919 in Indianapolis, Ind., when their show was on the road. He was manager of the show; she was his soubrette, singing and dancing star. She left the stage soon after.

Born in Australia 39 years ago, Mrs. Lake came to this country when she was 10 with her family, the "Dancing Donnellys." Mother, father, son and daughter made up the troupe.

Her husband, who started in the show business as an Irish boy of 12, has made a name for himself during the past 25 years as a comedian and sports announcer. Well known in the New York and Chicago prize fight and wrestling rings as in the Capital, Lake announced the Joe Louis and Buddy Baer championship fight and others. He is 62.

Lake runs the Gayety Theater and is owner of Jimmy Lake's night club, 519 Ninth Street Northwest. Among the stars he helped get their start at the Gayety was Mickey Rooney, then 6 years old and, in Lake's words, "just a little genius." Mickey sang and danced, his father was the lead comedian and his mother was in the chorus on the same stage then, Lake remembers.

Services for Mrs. Lake tomorrow will be private, with arrangements by Chambers' funeral home, 517 Eleventh Street Southeast. Surviving besides her husband are her mother, Mrs. Elso Donnelly, and two children, Jimmy Lake, jr., and Elizabeth Lake.

Trains Pause At Start of Rites For Willard

By the Associated Press

Baltimore, July 8.—Nationally prominent railroad leaders, transportation officials and business executives attended funeral services today for Daniel Willard, chairman of the board of the Baltimore & Ohio Railroad.

The services were conducted at the Willard home by the Rev. W. W. Argow, pastor of the First Unitarian Church, of which Willard was a member. At 2 p. m., time of the funeral, all operations on the far flung lines of the B. & O. halted for one minute.

Among the friends and associates of Willard attending were Joseph B. Eastman, director of the Office of Defense Transportation; Clyde B. Aitchison, Interstate Commerce Commission chairman; Bernard M. Baruch, New York financier who succeeded Willard as chairman of the War Industries Board in the World War; Walter S. Gifford, American Telephone & Telegraph Co. president.

G. W. Bouvenizen, member of the firm of Kuhn Loeb and Co., New York; William M. Vemilye, vice president, National City Co.; Mayor Howard W. Jackson of Baltimore; Frank Kent, Baltimore Sun columnist; Dr. Isaiah Bowman, president of Johns Hopkins University; Carlyle Barton, who succeeded Willard as chairman of the Johns Hopkins board of trustees; B. Howell Griswold, member of the board.

Other railroad executives included Roy B. White, president of the B. & O.; John J. Pelley, president of the Association of American Railroads; M W. Clement, president of the Pennsylvania Railroad; W. J. Jenks, president of the Norfolk and Western Railroad; C W. Brown, president of the Western Maryland Raiload; E. W. Scheer, president of the Reading Railroad; R W. Brown, president of the Lehigh Valley Railroad; and Howard Bruce, J. Hamilton Cheston, Robert Garrett, John R. Morron, Albert A. Sprague and John C. Traphagen, members of the B. & O board

Burial will be Friday morning in the family plot at Hartland, Vt.

Funeral Rites For Mrs. Jeffries Set for Today

Rites for Mrs. Sallie Eskridge Jeffries, wife of Dr. Joseph A. Jeffries, Washington physician, will be at Gawler's funeral home, 1750 Pennsylvania Avenue Northwest, today at 3:30 p. m. Dr. Irving W. Ketchum, of the Western Presbyterian Church, will officiate.

Born in Fauquier County, Va., in 1883, Mrs. Jeffries had lived in Washington since her marriage to Dr. Jeffries in 1910. She was educated in private schools. She died Tuesday at Emergency Hospital after several months illness.

Surviving are Dr. Jeffries, 1231 G Street Northwest; two brothers, Joseph Eskridge of Washington and John Eskridge of Bistersburg, Va.; a niece, Zola Orndorf, and a nephew, Sergt. Guy S. Thompson both of Washington, and three nephews, J. Ford Thompson, Kenneth and Selvin Eskridge, all of Fauquier County.

REFIK SAYDAM,

premier of Turkey, died yesterday in Ankara after a heart attack. He was 61 years old

Refik Saydam, Turk Premier, Dies in Ankara

By the Associated Press

Ankara, Turkey, July 8.—Premier Refik Saydam, 61, died early today following a heart attack.

A semiofficial announcement said Dr. Ahmet Fikri Tuzer, Minister of Interior, would serve as acting Premier until a new appointment could be made.

Saydam had been Premier of Turkey from January, 1939, and his policies kept Turkish soil inviolate while most of her close neighbors were drawn into the war.

Shortly after assuming office, Saydam said:

"No act capable of putting in peril the life or well-being of the Turkish nation will come first from your government unless our good will, our sincere and friendly neutrality toward all states should be directly or indirectly the object of an attempt at violation."

At the same time he declared Turkey's army was capable of warding off any danger or aggression.

He was one of the signers of the Turkish mutual assistance pact with France and Britain in October, 1939.

But Turkey, although regarding herself as a "non-beligerent ally" of Britain and France, did not enter the war when Italy declared war on the Allies. The Premier explained that Turkey's entrance in the war at that time would have been regarded as a hostile act by Russia, then bound by her non-aggression treaty with Germany.

A former medical attendant to the late Kemal Ataturk, first President of Turkey, Saydam, later became Minister of Health.

It was in that capacity that he visited the United States in 1929. Under the auspices of the Rockefeller Foundation, he spent two months studying health and social service institutions. During that visit he was entertained at the White House by Herbert Hoover, then President.

Under Saydam's guidance Turkey established a modern organization of public health and welfare services.

During the difficult diplomatic struggle in Ankara preceding and following Germany's move into the Balkans, the Premier was under constant strain. The Germans attached so much importance to Turkey's attitude that Franz von Papen, their ace "trouble shooter," was sent there as ambassador.

Col. William J. Donovan conferred with Saydam in February, 1941, while visiting the Mediterranean Basin as an observer for President Roosevelt.

Mr. Henderson Dies; Builder And Architect

John Henderson, retired architect and builder and member of the Association of Oldest Inhabitants, died yesterday at the age of 92 at his home, 5619 Colorado Avenue Northwest. He had been confined to his bed since he suffered a fall about a year and a half ago.

HENDERSON

Born in Baltimore September 29, 1850, Mr. Henderson had lived in Washington since 1852. He took over the building business of his father, the late John Henderson, retiring from his duties there about 20 years ago. For many years he was building inspector for the Board of Fire Underwriters of the District of Columbia. He also taught manual training in the District schools.

For about 20 years Mr. Henderson was affiliated with the Washington Permanent Building Association, serving at various times as appraiser, estimator, director and vice president. He was a past master of the New Jerusalem Masonic Lodge No. 9 and a member of the National City Christian Church.

Mr. Henderson was married twice. After the death of his first wife, the former Belle Mannakee, he married her

25-Billion Gap Seen in Excess Buying Power

By the Associated Press

Charlottesville, Va., July 8.—In wartime the principal rule of personal finance is to save—"you can put it in a sock, in Government bonds, or pay off your debts"—and any attempt to increase real income by increasing monetary income is "doomed to failure in advance," Thomas C. Blaisdell, jr., War Production Board official, said today.

In an address at the University of Virginia's Institute of Public Affairs, Blaisdell declared that increases in wages "can't be real except at the expense of somebody else."

"The family has more money, but it can't have more goods," he said. "Only the poorest can have more, and they only because heavier calls are made on them. This is the reverse of the situation in peacetime, when one can increase his real income by increasing his productivity. In wartime all increased productivity has to go into production of war material."

Taxes Seen Solution

Blaisdell, of the WPB's planning committee, declared that if people don't spend, prices don't rise. "The first aim of Government fiscal policy must be," he added, "to reduce the purchasing power in the hands of the public to a point where there is little inflationary pressure. The only sure way is by taxation."

Placing a monetary value of 150 billion dollars on "the total energy which we are all going to lay out during 1942," Blaisdell said payments for food, clothing and shelter, for recreation, for household goods, for medical services, for travel, in general for the good life, would amount to some 75 billion dollars for the year. By comparison, the Government, he said, will spend only about 50 billions for the prosecution of the war and of that 50 billions some 10 per cent will be for food, clothing and shelter for soldiers and sailors. The 45 billions will be for fighting material, with an additional 5 billion dollars of Federal expenditure for other activities of Government.

State and local governments, Blaisdell continued, will make outlays of some 8 billions and some 15 billions in expenditures by private business for construction, maintenance, inventories and private residences.

25 Billion Gap Seen

There will be "an excess of consumer purchasing power over the available supply of consumer goods and services (measured in 1941 prices) of about 15 billion," he said, and a similar excess of business purchasing power of 10 billion dollars.

This 25 billion dollar gap, which must be closed in 1942 and will be greater in 1943, can be closed either through rising prices or increases in taxes and savings, Blaisdell asserted.

Only through "wise use of the real things which stand behind governmental budgets, and through the wise use of the monetary machinery related to the budget can we finance the war without wrecking the State," Blaisdell said.

Richard M. Bissell, jr., of the Bureau of Foreign and Domestic Commerce, discussed the economic consequences of war finance. Representative Thomse H. Eliot of Massachusetts presided over the discussion of war finances and members of the panel included Orville S. Poland, staff assistant to the Secretary of the Treasury, and Dr. Tipton R. Snavely, professor of economics, University of Virginia.

War Casualty Risks Covered In New Policy

By the Associated Press

New York, July 8—The New York State insurance department has approved in principle a war injury policy for civilians sponsored by the Health and Accident Underwriters Conference. Individuals in the United States and Canada would be insured against loss of life or limb and expense resulting from enemy attacks.

The policy would provide $5000 for death or major dismemberment and up to $500 for hospital and other care. The suggested premium would be $5 a year.

The Health and Accident Underwriters Conference consists of a group of casualty insurance companies in the Middle West.

The National Bureau of Casualty and Security Underwriters announced that air-raid wardens and others performing voluntary war services could purchase casualty insurance covering them against personal liabilities insurred in line of duty for as little as $3 when written in the same policy with other war risks and $5 when written alone.

On July 1 the Government-sponsored War Damage Corporation began accepting binders insuring property against loss by enemy action.

Drop Indicated In Cotton Crop

Based on yields experienced last year and acreage abandonment averages from 1931 through 1940, a cotton crop of about 10,915,000 bales was indicated yesterday.

This figure of probable production was based upon the Agriculture Department report that the cotton acreage in cultivation July 1 totaled 24,005,000 acres, but the department itself made no forecast as it is prohibited by law from announcing such estimates until later in the season.

The department said that if the persentage abandoned equaled the 10-year average, the harvested acreage would be about 23,525,000.

The average yield last year was 232 pounds an acre and the total production was 10,744,000 bales.

Senate Action On Parity Bill Booms Wheat

By the Associated Press

Chicago, July 8.—Farmers throughout the wheat belt came in from their fields today to hear the news that wheat prices had taken the sharpest jump in weeks.

Chicago wheat futures advanced almost 5 cents a bushel at one time, contracts for July delivery reaching $1.21¼, highest since late in May. September wheat sold up to $1.24 and December to $1.27⅝. A year ago July wheat closed at $1.06¼.

Some Profit Taking

Late profit taking and sales to hedge new wheat coming to market now in a steady stream reduced these gains somewhat but closing prices were 2¼ to 3½ cents higher than yesterday, with July at $1.20. This represented a gain of almost 5 cents since the 1942 low was established only two days ago but the price was still about 15 cents below the five-year peak established last January.

Large scale mill buying and flour business, stimulated partly by Senate passage of legislation which would raise Government loan rates on basic commodities from 85 per cent of parity to full parity, prompted the upturn in wheat.

Prices have been fluctuating below Government loan rates, equivalent to $1.32 a bushel for No. 2 grades in Chicago.

Parity Rates Higher

Under the Senate bill, traders said the rates here would figure around $1.52, or 32 cents above the July wheat close.

While traders expressed belief farmers intend to store all the new wheat they can find space for under present rates, the higher rate, they said, might stimulate increased effort to find more room and at the same time check sales of "free" grain. With the new crop now being harvested expected to bring total United States supplies to more than 1,500,000,000 bushels, or more than double annual domestic requirements, wheat already is being piled on the ground in the Southwestern harvest belt.

Flour business last week and today was the best in months and prices were advanced 15 to 20 cents a barrel in many markets today.

Late Earnings Statements

Marine Midland Corporation and its constituent banks and trust companies and other affiliates reported today consolidated net operating earnings, after taxes, of $723,612, of 12 cents a share for the second quarter of this year. This compared with $969,897, of 17 cents a share, in the corresponding 1941 period. For the first six months earnings were shown as $1,428,229, equal to 24 cents a share, against $1,785,779, or 31 cents, in the like period a year ago.

Rayonier Incorporated reports $3,762,970 consolidated net profit for the fiscal year ended April 30, a decrease from the $4,005,871 of the preceding year. Earnings on common stock, after preferred dividends, amounted to $2.60 a share compared with $2.86 a share in the preceding year on the 963,871 outstanding shares.

International Shoe Co. reported for six months ended May 31 consolidated net profit of $3,631,535, equal to $1.08 a share on the common stock. This compared with $2,750,812, or 82 cents a common share, in the like months of 1941.

New Fluorescent Light Circuit Saves Metal

Cleveland, July 8 (AP).—A new circuit for fluorescent lighting, designed to conserve vast quantities of critical metals, was announced here tonight. It requires only one control unit for four 100-watt lamps instead of the two ballasts needed at present.

General Electric Co. said the invention would mean nearly a 50 per cent saving in such materials as copper, steel and aluminum. The invention was credited to J. H. Campbell, a young lighting ingineer.

SEC Rules on Fees For Over-Counter Sales

Philadelphia, July 8 (AP).—The Securities and Exchange Commission today adopted a rule permitting brokers to earn more than the present 1 per cent on over-the-counter sales of admitted securities, provided they stay within the minimum prescribed by the particular exchange handling the transaction.

Where securities that are not admitted to a national exchange change hands, the broker must stay within the minimum of the exchange in the same city as his principal office.

Stocks Stage Broadest Rise Since January In Heavy Buying on Fresh Hint of Inflation

New York, July 8.—The stock market today achieved its broadest advance since early January and easily outstripped its best performance since the start of the summer bull swing in late May.

Showing real momentum in the late proceedings after the steels began a vigorous climb, the rise was good for final gains ranging from fractions to around 3 points. The buoyant close was in sharp contrast with the droopy tone of the first hour. Dealings expanded on the upturn, totaling for the five hours 576,860 shares, largest since March 6 and compared with yesterday's 332,440.

Observers in stock exchange circles reported that a fair amount of the day's buying was attributable to fresh scents of inflation, arising in this instance from a steep jump in grain prices in the wake of Senate passage of the Bankhead-Russell parity loan bill.

But in the case of steel stocks, the outstanding leaders, buyers apparently were inspired by an anti-inflation element—by President Roosevelt's Tuesday press conference remarks which were interpreted by some as indicating he was opposed to a general wage increase in the steel industry.

The war news background became more favorable for markets on the Moscow report that the Red army had destroyed German bridgeheads on the east bank of the Don River and was halting further Nazi attempts to cross the stream.

A rise of .8 of a point in the Associated Press 60-stock average carried the composite to the highest level since March. It was the best advance since January 2 with the day's closing figure 36.9.

Bethlehem Steel carried a 3-point gain to the close and U. S. Steel finished 2¼ higher. Other notably strong issues were General Motors (at a new 1942 high), Chrysler, Youngstown Sheet, Douglas, American Smelting, Anaconda, American Can, Dow Chemical, du Pont, Allied Chemical, Standard Oil (N. J.) and Santa Fe.

Bonds were generally improved. Chicago wheat ended 2¼ to 3½ cents a bushel higher and corn moved up ⅝ to 1 cent. Hogs were 15 cents down. Cotton futures fell 25 to 50 cents a bale.

Higher in the Curb were Humble Oil, International Petroleum, McWilliams Dredging, N. J. Zinc and Sherwin-Williams. Transfers here were 75,780 shares against 50,250 Tuesday.

OPA Seeks to Kill Rise in Chicago Streetcar Fare

Chicago, July 8 (AP).—Setting a precedent with respect to local transit fares, the Office of Price Administration today petitioned the Illinois Commerce Commission for authority to intervene in a Chicago surface lines case for the purpose of restoring Chicago streetcar fares to a 7-cent level.

Under a temporary commission order of April 10, the fare was increased to 8 cents, pending final action on a plea for a permanent charge at that level.

Although public utility rates were not included in OPA's recent price-ceiling orders, Administrator Leon Henderson's petition for intervention said it was the policy of the Government to hold living costs to the March, 1942, basis and that any increase in surface line fares would be inconsistent with the effort in other fields to stabilize the cost of living.

The company made no statement.

Further Decline Noted in Gasoline, Fuel Oil Stocks

New York, July 7 (AP).—Further declines in United States stores of gasoline and heavy fuel oil were reported today by the American Petroleum Institute for the week ended July 4.

Stocks of finished and unfinished gasoline at the end of the week totaled 87,014,000 barrels, down 1,382,000 from a revised total of 88,395,000 the previous week.

Residual fuel oil supplies were down 401,000 barrels at 76,903,000, while stored gas oil and distillates (light fuels) rose 669,000 barrels to a total of 33,520,000.

Crude oil production averaged 3,297,150 barrels daily for the week, a drop of 422,300 barrels from the average of the week before. Refineries operated at 75.8 per cent of capacity, indicating a crude run averaging 3,551,000 barrels daily, compared with 76.5 per cent and 3,581,000 barrels in the previous week. Gasoline production for the week was estimated at 10,959,000 barrels compared with 10,713,000 barrels the week before.

'Shortage' Scare Cuts Down Paper Sales, Leads to Huge Surplus in Wastepaper

Scrimping on paper is no longer a measure of patriotism. While the "get in the scrap" generals at the War Production Board are urging the home-front troops to scout the attic for rubber and metal, word comes that the big paper drive has, for the time being at least, more than met its goal.

The paper-salvag edrive was so successful, says Paper Expert W. Leroy Neubrech, that "not only were (paper) board mills able to step up operations to capacity, but by the spring of 1942, when demand for board commenced to decline, they had accumulated large wastepaper surpluses."

The collection of wastepaper probably will continue, but it is not necessary, for the paper-using business house or housewife "to regard the legitimate use of paper as "an aid to the enemy," says the Department of Commerce specialist.

"True, neither paper nor any other material should be indi

OFFICIAL NOTICES 5

RICHMOND B. KEECH, JAMES W. LAUDERDALE and STANLEY DeNEALE, Attorneys for Petitioners.

IN THE DISTRICT COURT OF THE United States for the District of Columbia. In re condemnation for the acquisition of land for the widening and extension of Nichols Avenue from Chesapeake Street southerly to Joliet Street, S.W., for First Street from South Capitol Street to Joliet Street, S.W., for Second Street between Brandywine Place and Chesapeake Street, S.W., and for excess condemnation, in the District of Columbia. District Court No. 3812. Notice and order of publication. Notice is hereby given that the Commissioners of the District of Columbia (pursuant to a certain provision of the Act of Congress, approved March 4, 1913, entitled "An act making appropriations for the expenses of the government of the District of Columbia, for the fiscal year ending June thirtieth, nineteen hundred and fourteen, and for other purposes," whereby they are authorized to open, extend, or widen any street, avenue, road or highway so as to conform with the plan of the permanent system of highways in that portion of the District of Columbia outside of the cities of Washington and Georgetown adopted under the Act of Congress approved March 2, 1893, as amended by the Acts of Congress approved June 28, 1898, and May 28, 1926, respectively, by condemnation under the provisions of subchapter one of Chapter XV of the Code of Law for the District of Columbia and pursuant to the provisions of the Act of Congress approved April 11, 1935, entitled "An Act to provide for the acquisition of land in the District of Columbia in excess of that required for public projects and improvements, and for other purposes"), have filed a petition in this Court praying the condemnation of the land necessary for the widening and extension of Nichols Avenue from Chesapeake Street southerly to Joliet Street, S.W., for First Street from South Capitol Street to Joliet Street, S.W., for Second Street between Brandywine Place and Chesapeake Street, S.W., and additional land adjacent thereto, in the District of Columbia, as shown on a map or plat filed with the said petition, as a part thereof and praying also that this Court empanel a jury in accordance with the law provided for in such cases to assess the damages each owner of land to be taken may sustain by reason of the widening and extension of Nichols Avenue from Chesapeake Street southerly to Joliet Street, S.W., for First Street from South Capitol Street to Joliet Street, S.W., for Second Street between Brandywine Place and Chesapeake Street, S.W., and additional land adjacent thereto, in the District of Columbia, and to assess the benefits resulting therefrom, plus all or any part of the costs and expenses of said proceedings, upon any lands which the jury may find will be benefited, as provided for in and by the aforesaid Act of Congress approved May 28, 1926, it is by the Court this 30th day of June, 1942, ORDERED that all persons having any interest in these proceedings be and they are hereby warned and commanded to appear in this Court on or before the 8TH DAY OF SEPTEMBER, 1942, at 10 o'clock A. M., and continue in attendance until the Court shall have made its final order ratifying and confirming the award of damages and the assessment of benefits of the jury to be empaneled and sworn herein: and it is further ORDERED that a copy of this notice and order be published twice a week for two successive weeks in the Washington Evening Star, The Washington Post and the Washington Times-Herald, newspapers published in the said District, commencing at least twenty days before the said 8TH DAY OF SEPTEMBER, 1942. It is further ORDERED that a copy of this notice and order be served by the United States Marshal, or his deputies, upon such of the owners of the fee of the land to be condemned herein as may be found by the said Marshal or his deputies within the District of Columbia, and upon the tenants and occupants of the same, before the said 8TH DAY OF SEPTEMBER, 1942. O. R. LUHRING, Justice. A true copy. Test: (Seal.) CHARLES E. STEWART, Clerk. By H. B. DERTZBAUGH, Deputy Clerk. 9,10,16,17

Les Paul has toted his guitar far and wide in the entertainment world since he left Waukesha, Wis., with a $4.95 Sears Roebuck model. He broke into radio at the age of 14 and today, at 25, Les is headlined on Ben Bernie's new daily musical series, which you hear over WJSV every weekday at 5:45 p. m.

Recognized as one of America's electric guitar virtuosos, Les' years of experience with a "git-box" may be divided roughly into two parts—the hillbilly era and the hot lick era. After playing at many small stations, Les went to St. Louis' KMOX, and from there climbed the ladder in a dozen different hillbilly and barn dance shows over various stations. During the Chicago World's Fair Les was at WBBM-CBS with his Original Ozark Apple Knockers.

When the swing craze swept the Nation the hillbilly star decided that here was something offering endless possibilities for an original musician. Forming a trio with another guitarist, Jimmy Atkins, and a bass fiddler, Ernie Newton, Les soon won a three-year engagement with Fred Waring's orchestra.

Last year he returned to Columbia in Chicago and was signed for Ben Bernie's new musical show sponsored by Wrigley and now he has pitched enthusiastically into the "Old Maestro's" new series.

Les has settled down in Chicago with his family, which comprises his wife, Virginia, and his one-year-old son, "Rusty."

Contract Bridge

Common sense is featured in the answers to today's problems.

1. Sitting South, you hold these cards:

♠AQ4
♡853
◇AQ42
♣A73

The bidding has gone:

East	South	West	North
1 NT	?	—	—

What call do you make?

2. Sitting South, you hold these cards:

♡936
◇J62
♣87

The bidding has gone:

West	North	East	South
1 ♠	Double	Pass	?

What call do you make?

Answers to Quiz

1. The only action South could consider with this holding is a double. As a double of one no trump is for penalty, North probably will pass, and if he is weak, declarer may make his contract with one or two overtricks. Although South has four high-card tricks, he may not even be able to win four tricks, so his best call is a pass.

2. When the doubler's partner holds no unbid four-card or longer suit, he mentions his lowest-ranking three-card suit. South's proper call is two diamonds.

BOOMVILLE SURELY IS INDEBTED TO YOU! YOU'VE WORKED LIKE A SLAVE! BUT I HEAR YOUR HOTEL IS A TOTAL WRECK··TOO BAD!
AFTER WE FINISH HERE YOU'D BETTER TRY TO GET SOME SLEEP··· SOMEWHERE!
WHAT···? QUICK! SOMEBODY CATCH HER!

MICKEY FINN — All Checked! — BY LANK LEONARD

THAT'S WHERE THE LOCKER MAN LIVES, EH, FINN?
YES, MR. THORNE — IF WE WAIT UP AT THE CORNER WE'LL PROBABLY SEE HIM GET OFF THE EVERGREEN CLUB'S CADDY BUS!
THAT'S HIM!
GOOD! NOW WHEN IT'S DARK I'LL TAKE A LOOK AT THE OWNER OF THE PET SHOP!
WHEN I WENT IN BEFORE, I PRETENTED TO BE INTERESTED IN BUYING A PARROT. HE WANTED FIVE BUCKS FOR IT AND I SAID I'D THINK IT OVER!
BUY IT! HERE'S THE $5! I'LL SIZE HIM UP THROUGH THE WINDOW WHILE HE'S WAITING ON YOU!
I'LL TAKE HIM!
VERY GOOD, SIR!

MR. AND MRS. — Surest Thing You Know — BY ARTHUR FOLWELL and ELLISON HOOVER

AS A RULE I HATE THE ODOR OF TOBACCO BUT THAT MAN'S PIPE REALLY SMELLS GOOD NOT BAD
WHAT ARE YOU SMOKING, JOE GREEN? IT SMELLS TERRIBLE
PIPE. THOUGHT YOU LIKED PIPES
THEN WHY CAN'T YOU GET SOME GOOD TOBACCO, LIKE THAT MAN ON THE STREET HAD?
HE WAS PROBABLY SMOKING RAGWEED
THEN WHY DON'T YOU SMOKE RAGWEED?
ALWAYS THE WAY. IT'S SOME OTHER MAN'S PIPE THAT SMELLS GOOD TO A WOMAN — NEVER HER HUSBAND'S

GENTLEMEN, I'LL BE GREATLY HONORED TO LEAD A TASK-FORCE OF HEROES, ALL MEDAL MEN. BUT WHAT—YOUR EXACT MISSION? I'M COMING TO THAT
IT'S TIME TO TURN THE SABOTAGE TABLES ON THE AXIS. UP TO NOW YOU'VE FOUGHT THEIR SPY RINGS IN DEFENSIVE BATTLES—
BUT NOW IT'S OPEN WAR. PEACETIME RULES ARE OFF. YOU'RE ORDERED TO STRIKE JAPAN FROM WITHIN!
THAT'S GREAT NEWS, ADMIRAL. BUT HOW?
IT'S UP TO YOU, WINSLOW, TO DETERMINE HOW — AND TO DO IT!

BIG CHIEF WAHOO — BY SAUNDERS AND WOGGON

OKAY, SISTER! DROP THAT PURSE AND YOU WON'T GET HURT!!
ALL RIGHT! HERE IT IS--
I ALWAYS WONDERED WHY I CARRIED THAT JUNK AROUND IN MY PURSE--NOW I'LL TAKE THE GUN---!
WHY--! THIS IS NOTHING BUT A BICYCLE WRENCH--!
SURE! SO WHAT? I LOSE AGAIN, AS USUAL!-- WELL! AIN'T YOU GONNA YELP FOR A COP?!
